CHICAGO WINS FIGHT TO SAVE LIVES OF BABIES

Brings Science Into Parents' Homes.

This week brings the fifth anniversary of Dr. Herman Niels Bundesen's service as Chicago's commissioner of health. That anniversary he observed yesterday by taking two and a half hours off and talking via The Tribune to the babies of Chicago and their parents. He spoke more in thankfulness than in pride, but what he said should make Chicago a prouder city this morning.

His speech he was compact, in manner vehement, and in attitude toward his community intensely solicitous. He released—or rather fired off—two dogmas on policy. The first was: "This department doesn't bluff or be bluffed worth a darn." The other: "A great city's health commissioner should be doing something besides nailing a red flag on a citizen's door and saying 'you destroy do something.'"

The commissioner's principal theme was Chicago's babies one year old or less. He gave six reasons for making his anniversary message to the people. Those reasons you will come upon in the following report.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Chicago has the lowest death rate among babies 1 year old or less of six[illegible] of the largest cities of the Union.

Pamphlets sent to the baby's mother by Chicago did it.

Pamphlets—and the increase of municipal infant welfare stations in the last few years from four to twenty-[illegible]. They are in the city's poorer sections.

Put it another way:

Among the 62,000 baby arrivals in Chicago in 1926 there were 449 fewer deaths than there were among the 61,000 babies arriving in Chicago in 1918.

Thus the cheering record was made, not in the face of the decreasing birth rate, which, generally speaking, has lately been prevalent in large cities all over the world, but in the face of a substantially increasing rate.

Wins in Saving Babies' Lives.

Here is another contrast:

In 1915 Chicago was fifth down the column in the statistics of nine cities of the United States conspicuous for low death rate among babies one year old or less. Today Chicago is at the top of the column of 16 of the largest cities of the United States which are specializing in the fight against infant mortality.

In short, there has been in the last five years in Chicago a thirty-four per cent reduction in the death rate among babies one year old or less.

What that all means is the victory of mother's milk over the nursing bottle.

Dr. Bundesen says that is the crux of his message to the community, and, tapping with an emphatic forefinger on the edge of the glass covering his six square yards of desk on the seventh floor, southwest corner of the city hall, he uttered with deep earnestness these words:

"Five years ago only 20 per cent of Chicago's babies one year old or less were breast fed. Today 90 per cent of them are breast fed. That contrast will mean most of my story about how we got to the top of the column in a list of sixteen cities that love new babies enough to work and teach in their behalf."

What Bundesen Is Like.

What kind of man and official is hardy, quick stepping blond Herman Bundesen, Berlin born, American bred, now in his forty-fourth year and for nineteen years a physician?

As I never met him until yesterday, my opinion of him would be of no value. But during the few seconds he asked me to wait until he could get clear of the telephone I made bold to glance into important looking and recently published volumes that lay on his desk. One was "Food, Nutrition and Health," by Dr. E. V. M. McCollum, professor of chemical hygiene in the school of hygiene and public health of Johns Hopkins university. It is hardly necessary to add that McCollum is a premier authority. On a fly leaf of his book he had written to Bundesen this:

Another Authority's Verdict.

The other volume I peeked into was "The Evolution and Significance of the Modern Health Campaign," by Dr. C. E. A. Winslow, professor of public

Permits Show 1927 Joins in Building Boom

Building in Chicago has made a good start in its 1927 program. During January building permits issued here were for a total value of $21,873,100, according to the Illinois Federation corporation, which predicts the pace will be maintained.

During January permits were issued for 2,219 flat buildings, 17 frame buildings, 643 brick factories, stores, etc., and 293 buildings of the residential type.

Many Big Projects.

Included in the 1927 program are four large apartment buildings now being worked on, two on the north, the other two south side enterprises. They represent an investment of approximately $8,000,000. In the loop excavation is being made or sites prepared for five large office buildings aggregating $15,000,000.

"January is usually a dull month in building activities and has been that way until three or four years ago," asserted Charles M. Paulsen, head of the federation corporation.

"But the January of this year has been exceptional in the amount of building under way or in the process of contemplation. The winter work is keeping the resident building trades mechanics well employed. In years of a decade or two ago it was the custom of Chicago builders, and those in the country, for that matter, to halt construction activities on or about the middle of November.

"The shutdown would last until the 1st of April. Now builders have found winter building feasible, and that has become a stabilizer in the building industry of the country.

Expect Rush in March.

"We expect a real rush to start this year about the 1st of March and then last until the real winter weather sets in. Labor is tranquil and virtually all Chicago building trades have signed agreements that will tide them over for a year or two more, so this spring the building public will not be bothered with any arguments between building trades mechanics and the building contractors. This alone will prove a stimulus to Chicago's building industry."

HE GOT CLEANED, BUT NOT BY THE LAUNDRY BANDITS

One employé of the Austin Perfection Laundry, 426 Armour street, plunged into a washing machine and remained in a sudsy mixture three feet deep yesterday while two masked bandits searched eleven women and four men in the place.

Joseph Panknin, owner of the laundry, was in his office when the robbers entered. They took a $300 pay roll and pushed him back into the washroom, where he and his employés were searched. Panknin said only about $15 was taken from them.

31,000 ENGINEERS AND FIREMEN WIN WAGE INCREASES

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Thirty-one thousand locomotive engineers and firemen, working on fifty-nine railroads east of Chicago and north of the Ohio river were awarded a 7½ per cent wage increase of $5,000,000 a year by the board of arbitration in session at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The railway men asked for an increase of $1.25 to $1.50 a day, or $13,000,000 a year. In addition to the wage increase, the board acceded to certain minor working condition demands requested by the employés. Some of their demands were refused.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Charles Deering, formerly chairman of the board of the International Harvester company, died at his winter home here late tonight. He was 75 years old.

Charles Deering was the son of William Deering, founder of the Deering Harvester company. He was born at Paris, Me., in 1852. In 1873 he was graduated from the United States Naval academy and served as a naval officer until 1881, when he resigned to become secretary of his father's concern.

Following the merger of the concern with other leading agricultural machinery companies into the International Harvester company, he became chairman of the board. He resigned this place some years ago, however, and had been virtually in retirement since.

Married the Second Time.

Mr. Deering was twice married. His first wife, who was Anna Case of Newport, R. I., died in 1876. He was married in 1883 to Miss Marion Whipple, daughter of Gen. William D. Whipple, U. S. A. She survives as do two daughters, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick and Mrs. Richard E. Danielson, and a son, Roger Deering.

Another son, Charles W. Case Deering, died in San Francisco in 1924. It was reported that injuries suffered in an aeroplane accident caused his death.

At the death of William Deering, Charles Deering inherited an estimated $5,000,000 from the estate. His brother, James Deering, died in September, 1925, on shipboard while on the way from France to the United States.

Develop Florida Lands.

James Deering had been greatly interested in the development of Florida and was engaged in building a $9,000,000 palace known as Vizcaya, near Miami, when he died. It was reported then that he had sold enough of his land to finance the building of the huge structure on the remainder.

In 1925 Charles Deering, also a believer in Florida and a heavy investor there, was said to have sold 200 acres of land north of Miami to a syndicate for $6,000,000.

During the recent hurricane in Florida the Deering estate was damaged to the extent of $50,000. Members of the family were there at the time, but were uninjured.

It was announced that funeral services would be held in Chicago.

Chinese Imbroglio

U. S. urges Chinese factions to agree to neutralization of Shanghai.

Italy backs British policy. Ready to fight Chinese if necessary.

Japan mobilizes naval vessels and marines for quick dash to Shanghai if foreigners are menaced.

More American missionary refugees reach Shanghai.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Creation of a safety zone in the international settlement at Shanghai from which the opposing armies would be excluded by mutual agreement between the rival Chinese war lords was proposed by President Coolidge today.

John Van A. MacMurray, American minister at Peking, submitted the American proposal, which would eliminate the international settlements from the field of hostilities, to Marshal Chang Tso-lin today. Copies of the proposal will be handed to Gen. Chiang Kai Shek, commander of the Cantonese forces at Hankow, and to Gen. Sun Chuan-fang.

Details of the proposal will not be made public until tomorrow, but it is known that it urges the rival leaders to reach an agreement not to carry on hostilities in the Shanghai foreign settlement. The President's decision to act was taken because of his determination to protect the lives and property of 4,000 Americans now living at Shanghai from rioting and violence.

May Not Land Marines.

Should the American proposals be accepted it is understood that neither American marines nor Chinese soldiers would be stationed in the Shanghai center. While it is not expected that the President's note will make any promises not to land marines at Shanghai, it is believed here that, unofficially, the Chinese leaders will be assured that marines would be kept out of the settlement if a safety zone is created.

Although the American proposal is viewed as a precautionary measure for protection of Americans prompted by the fact that the rival armies are rapidly converging on Shanghai, its acceptance would protect other foreigners. Whether other powers will join with the United States in its proposal was not announced.

President Coolidge is anxious to avert the necessity of landing marines at Shanghai to protect American lives. In view, however, of the President's announced belief that Americans should be protected not only in their life but in their property rights at Shanghai, his action today is interpreted as a warning that naval forces will be used to protect United States nationals if the Chinese war lords allow their rights to be ignored.

U. S. Ready to Act.

No American naval forces have been landed in Shanghai, but Admiral Williams, commander in chief of United States naval forces in Asiatic waters, has established headquarters there and completed preparations for prompt action should a crisis arise.

With the arrival of the Chaumont, which recently left San Diego for Honolulu, Admiral Williams will have 3,500 marines at his disposal. The navy announced today that the U. S. S.

'Big Navy' Men Draft Plans to Rush Program

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Plans to urge the adoption of a naval building program before adjournment on March 4, much more ambitious in its scope than was thought possible of achievement when congress convened in December, have been agreed upon by the "big navy" group in the house.

Rep. Fred A. Britten [Rep., Ill.], ranking Republican member of the house naval affairs committee, announced that the house leaders have virtually promised a special rule for early consideration of his bill. The measure authorizes an appropriation of $31,450,000 for modernization of the battleships Oklahoma and Nevada, completion of the airplane carriers Lexington and Saratoga, and the construction of a new fleet submarine.

See Victory for Cruiser Bill.

The bill will be brought up for passage immediately after the house has disposed of the senate's amendment to the naval appropriation bill allotting $1,200,000 to begin construction of the three light cruisers originally authorized in the 1924 building program. The "big navy" members are confident that the house will ultimately concur in the senate's amendment in spite of administration opposition.

The final phase of the new plans provide for calling up the pending Butler bill to authorize the construction of ten additional light cruisers. No attempt to secure appropriations for these ships will be made at this session and, inasmuch as the bill in its present form has the approval of President Coolidge, no substantial opposition is expected.

Await British Move.

While the Britten bill does not specifically provide for the elevation of turret guns on the Oklahoma and the Nevada, the report of the naval affairs committee asserts that the navy department has given assurances of its intention to raise the guns unless formal objections are lodged by Great Britain or Japan under the terms of the Washington arms pact.

Mr. Britten stated that he would not press a pending bill to authorize gun elevation on all first class ships in the United States navy on the theory that if congress passes the Oklahoma-Nevada modernization bill it will have committed itself to a general elevation policy.

Sees War Clouds Gather.

Anticipating a fight in the house over the senate's cruiser amendment, Representative Woodrum [Dem., Va.] opened for the "big navy" group on the floor today when he declared that "with a warcloud hanging in the horizon to the south of us and the increasingly complex situation developing in the far east, this need alone should cause us to inventory our naval strength with the greatest care and concern." He declared "that the dream of universal peace is indeed comforting," but after all only a dream.

"As long as nations are composed of men, and as long as the hearts of men are moved and influenced by impulses of envy, greed and covetousness," he continued, "just so long will men and nations be compelled to be ready and willing, not only to defend their right to peace and progress, but to defend and enforce those right by arms, if necessary."

President Coolidge, Mr. Woodrum asserted, "is gravely in error in his willingness to see the American navy reduced to a woeful and inefficient condition in the present state of world affairs."

STARTING TODAY

WIFE MISSING, VICTIM OF GANG WAR DOWNSTATE

13 Slain in Shelton-Birger Feud.

BULLETIN.

Quincy, Ill., Feb. 6.—(AP)—2 a. m.—Carl, Earl and Bernard Shelton, southern Illinois gangsters sentenced here yesterday for a mail robbery committed at Collinsville in 1925, left here at 12:57 this morning under heavy guard for the federal prison at Leavenworth.

Marion, Ill., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Gang hatred flared up again in southern Illinois tonight. Another outbreak between the bands of rival bootleggers and outlaws was feared by the authorities of "Bloody Williamson" and adjoining counties.

The body of Lory L. Price, murdered highway policeman, lay in a morgue in Nashville, Ill., battered almost beyond recognition. Price's body was found this afternoon after a three week's search. The neck had been broken and the body had been punctured by thirteen bullets. Price appeared to have been gagged before he was killed.

Ethel, the comely young wife of Price, abducted with him from their home in the outskirts of Marion on the night of Jan. 17, is still missing. Fears that she had met the same fate as her husband were expressed. Posses, made up of American Legion men, were hunting her body in the swampy and soggy lands near the spot where her husband's body was discovered.

Seized, Taken 60 Miles.

No one—except the kidnapers and murderers—knows what actually happened on the night Price and his wife were abducted. They were visited in their home in the dark hours of the night. The house showed evidence of a terrific struggle and outside the snow was smeared with blood and a trail showed where Price, wounded, had been dragged to an automobile.

That was all the evidence available until Price's body was discovered today, almost sixty miles from the spot where he was seized.

Price was the thirteenth victim of the Shelton-Birger feud in two years. Mrs. Steve George, killed with her husband, Elmer Thompson and an unidentified man, when Shady Rest, the fortified roadhouse of the Birgers was bombed and burned on Jan. 8, was the only known woman victim. The others were Charles N. Gordon Jr., Harry Walker, William Holland, William McQuay, Ward Jones, Jeff Stone, mayor of Colp, Ill.; John Milroy, and Mayor Joe Adams of West City, Ill.

25 Years for Mail Robbery.

Leaders of the powerful Shelton gang, Carl, Earl and Bernie Shelton, sentenced today to 25 years each for mail robbery, were in jail at Quincy, preparing for their removal to the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth.

And Charlie Birger, unforgiving leader of all the Sheltons' enemies, was being spirited about from jail to jail in central and southern Illinois by officers who appeared to fear not only for his safety but for their own should they be discovered with him.

In the midst of the whirlwind of developments in this bitter drama of bloodshed stand sheriffs and highway police and other officers virtually bewildered by the rapidity of unfolding events.

Find Murdered Officer.

Almost at the moment that Judge Louis Fitzhenry in the federal court at Quincy was denying the Sheltons a new trial and sentencing them to the long term in Leavenworth the body of the missing Lory Price was discovered under a little clump of bushes.

It lay on the farm of Joseph Waldman, 100 feet off Illinois state highway No. 2, the route from Chicago to Cairo. The spot was about six miles north of the village of Tamaroa. It was found by a farmer who was repairing his fences.

Price was a Williamson county highway patrolman. As soon as the body was discovered Sheriff Petri of Washington county, was called. The sheriff and several deputies went to the scene. They found the body clad in its kahki uniform, the badge, No. 78, on the chest.

Then searching parties began hunting in the surrounding woods for the body of Ethel Price, the wife.

Price had won the respect and admiration of his colleagues in the American Legion post at Marion. He served overseas in the world war and was captured by the Germans. He was a slender, handsome man, six feet tall and 27. As insignia of the 27th div[illegible] sion was on the belt that girdled the slim waist.

Intertwining with the recent motives and activities of the Sheltons and of Birger, were the last known moves of Price.

The highway man had been scheduled as a witness against the Sheltons in their trial for the Collinsville mail robbery two years ago. He was the last man known to have left Shady Rest, the pastoral blockhouse fortress of the Birger outfit, before it was dynamited and burned—four Birgerites dying in it, admist machine gun fire on the night of Jan. 8.

Again Price had told friends that on the afternoon after the raid on Shady Rest, Carl Shelton, most powerful of the three brothers, then at liberty on bonds, had crowded his car to the side of the road in Williamson county "to talk to him." Price had characterized that conversation as friendly but he had refused to go into any details—and Shelton from the stand during the trial, had denied the conversation ever took place.

Also Price was known as a close friend of Charley Birger and as a frequent visitor at Shady Rest.

Brothers Were Suspected.

So the disappearance of Price and his young wife had been laid in many quarters to the Sheltons and their followers. It had been whispered that the brothers had had him "taken for a ride" from which he would never come back.

On the other hand, it developed as early as last Wednesday—it was revealed tonight—that Carl Shelton, who right up to his trial had been out of jail, while his brothers were in jail, voluntarily had told Ray Robertson, a highway policeman at Quincy and a friend of Price, to watch certain Birger gangsters if he would learn what happened to Price and his wife. He offered to give further information if the highway police would guard him from the Birgers.

Carl Shelton was said to have told Robertson the names of the men who would know something of the disappearance of Lory and Ethel Price. Shelton was said to have said something about "probable death" in that tipoff to Robertson.

Birger Quizzed About Price.

And, strangely, the vanishment of Price and Mrs. Price had been the subject of the cross-examination of Charlie Birger, who was a witness against the Sheltons in the trial that has sent them on their way to prison.

On the witness stand Birger was asked whether he had not met the slain highway policeman while the latter was in possession of a machine gun and if he had not warned Price not to interfere any further in the affairs of the Sheltons.

Carl Shelton was reticent regarding the slaying. Seen in the jail at Quincy tonight, he refused to discuss his talk with Robertson, the state highway man, except to deny that either he or his brothers had anything to do with the killing of Price.

Their Greatest Enemy.

The Sheltons are bitter because Birger, their greatest enemy, and Art Newman, his chief lieutenant, had such a large hand in their conviction. But no evidence of animosity appeared on the surface during the trial. Although the Birgers and the Sheltons used every modern means of extermination—machine guns and bombs, hand grenades and airplanes—in their private fighting, Birger smiled cheerfully when he appeared in court to testify against the Sheltons and even spoke to Carl, the eldest, who answered him in even tones.

All these and other confusing elements confronted the authorities of "bloody Williamson" and Saline and Washington and other adjacent counties tonight as they watched for another flareup among the gangsters, even with the leaders at least temporarily off the field.

FEUD VICTIM, HIS WIFE, AND SCENE OF GANG WARFARE

Lory L. Price, state highway policeman in Williamson county, who was found murdered yesterday, and his wife, Ethel. It was believed that Price was kidnaped by the Shelton gangsters. Mrs. Price's fate remains a mystery.

The map above shows the bloody battlefields of Williamson and surrounding counties. Thirteen persons have been killed in the Birger-Shelton feud, which followed the klan-anti-klan battles in which many others were slain.

The map shows Marion, where Highway Patrolman Lory Price and his wife were kidnaped; Dubois, near which Price's body was found yesterday; Herrin, Colp, West City, and Benton, where other slayings have taken place; and Duquoin, where three of the Sheltons yesterday were sentenced to prison for mail robbery.

FIRE THREATENS 87 ORPHANS AT EVENING PRAYER

Eighty-seven little children were at their prayers in the Uhlich orphanage, 2014 Burling street, when the fire alarm bell rang last night. Then smoke began to pour in from a fire in the basement.

Attendants quieted the children while George Hofman, the night superintendent, called the fire department. When Chief Koepke and his men of the Third battalion arrived the youngsters were all standing calmly in line, waiting to move out in order.

The firemen discovered that the blaze was confined to rubbish in the basement and extinguished it in a few minutes.

Then the little orphans went back to their prayers.

BURGLAR LOCK EXPERT MEETS DIXIE WATERLOO

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 5.—(AP)—M. M. Paschall, anti-burglar expert of a Chicago lock and burglar alarm concern, arrived here last night to offer his wares and advice to banks and commercial houses needing protection against holdup men, safe crackers and others of their ilk.

Today he reported to police that his automobile was robbed of approximately $20,000 worth of crime preventing paraphernalia and personal belongings before he had been in town an hour.

The loot, taken from his automobile while it was parked in front of a downtown hotel, included complete burglar alarm systems, time locks, tear gas bombs, the anti-burglar expert's hat, his overcoat, a portable talking machine, and, in fact, all loose articles stored in the rear of the automobile.

DRIVES TAXI TO CONCEAL RICHES, WIFE CHARGES

At the age of 60 years, Joseph Halligan, 336 South Sacramento boulevard, has emerged from the retirement where he lived comfortably on a small fortune and is driving a taxicab in an effort to conceal his wealth and avoid supporting his elderly wife, according to a separate maintenance bill filed yesterday in the Superior court by Mrs. Eliza Halligan, 57 years old, 2702 Argyle street.

The Halligans were married 30 years ago and have four children. About two years ago, Halligan began to drink heavily, the bill charged, and his habits made it unsafe for his wife to live with him. He has refused to support her since May, 1926, she declared, although he owns property worth $50,000 and recently sold their home for $20,000. The suit was filed by Attorney Joseph A. Weber.

House Votes to Exempt Vets from Steamer Tax

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—(AP)—The Bacharac bill to exempt American Legion members who attend the Paris convention next September from paying the usual revenue tax on passage tickets was approved unanimously today by the house and sent to the senate.

PEDESTRIAN IS ROBBED.

William Leva, 448 East 88th street, was robbed last night of $38 by two men who stepped from an automobile as he was walking on East 88th street near Langley avenue.

NAME GRAND CZAR TO KEEP JAZZ ART 'PURE AND NOBLE'

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—The millenium was brought nearer today by the naming of a czar of jazz "to keep that great art pure, noble, and worthy of American womanhood."

Julian T. Abeles, attorney, is the director who slides into his niche alongside Will Hays and Judge Landis, the gentlemen who publicly tidy up whatever Augean stables may appear in the movies and baseball.

He is to be paid $25,000 a year.

Mr. Abeles was named censor of all the trombones and saxophones by the National Association of Orchestra Leaders.

"Jazz can be made mean and lowdown," the announcement of the appointment asserts. "A certain modicum of that is all right for the Hotsy-Totsy night clubs, where joy is more or less unrefined. But for the main, the jazz maestros are anxious to suit the great majority, and for this reason they have appointed their legal guide and mentor as the absolute czar of syncopation."

EMPLOYES FLEE FIRE IN EVANSTON.

Employes of the Evanston plant of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company fled to the street yesterday when fire broke out in a waste pile in a tunnel. It was extinguished with small loss.

HOLD ONE, HUNT TWO IN PAY ROLL HOLDUP KILLING

Bandit Slays Bystander in Duel with Policeman.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Ted Sabel, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in the Pontiac reformatory by Judge William V. Brothers.

Two youthful members of the Forty-two club, an organization of west side gunmen, were being sought last night in connection with the killing of Fred Matson, 3739 West 65th street, during a pistol battle between bandits and a policeman shortly before noon.

The shooting occurred in the office of the Everett Coal and Coke company, 7694 South Chicago avenue, where a $1,500 pay roll was the objective of the robbers. Matson, 55 years old and the father of five daughters, had gone to the office to seek employment. He was shot in the back by one of the three bandits in the gang.

2 Bandits Escape, 1 Caught.

The man who did the shooting escaped in an automobile. Another robber made his way to the street and fled. The third was overpowered by Policeman Mark Stokes of the Grand Crossing station. He is Louis Katzewitz, 24 years old, of 1731 West Roosevelt road.

Katzewitz declined to give any information about his companions, but a checkup in a garage at 1733 West Roosevelt road disclosed that he was accompanied by Jack Gold and Edward Smith when he drove his automobile out at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Deputy Chief of Detectives Stege announced last night that he was convinced Gold and Smith were the robbers and sent out a message ordering their arrest.

Prisoner Is Defiant.

In the right hand of Katzewitz when Policeman Stokes seized him was a loaded revolver. He submitted to arrest without firing a shot, however. His attitude at the Grand Crossing station last night was defiant and he maintained that he had only gone into the office, like Matson, seeking a job.

The pay roll was lying on a table in the main office when Katzewitz and one of his confederates entered. Matson, a carpenter, was talking to Peter Seller, the manager. George Bell Jr., the cashier, and Elmer Hoglund, another employé, were at desks nearby. In a side office sat Policeman Stokes, stationed especially to guard the pay roll.

First Shot Kills Matson.

When the third man, with his revolver drawn, entered by a side door, he almost collided with Stokes. Seeing the uniform, he turned and ran out.

Policeman Stokes then stepped into the front office. Seller, Bell, Hoglund, and Matson were standing with upraised hands. The bandits were ordered them back to the rear. Seeing the policeman, one of the robbers fired. Stokes fired back. Matson, with his back to the bandit, fell. A bullet had struck him from the rear and penetrated his heart.

The man who had fired fled as Stokes seized Katzewitz. Half a dozen passersby saw him enter an automobile at the curb and drive away. The car was dirt stained and bore no license plates.

Auto Found in Garage.

When it was found in the garage, Louis Defosky, the proprietor, asserted it was the property of Katzewitz. An employé told of seeing Gold and Smith with the owner. Later Mrs. Morris Prouty, 3240 Yates avenue, viewed the car and declared it was the one used in the attempted holdup.

The headquarters of the Forty-two club were raided last night and thirty members were taken into custody. All were held and viewed by the witnesses, but no identifications were made. Katzewitz, Gold, and Smith, according to the police, have criminal records.

BANDIT'S BULLET LEAVES FIVE FATHERLESS

GANGSTER SHOT 5 TIMES AS HE GETS SHAVE; DIES

Face Hidden by Towel as Foe Opens Fire.

West side gangsters renewed active warfare yesterday by shooting and fatally wounding a man as he sat in a barber's chair.

John Petrack, 22, of 538 West 37th street, long identified, despite his youth, with gangster activities, was the latest victim. He died of his wounds shortly after 6 o'clock this morning in the Bridewell hospital.

Yesterday afternoon Petrack was in a chair of the Harry Fidler, barber shop, 1344 South Peoria street. Harry Wexler, 1008 South Wood street, the barber, had just lathered Petrack's face, swathed it in towels, and was honing his razor, when an unidentified man stepped from an auto at the curb and entered the shop, gun in hand.

Shoots at Close Range.

Without a word, the intruder held the muzzle of his weapon a few inches from the face of Petrack and shot five times.

Petrack slumped to the floor, three bullets through his head, another in the back of the neck and a fifth in the right wrist.

Wexler ran for cover in the back room, closely followed by Fidler and several customers. The assailant, described as being a bulky man weighing more than 200 pounds, calmly pocketed his gun, turned, walked outside, and drove away.

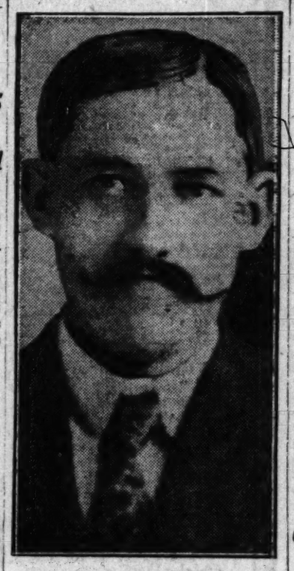
Denies Knowing Foe.

Regaining consciousness momentarily while on the way to the hospital, Petrack said he did not see his assailant and had no idea as to his identity.

Chief of Detectives William Schoemaker and police of Maxwell street station saw in the shooting the continuance of a gang fued having its inception in the murder last June of Jules Portugese.

A month after Portugese was "taken for a ride" his former pal, Ed (Big) Smith was shot after Sam Kaplan, Portugese's closest friend, is said to have sworn vengeance. And just a week ago, it was said, Kaplan was wounded in the head by a shotgun slug while standing on a street corner.

Kaplan was questioned at Maxwell street station last night. Early this morning Frank Goldberg, 1330 South Sangamon street, was taken into custody in connection with the shooting.



The victim, Fred Matson, who was a bystander when bandits attempted to rob south side coal company's office.

Robber Beats Woman Near Police Station and Escapes

CHICAGO-BRITAIN TELEPHONE LINES READY ON FEB. 12

Chicagoans will be able to telephone to England, Scotland, or Wales, beginning next Saturday, Feb. 12, it was announced by officials of the American Telephone and Telegraph company in New York yesterday. Extension of the company's radio telephone service to Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin shall have been accomplished by that date, it was said.

Local telephone officials last night declared opening of the new British isles-Chicago service had been scheduled for the early future, though they said they had not yet been informed of a definite date.

The overseas service was extended yesterday to Maryland and the District of Columbia, and on Wednesday patrons in Ohio and Indiana will be included in the radio telephone directory. Eight calls were made from England to the United States yesterday and five from this country to England, official said.

CHAPLIN AGENT MOVES TO OUST RECEIVERSHIP

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Alfred Reeves, business manager of the Charles Chaplin moving picture enterprises, today entered the Chaplin case by filing notice with Judge Hartley Shaw of a motion to vacate the receivership now controlling the Chaplin money, corporations and properties.

Reeves' action comes up for argument Thursday. In the meantime, two demurrers and a motion to strike out portions of Mrs. Lita Chaplin's divorce complaint which refer to Chaplin's finances, are scheduled to be argued Monday morning.

REFUSES EDISON SCIENCE MEDAL FOR DISCOVERY

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Dr. William D. Coolidge of Schenectady who was to be awarded the Edison medal of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers for having perfected production of ductile tungstile, has refused to accept the award, it was learned today, giving as his reason that a federal court had ruled he was not the inventor of the process.

Gano Dunn, president of the J. G. White Engineering corporation and chairman of the committee that made the award, said today that "every one knows that Dr. Coolidge deserves the credit and his action is that of a man of extreme modesty and exceedingly sensitive honor."

The decision, handed down in United States Circuit court in Delaware by Judge Hugh Morris, he said, was not to the effect that Dr. Coolidge was not the originator of the process but that it was a "discovery" and not an invention."

Alleged Brewery Owner Held in Bonds of $10,000

United States Commissioner Henry C. Beitler yesterday set the bonds of Carl Endriss, alleged owner of a huge underground brewery at the Playgrounds roadhouse, Grand avenue and Struckman road, River Grove, at $10,000 on charges of violating the Volstead act. Contempt of court proceedings will probably be instituted against Endriss, Assistant United States District Attorney D. G. Hutchison said, as the roadhouse, when raided Friday night, was then under padlock for violating the prohibition law.

ALDERMEN HURL CHARGES DURING SCHOOL HEARING

Toman Calls Nelson Liar After Rum Slam.

"Half the time when you come in here, Ald. Toman, you aren't sober!"

"Yes, and you, Ald. Nelson, are a liar!"

"You won't come outside and say that!"

Casting aside all parliamentary rules, Ald. O. F. Nelson [46] and Ald. John Toman [23] hurled these words across the city council chambers yesterday at the climax of a heated session of the committee on schools.

In vain, the chairman, Ald. Leo M. Brieske [45th], pounded for order.

But There Is No Fight.

A hundred onlookers, who included teachers, parents, city and school board officials, edged forward in their seats, half expecting a fistic display. A moment later, however, the two aldermen became calm and the turmoil ended.

The verbal clash occurred just before the committee session closed. For two months its members have considered Mayor Dever's new board appointees. Yesterday it adjourned until Monday, again refusing to vote on their confirmation until its investigation is finished.

Ald. Toman, who is not a member of the committee, entered and asked to put a question with regard to teachers' councils.

"Mr. Chairman, a quorum is not present," Ald. Nelson interjected. "There is a motion to adjourn."

Aldermanic Clash Starts.

"Do you mean to deny me a right to speak?" Ald. Toman demanded, adding "it's no wonder we all jump on you when you use such tactics."

It was at that point that Ald. Nelson made his comment on Ald. Toman's sobriety, and Toman countered, calling Nelson a liar.

Friends of both members followed them into the lobbies later, thinking that the controversy might be resumed. The two contestants did not meet.

For nearly three hours preceding the meeting's sensational windup the committee had listened to the testimony of John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and Mrs. W. S. Hefferan, a school trustee named for reappointment. Their statements formed a debate on the question of intelligence tests, junior high and platoon schools, and teachers' councils.

Labor Leader's Views.

The first three policies Mr. Fitzpatrick denounced as unscientific and dangerous. Mrs. Hefferan, he said, had supported them and should be ousted.

"We can't understand why the mayor blundered into renaming Mrs. Hefferan," he declared. "We are now asking this committee, our court of last resort, to save the mayor from his predicament and refuse her confirmation."

The federation also asks the rejection of Dr. O. L. Schmidt, who Mr. Fitzpatrick termed "more of a tyrant and a dictator than an educator."

Half an hour of cross-questioning and wrangling among the committeemen followed, Mrs. Hefferan listening calmly as her record was debated.

"I am amased. I hardly recognize myself as this educational Mussolini I have been painted," she said. "You have impugned my honesty and I want to say at the start that I am only one trustee. What is said also reflects on the entire board."

Mrs. Hefferan defended her enthusiasm for the junior high school plan, presenting statistics to show that whereas 95.2 per cent of those schools' graduates enter senior high school, only 65 per cent continued under the "8-4 grade" system. Twenty-nine per cent of the February graduates in one high school dropped out of school. This, she said, "is a slaughter of the innocents.

Talks of Senn High Inquiry.

"We read in the morning papers about charges of immorality among the 'flaming youth' in one high school (Senn)," she asserted. "It is in the adolescent years, through which these boys and girls are going that the junior high school is most valuable."

As for intelligence tests, she explained that she knew little about them and that they were still experimental. Platoon schools, she said, are only a temporary housing measure largely to be eliminated as the seating shortage is overcome.

"On teachers' councils, I had suspended judgment to see how Supt. McAndrew's councils worked out," she said. "I am convinced now that they do not allow enough free expression by the teachers and favor their readjustment within reasonable limits."

Clash on Teachers' Councils.

Miss Margaret Haley challenged Mrs. Hefferan's defense of teachers' councils on the ground that her voting record was contradictory. Further evidence on that, Miss Haley said, will be produced at the committee's next meeting.

Walter J. Raymer, another appointee, had been requested to attend, but wrote he could not, nor could he see his testimony would be pertinent. He will be invited again. Chairman Brieske's effort to get a vote on the appointees failed. Several aldermen pleaded lack of time and it was decided to meet Monday, hoping to report action at the council meeting Wednesday.

TRAIN KILLS RAILROAD VETERAN.

Andrew Eber, 60, of 5832 South Wells street, a railroad employe for forty years, was killed yesterday afternoon when he was run down by a switch engine in the yards adjacent to the La Salle street station.

LIEUT. MICHAEL GRADY AND SQUAD LEAD IN DETECTIVE EFFICIENCY

LIEUT. MICHAEL GRADY.

Police Lieutenant Michael Grady and his squad led the efficiency list at the detective bureau for the month of January. Lieut. Grady, with William Smith, Charles King, John Benson, and Edward Healy, members of the squad, is credited with solving three murders and recovering stolen property valued at $45,000. The squad received a total of 1,606 points, nearly 100 points ahead of Sergt. Dave Burke and his squad, who were second on the list. Lieut. Eugene Barry and his squad were third.

Vermilion, S. D., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Desire for a university education—a pressing need of $24 for freshman tuition fees—led a 19 year old girl into an unsuccessful attempt to rob the First National bank here early today.

With stolen tools, Miss Marion Meyers, who has attended the University of South Dakota, forced entry into the bank, only to meet failure and arrest.

Just as she prepared to apply an electric drill to the bank's vault door a patrolman on his rounds alarmed her and she fled. A few minutes later they found her huddled in fright on a rear stairway.

Cries Herself to Sleep.

Her courage gone, she cried herself to sleep tonight in the county jail, where she will remain until her preliminary hearing next Monday on a charge of attempted robbery.

"For heaven's sake don't tell mother!" was her constant plea, not knowing that her widowed mother, Mrs. M. L. Meyers, was reported en route here from Woonsocket, S. D., where she works in a restaurant.

While State's Attorney H. O. Perkins and other officials sought for evidences of male accomplices, the girl steadfastly insisted that she had been alone.

Telegraph wires in the alley behind the bank and telephone wires within the building had been cut in a manner that officials believed pointed to the participation of accomplices.

She Appeared Queer.

Prof. C. C. Josey, in whose home the girl worked for her board and room, said she had been a little "queer," but had no criticism of her previous work or behavior.

One phase under investigation was the insistence of several sales girls from a store that a number of dresses as excellent and she "was a prominent student."

found in Miss Meyers' room had been stolen from the store last October.

Questioned by Mr. Perkins, Miss Meyers declared her need of the tuition money for the second semester's freshman work was her only motive in attempting to rob the bank. She intended, she said, to take only $24, and to repay it.

Tools used by the girl were stolen from a garage last Monday night, including the electric drill, and she carried them to the bank in a suitcase.

One of the rear doors of the main banking room was "jimmied" after she had tried unsuccessfully to climb through the transom.

Policemen Hear Sobs.

She had connected the drill with a light socket when Patrolman Denny Sullivan, making his rounds, peered into the room and saw the tools. The girl had fled on his approach.

With another patrolman, Sullivan went around the building a few minutes after his discovery, found a broken window, and soon the girl's sobs led them to the stairway where she crouched.

Dr. Josey said he had given the girl a place in his home at the request of her mother, who came here with the girl from Valley City, N. D., last summer to get her started at the university.

"So far as I know, she did not have any boy friends," Dr. Josey said tonight. "I insisted on her being in the house by 10:30 each night. She did not seem to have any intimate friends, either boys or girls."

Word received today from Valley City was that Miss Meyers graduated from the Valley City High school, and while there worked for her room and board at the home of a prominent family.

YACHT FIRED ON BY COAST GUARD, OWNER CHARGES

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Charges that their private yacht, flying the American flag, was fired upon by coast guard patrol boat 248 at a point 40 miles off Miami were made by Capt. R. R. Schubert, master and owner of the yacht Elsie II., and his two guests, Francis Williams and Samuel Hawkes, both of Corning, N. Y., upon their arrival here tonight.

Mr. Hawkes, president of T. G. Hawkes & Co., announced his attorneys were preparing affidavits to be forwarded immediately to the navy department, several senators and the Bahamas colonial government, protesting against the reported incidents.

The three men said the shooting occurred shortly after noon last Sunday while the yacht was proceeding from Miami for the Island of New Providence in the Bahama group. Their pleasure craft, they asserted, was laden with a quantity of old clothing for distribution on the Bahama islands for victims of the summer hurricanes.

Poland to Enter Europe's Combine of Steel Concerns

TIRE PUNCTURED 857 TIMES LEAKS NO AIR.

A new and amazing scientific puncture proof discovery has been perfected by Mr. O. S. Nelson, B-590 Logan Building, Mitchell, South Dakota, with which an automobile tire was punctured 857 times without loss of air. Makes all old as well as new tires puncture proof. It increases the mileage of tires enormously. Makes ordinary tire troubles go forever. Prevents tire changing. It is inexpensive. Mr. Nelson wants agents and is willing to send samples for demonstration at his own risk. Write him today.—Adv.

FINANCE COLLECTION MANAGERS

One of the foremost automobile finance companies in the country, located in the middle west, is desirous of securing the services of an experienced collection manager. The opportunity presented is a very unusual one and the possibilities for a man filling this position successfully are exceptional.

If you have had a good education and have a complete knowledge of automobile finance collections and can demonstrate it, and in addition have a broadminded business viewpoint coupled with an excellent reputation, we shall be pleased to have you send us a letter giving complete details regarding yourself.

This opportunity is the sort of one which should appeal to a man now well connected but who believes he has greater potential possibilities than his present connection affords him to make the most of.

Do not reply unless you have had experience in managing a large collection department and have demonstrated your executive capacity.

Appointments will be made in Chicago at an early date.

COOLIDGE ASKS FOREIGN SAFETY ZONE IN SHANGHAI

Urges War Lords to Keep Out of Alien Area.

At the state department it was stated that Admiral Williams and American consuls have reported steady progress in the evacuation of Americans to points where they can be protected. Minister MacMurray earlier in the week directed the consuls to urge all possible speed in sending Americans from the interior areas, where mob violence might occur.

ITALY BACKS BRITAIN

ROME, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini has made it clear, in answering Great Britain's memorandum addressed to all the powers having interests in the far east, that he is ready to join the British in the use of force if the situation at Shanghai becomes critical.

At the beginning of the Chinese crisis Great Britain sent a memorandum to the various powers explaining the policy she intended to follow and asking for their views. This was a policy of conciliation, with proper protection of the lives and property of foreigners in China.

Sig. Mussolini, after mature study of the situation and frequent exchanges of views with Sir Austen Chamberlain, British secretary for foreign affairs, replied on Feb. 2 with a note in which he accepted the main lines of the British policy.

May Swing Other Powers.

The Italian premier's move is considered by those familiar with conditions, an able one, since it came at a moment when England seemed almost entirely isolated. Thus the support of Italy represents an important pechological factor, which may have the effect of inducing other powers to imitate her.

For the present it is understood that the intention of Great Britain and Italy is merely to carry on police measures for the protection of their subjects and interests, leaving the initiative and responsibility for graver steps to the Chinese. Nevertheless, some of the newspapers show a bellicose disposition. The Impero, for instance, says:

"England chose the right argument, namely, cannon. Italy must imitate her, this being the only way to suppress Chinese anarchy and brigandage masked as nationalism."

JAPAN MOBILIZES FLEET

BY RODERICK MATHESON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Feb. 5.—The Japanese admiralty today ordered the cruiser Tenryu to load 300 marines and proceed immediately to Sasebo with four destroyers. These forces will hold themselves ready to sail for Shanghai on the shortest notice.

Japanese correspondents in China are sending pessimistic news of the general situation both at Peking and Hankow and indicate Japan's hand will be forced through the growing pressure the Chinese are bringing against Great Britain.

Official reports to the navy state that there probably will be a break within the Chinese nationalist ranks, with the extremists seizing power. Other reports current are to the effect that hundreds of radical agitators are entering Shanghai for the purpose of provoking an outbreak against all foreigners.

MORE REFUGEES ARRIVE

BY JOHN FOWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 5.—The second ship loaded with American refugees from the interior of China arrived at Shanghai this afternoon. It was the small British river steamer Doosung, containing passenger accommodations for only twenty, but 110 refugees, mostly women and children, were crowded aboard.

Among the refugees were Mrs. A. Dorrance and two small sons from Sturgis, Mich. She is a graduate of Northwestern university, and the wife of the agent of the Standard Oil company of New York in Changsha, Hunan province. Others were Wilhelmina Ralsbeek, Mrs. J. C. Dekorn, S. A. Dykstre, his wife and three children, and Mrs. A. H. Smith, all of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Jane Nyenhuis, whose home is at Pease, Minn.; Dr. W. E. Robertson, wife and daughter, of Toronto, Canada. Mrs. Robertson was formerly Miss G. Ewers of Salem, Ind. Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Mitchell of Kenosha, Wis., and Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Preston and their three children, from Texas, also were on board.

Tells How British Were Menaced.

Mrs. Dorrance told THE TRIBUNE correspondent that she was in Changsha, when the mobs, inflamed by British propaganda, drove out the British and marched through the city streets waving anti-British banners. They invaded the premises of the British Petroleum company, firing the tanks and destroying more than 10,000 gallons of oil. They also looted the offices and warehouses of large British trading companies.

Mrs. Dorrance declared neither the Americans nor their properties were molested, the leaders apparently having given strict instructions not to molest American citizens.

Red Leaders Executed.

The refugees agreed Hunan province is dominated by the communist branch of the Kuomintang, which is so strongly entrenched that the moderate elements are unable to control it. However, the nationalist officials are now adopting a strong policy. Yesterday they dispatched Gen. Tang Shen-chi to Hunan with a strong force to attempt to end the communist outrages.

Gen. Tang immediately rounded up the communist leaders and executed thirty who were involved in the anti-foreign outrages.

Mr. Mitchell, who is a member of the Presbyterian mission at Siangtan, Hunan province, declared the communist agitators forced the Chinese Christians to join in the agitation, participate in the anti-foreignism and assist in the formation of radical labor unions. More than 100 unions were formed in Changsha in a week, forcing the property owners to flee.

In many cases the execution of wealthy men and looting of property is forcing practically a complete cessation of business.

The Rev. F. J. Cottor of the Episcopal Church mission, located at Wuchang, Hupeh province, whose home is in New York, declared the communist wing of the Kuomintang is starting a general campaign of terrorism for the purpose of confiscating the properties of wealthy Chinese and dividing them among the party leaders. The Rev. Mr. Cottor said the Americans, while not actually molested, were greatly inconvenienced, making the missionary work impossible for the present and causing the evacuation.

Another group of 150 American and British refugees left Chungking on the British steamer Chingwo yesterday for a trip of 1,500 miles down the Yangtze to Shanghai. Sixty more American and British missionaries are reported to be arriving at Chungking, after a trip of two weeks in sedan chairs from Chengtu, in order to board a ship at Chungking.

The disruption of telegraph services between Shanghai and Hangchow, plus a strict censorship, is preventing the receipt of accurate reports of the Chekiang situation, but it is not believed that Marshal Sun Chuan-fang will be able to hold out much longer. The northern militarists, Gen. Chang Tso-lin, Gen. Wu Pei-fu, and Gen. Chang Chung-chang, are attempting to relieve the pressure by launching an attack on the nationalists at Hankow and Kiukiang, but it is believed that this is too late to prevent the nationalist occupation of the lower Yangtze district, which will precipitate the Shanghai crisis.

Macon, Ga., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Mrs. Sun Yat Sen, riding in her American made sedan with the advanced forces of the Cantonese army in China, presents a decided contrast to her modest, retiring conduct while at Wesleyan college in this city where she received her education before returning to China to become the bride of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, then president of the southern Chinese republic.

Bishop W. N. Ainsworth of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, just back from a tour of the orient, where he was assigned by the College of Bishops of his church observed the contrast, for he was president of Wesleyan college when she was a student in that institution.

To Wesleyan girls Mrs. Sun Yat Sen is still remembered and referred to as Chung Ling Soong. She was one of three sisters of the same prominent Chinese family who sought their education in this country. Although Chung Ling never sought society, her school mates said the other two were more Americanized. Chung Ling detested paint and powder and once when ill refused to let a doctor come to her room while her face was uncovered. Her sisters were constantly criticizing her wearing apparel.

Spent Long Hours at Study.

Mrs. Florrie White, matron of the college, said that "there was far more to Chung Ling than either of the others. She did not leave the college often and spent hours at a time studying in her room."

The Chinese girl once told a school mate that she had no trouble with her studies with the exception of mathematics.

"I have to figure it out in Chinese first," she is said to have explained.

The father of the three girls was a product of Christianity and attended Vanderbilt university at Nashville.

Almost Missed Graduation.

Chung Ling came very near not being graduated as a result of her Chinese upbringing. On the night of her last appearance in college her cap and gown had not arrived. Mrs. White, to console the heartbroken girl, offered her the robe of her son.

"What!" demanded the girl. "Lady graduate in man's gown?"

She finally was persuaded that it was not sinful and took her diploma from the Wesleyan stage in the robe of Goodrich C. White, now dean of Emory university.

It is told here that when she boarded ship in San Francisco in 1913, a son of Dr. Sun Yat Sen escorted her aboard. She later met and married the father of the young student.

Priests Beaten; Sent Into Wilderness.

HANKOW, Feb. 5. — (AP) — Somewhere in the icy slush covered wilderness of northwest Hupeh province two Catholic priests are held captive by Chinese who stabbed and beat them after destroying their mission on Jan. 29.

Their church, in a village 150 miles up the river Han from Hankow, was attacked by a mob of 2,000 Chinese, said to be members of the Farmers union. After robbing the church the mob destroyed it.

The priests were stabbed, beaten, disrobed and marched barefoot into the wilderness in mid-winter. The only clothing left them was their trousers and underwear. When they disappeared in the early morning hours the temperature was near freezing. No word has been received of them since they were carried off. Appeals to the nationalist foreign office brought promises of immediate freedom for the priests, but they are still missing.

WAR OF CHINESE ON CHRISTIANS KEEPS GROWING

Missionaries Tell How the Reds Mob Churches.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 5.—An American Lutheran missionary who had been driven from the interior by the anti-foreign, anti-Christian movement of the bolshevized followers of the south Chinese forces met me on the street and remarked: "Well, they are still at it in the Wuhan cities. I have just received word that at one of our churches outside Hanyang (which with Hankow and Wuchang make up the Wuhan group), the native preacher was driven from the pulpit, which was occupied by one of the men in Cantonese uniform, who delivered an anti-Christian address combined with the Three Peoples' principles of Sun Yat-sen."

I turned a weary ear. Here we were, well into the Chinese new year, which was celebrated Feb. 2, and the same anti-Christian campaign that was launched at Christmas time was still in progress. By now we had gotten used to it.

Day by day the stories come drifting in, for some of the missionaries are trying to stick to their posts despite the many handicaps and despite the pleadings of the consuls to get out of the danger zone. The idea of martyrdom was instilled in them by the early Christians in Judea and elsewhere and so they remain in their stations.

One Missionary's Story.

Now and then one of these takes an afternoon off to let us know how things are going. Here are some excerpts from one missionary in Changteh, the second city in Human and the gateway to the great Yuan valley, in which are hemmed so many missionaries who did not get the word in time, chiefly American Passionist Fathers, American Reformed church, and the London Mission workers:

"The orgy of unionizing continues with increasing fury," he writes. [Orgy and fury are the right words to use, he parenthesized.] "These agents are trying to get every trade and profession unionized; they are even trying to compel our preachers to form a union. Our house servants and other employés have been compelled to join the Union of Foreigners' Employés by threats of violence, and of course the next step is to compel them to strike, whether they have any grievance or not, and make it as hard as possible for us to stay here at all, to say nothing of carrying on our work.

Seize Standard Oil Manager.

"The foreigners' employés in the city [Changteh] have long since been forced into joining, and now they are out here at Teh-shan. Besides our boys' school there are at Teh-shan the Standard Oil, Asiatic Petroleum, and Texas Oil companies' plants. So yesterday a mob came down from the city and forced all the employés here to join. Those of the Standard Oil company cleared out to avoid them, so they demanded that the manager pay the entrance fees for them. On his refusal they seized him and tied him up until he complied.

"There is some sort of parade or demonstration nearly every day, so that soon there will be no work done and no classes held in the schools. Because our girls' school and that of the Alliance mission did not obey the summons to go out and join the anti-foreign parade the Students' union now threatens to take the teachers and drag them through the streets.

"Last Friday the students took it upon themselves to seal our churches. As the caretaker of the Alliance mission tore off the seal he was seized and dragged through the streets as a warning to others. Miss Von Gunten pluckily went to his rescue, but could do nothing, as soldiers and policemen to whom she appealed refused to aid. In fact, the police have issued an order that any one tearing down these placards will be punished, showing that the authorities not only will not protect us but are actually backing the students' and labor unions in their lawlessness. What a pitiful state of affairs, when a country is run by lawless schoolboys and thugs!

Calls Christianity Obsolete.

"Saturday was another big day, with parades and other threatening demonstrations in front of our hospital and other places. Here at Teh-shan the Farmers' union marched in front of our place, beating the walls and doors with their clubs. Then, on Sunday, the labor union representatives came and forced all our employés to join. They are ordered to turn out tomorrow for a big anti-foreign parade.

"Today about thirty students—both boys and girls—with a representative of the propaganda bureau and a military officer, came to the Presbyterian girls' school, saying they wished to look it over and also to speak to the students on the principles of Sun Yat-Sen. They acted in a very rude way and the propaganda man, though he proclaimed himself to be a church member, told the girls in his speech that Christianity is an obsolete religion, 2,000 years out of date, and proceeded to exalt Sunyatsenism as the only religion. Some of the students also spoke, abusing Christian schools in general, and one of them asserted that the foreigners' heads are empty except for the English language. I am ashamed to say that some of my own students were among this crowd."

As so the virus of bolshevism is being put into the blood of the Chinese converts to Christianity. The Catholic priests, meek and uncomplaining, have been driven from the altar during the mass and the holy pictures and other fittings destroyed. Native preachers in the Protestant churches are not allowed to speak at all.

LLOYD GEORGE SEES PARALLEL IN CHINA TO PRE-WORLD WAR DAYS

MIDDLESBROUGH, York, England, Feb. 5.—(AP)—David Lloyd George, the Liberal leader and former premier, tonight drew a comparison between some of the conditions leading up to the beginning of the world war in 1914 and those prevailing at present in the Chinese imbroglio. Alluding to the fact that the movement of British troops to China had interfered with negotiations between the British government and the Chinese government at Hankow, Mr. Lloyd George said:

"The sinister fact was that it was a premature movement of troops in 1914 that brought negotiations to an end and projected the great war. We must see that the same thing does not happen again."

The Liberal leader expressed the hope that the government would give heed to the suggestion, made in a spirit not of criticism but of helpfulness, that troops should not be landed at Shanghai, but retained at Hongkong or elsewhere within easy reach of Shanghai in case of trouble.

JAPAN WILL LAY OLD MIKADO TO REST TOMORROW

Grand State Funeral Will Cost $2,000,000.

BY RODERICK MATHESON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TOKIO, Feb. 5.—Miles of Tokio's streets are draped in black in readiness for the late Emperor Yoshihito's funeral on Monday. Along the route of the parade are hundreds of huge wooden lanterns, exquisitely carpentered, hundreds of cressets, elaborately sheathed in green bamboo, and hundreds of thirty-foot evergreen trees, transplanted for the occasion.

Although the cortège will leave the palace at 6 p. m., the streets will be closed to traffic at 4. The spectators are warned to be at their places at 2. Police expect 2,000,000 to view the funeral, which in many ways is to be more elaborate than anything in the history of Japan. It will cost 4,000,000 yen ($2,000,000).

Let Foreigners Watch.

All special envoys at the funeral will be given imperial decorations, with the exception of American Minister McVeagh, who is obliged to decline. Police are making special arrangements to allow all foreigners to watch the funeral from a reserved space before the foreign office. Amnesty for many hundreds of prisoners will be announced Monday.

The body of the emperor will be laid to rest at daybreak on Tuesday in a great mausoleum prepared for it on a beautiful hillside near his former capital, his gravesite commanding a view of Mount Fuji, the snow tipped eminence that all Japanese love.

Nine thousand of the nation's greatest are to witness the funeral services and 12,000 princes, ambassadors, nobles, army and navy officers, troops and priests will walk in the funeral parade.

Special Hearse Built.

For the funeral a special hearse has been built, fashioned by seventy of the most expert wood joiners of Japan and put together with as much care as would be given a jewel case; great pavilions have been erected for the funeral services, elaborately built and hand tooled throughout for only three hours of actual use; two special railway stations have been built, to be used only once; miles of new roads have been built for the special passing of the cortège.

The vast funeral train will wind through streets lighted only by torchlight, by flickering flames from iron braziers, fed with resinous pine, set out along the roadsides. All electric lights will be extinguished.

Hearse 23 Feet Long.

The hearse is a huge affair, 23 feet long, 11 feet from ground to catafalque top, and 13 feet wide between wheel hubs. Each of the two great wheels is 5 feet 9 inches in diameter. With each revolution each wheel must grind out, through friction between hub and axle, seven distinct and groaning notes, known as the "seven melancholy sounds." A pair of oxen, dun with white spots, both the color and the spots being specified in the funeral regulations handed down from antiquity, will draw the hearse. Relays of similar oxen will be held in reserve.

Throughout the length of the route every one must stand.

The Imperial Salute.

In Shinagawa bay, off the capital, seventy warships of the Japanese navy will be at anchor. Their guns will thunder their imperial salute as the funeral cortège threads the city streets.

Ahead of the funeral cortège will come the emperor, the dowager empress, the empress and the various imperial princesses, brought from the palace in red and gold automobiles.

The body will be placed on an altar in the great funeral pavilion, where the simple rites will be held.

In impressive silence the new emperor will walk to the front of the altar, bowing deeply to the coffin. Drawing a branch of evergreen sasaki from a heap close by he will place this before the altar, again bowing. Thrice he will dip into an incense holder and thrice sprinkle the incense upon the glowing charcoal of an incense burner, the sweet, heavy smoke of the incense rising about him. Then another bow to the dead, his former emperor and his father. Then he will read a message of grief to the people.

When he has retired other members of the royal family will bid farewell to the dead.

The service over, pallbearers will lift the casket and transport it by hand to the nearby railway station and the waiting funeral train. There will be 120 of these pallbearers.

Emperor's Raiment Used in Funeral Ceremonial

Buddhist priests of the Higashi-dera temple at Kioto, Japan, returning the raiment worn by the late Emperor Yoshihito to the imperial palace in Tokio after using it in a ceremonial which was part of the mourning rites. Yoshihito will be laid to rest tomorrow after an elaborate state funeral.

SCHOOL TEACHER IS WISCONSIN'S PRETTIEST PEACH

Tribune's $1,000 Prize to Kenosha-Oshkosh Girl.

BY ROBERTA NANGLE.

On Wisconsin! Northward turned the judges in their quest for the third big prize winner in THE TRIBUNE'S $20,000 search for the prettiest Peaches of the central states. The Badger state came forward with its quota of beauty in the person of Miss Alma Link of Kenosha and Oshkosh, and Miss Link will have the pleasure of cashing a TRIBUNE check for $1,000. If you haven't yet seen today's rotogravure picture section, now is the time to glance at it in order to get an idea of this young lady's face value. Photographs of the other prize Peaches of Wisconsin are on page 3 of the same section.

In addition to the $1,000 prize which goes with her selection as the prettiest Peach in Wisconsin, Miss Link is also in the running for the grand prize of $10,000, which will be bestowed on the queen of all the Peaches, the prettiest Peach in the five states covered by THE TRIBUNE'S search.

Miss Link was born in Oshkosh twenty-three years ago. For the last two years, however, she has been teaching English to the fifth and sixth grade pupils of the Durkee school in Kenosha. Hence, she spends only her summer holidays and occasional weekends in Oshkosh. Her picture was sent to THE TRIBUNE from Kenosha, so the contest judges feel that their good fortune in having found such a veritable Peach should be attributed to Kenosha as well as to her home town.

Miss Link is a patrician type—tall, slender, and distinguished. Her height, five feet seven inches, helps her wear clothes with unusually good effect. Her smart appearance on a recent visit to THE TRIBUNE indicates that she has a knowing sense of color and line. Certainly nothing could have been more appropriate and youthful than her straight, simple frock of black crêpe, with a narrow white collar and a touch of red at the belt by way of contrast.

Brown Hair, Violet Eyes.

The judges of the Peaches' search, Mrs. Pauline Palmer, Miss Antoinette Donnelly, and Mr. Karl Boehr, were charmed with Miss Link's beauty and sweetness of manner. She has thick, brown bobbed hair with a lovely burnished glint in it plus a soft, natural wave. Her skin is fair and smooth and her features small and dainty. The gods were especially kind when they gave her a pair of deep violet eyes that would provide a poet with an inspiration per look. Her small, well cut nose shows just the tiniest inclination to slant heavenward at the tip.

A long, slender neck, slim shoulders, and graceful arms are among the other beauty features with which Miss Link is blessed. All in all, this daughter of Wisconsin is an honor to her state.

On first meeting Miss Link she strikes one as being rather bashful, but further acquaintance proves that she is less bashful than reserved, and, once having overcome that instinctively modest reserve, one learns that she possesses sufficient cerebral equipment to give her an intelligent interest in and knowledge of things in general, thus proving again that beautiful and dumb are decidedly not twin adjectives.

Iowa's Peaches Next Sunday.

FREE GAS WITH WANT ADS MAKES DENVER A HEAVEN FOR AUTOISTS

Denver, Colo., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Fair weather and free gasoline indicates an enormous amount of motoring in this section of the country tomorrow.

Competition between two Denver newspapers for want ads resulted in offering of gasoline free with each ad costing 25 cents or more. The competition ended with one paper giving its want ad customers five gallons of gasoline with each ad and the other giving four gallons of gasoline with each want ad.

TODAY TO BE BOY SCOUT SUNDAY IN CITY'S CHURCHES

Celebration of Boy Scout Sunday today in Chicago churches of all denominations will be observed with special programs.

The three day merit badge exposition of the Scouts, closed last night at the 121st infantry armory, 16th street and Michigan avenue. The exhibit was attended by 30,000 persons and was declared to have been the most successful Scout show ever held in Chicago. Under the direction of James R. Forgan, the drive for $200,000 with which to carry on the work of the Scouts here during 1927 will be continued until Friday, it was announced yesterday.

State Bank of Harvey Opens Its New Building

The State Bank of Harvey formally opened its new building yesterday. Numerous Chicago banks sent flowers and the officials passed the day receiving congratulations and distributing souvenirs. This bank is the oldest in Thornton township, having been founded in 1891. G. A. Stevenson is president and F. E. Place vice president.

Italians Today Celebrate 25th Year of Banda Roma

Chicago Italians, headed by Señor L. Zunini, consul general, and Señor Fiore De Giorgio, are sponsoring a concert to be given this afternoon at the Workmen's Circle lyceum, Ogden and Kedzie avenues, by the Banda Roma, in celebration of the band's 25th anniversary. Señor L. Quaglia will conduct.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—(AP)—American participation in the Geneva economic conference called by the league of nations, was recommended to the senate today by President Coolidge.

Requesting an appropriation of $15,000 for the expenses of delegates to the conference, which will begin May 4, the President said that "this country should stand ready to aid in the study of means to promote economic progress." His recommendation went also to the house, and with it Mr. Coolidge forwarded a copy of the invitation from the council of the league of nations.

"I consider it important," the President said, "to participate in the appointment of members, not only in order that this government may be adequately informed of discussions in their relation to American interests, but also in order that the American point of view may be presented.

"The United States is taking its part in the study of the problem of arms limitation at the invitation of the league of nations. This country also stands ready to aid in the study of means to promote economic progress.

"This is not the occasion to discuss specific problems outlined in the agenda. It is sufficient to note that the conference contemplates an inquiry into important problems affecting American interests. This government will have the benefit of its deliberations, but will not be bound by its results."

WILL HOLD SERVICE HERE.

Japanese of Chicago will gather at the home of Teijiro Tamura, Japanese consul, 930 Castlewood terrace, early tomorrow morning to hold a memorial service for the late Emperor Yoshihito, whose funeral services will be in simultaneous progress in Tokio. The rites are scheduled to begin in Tokio at 6 p. m. tomorrow night, Japanese time, and will continue until dawn Tuesday, when the former ruler will be buried. Allowing for the difference of time between Chicago and Tokio, local Japanese have fixed their service for the hour between 7:42 and 8:42 a. m., as paralleling the most important part of the Tokio ceremonies.

SEIZES GIRL'S PURSE AND ESCAPES.

A youth yesterday snatched a handbag containing $300 from Miss Julia Seelig, 21, 3515 Greenview avenue, at Franklin street and Chicago avenue and was chased by pedestrians, but made his escape.

PALESTINE NOW OVERPOPULATED, LIPSKY ASSERTS

Many thousands of Jews, flocking to Palestine as to Utopia, have overpopulated a land that is inadequate at present to support them, and the resultant strain on the Zionist organization which sought to prepare the country for them gradually has brought suffering and misery, it was asserted yesterday by Louis Lipsky, president of the Zionists, who has just returned from Palestine.

This afternoon Mr. Lipsky will tell of conditions in Palestine as he found them, before members of the Chicago lodges of the Independent Order of B'Nai Sholom at the Herzl community center, 1235 North California avenue. He also will confer with Judge Harry Fisher on the possibility of augmenting Chicago's contributions to the Zionist movement.

Break Ground for New Children's Home Addition

Ground was broken yesterday at Edison, Ill., for a new $50,000 building, an addition to the plant of the Norwegian Lutheran Children's home. A bequest of $50,000 has also been received by the home from the estate of O. Uthus, commission merchant, which will be used to erect another building in which to house the older boys at the institution. The Rev. A. M. Runden, president of the institution, officiated at the services.

Wins $50,000 Damages for Injuries in Taxi Accident

William Meyers, 28 years old, 4466 West Jackson boulevard, yesterday was awarded $50,000 damages in his suit against the Yellow Cab company in connection with an accident two years ago, when he was struck by a cab and injured. Testimony at the trial brought out that Meyers had suffered a skull fracture and had been unconscious 11 days after the accident.

WOMAN ROBBED ON STREET.

Miss Mae B. Raymond, 2425 Garfield avenue, was robbed of $12 and a watch last night by an armed bandit as she was walking on Lincoln avenue near Garfield avenue, she reported to the Hudson avenue police.

MAKES RECORD FLIGHT WITH WOUNDED MAN TO ARMY HOSPITAL

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Landing at Fort Sam Houston late today with Lieut. Fraser Richardson, 12th cavalry, who was injured at Fort Ringgold, on the Mexican border, a Kelly field aviator completed probably the longest and fastest ambulance run on record.

The dash of approximately 500 miles from San Antonio to the border post and back was made by Master Sergeant E. F. Nendell in the Kelly field aerial ambulance at a speed of more than 100 miles an hour.

Lieut. Richardson, whose skull was fractured when a gun was discharged accidentally, was taken to the base hospital at Fort Sam Houston, where he underwent an operation tonight.

Committee Will Hear Expert Appraisal Plans

Commissioner Harry S. Newby, chairman of the finance committee of the county board, announced yesterday that concerns making a specialty of real estate appraisals would be given an opportunity to explain their methods at a meeting of his committee at 11 a. m. tomorrow in the County building. Since President Cermak recently suggested a new basis for determining assessment valuations there have been a number of offers by professional appraisers to show how assessments can be raised or equalized.

Coroner Told of Death, but Patient Is Alive

Oscar Nicholson, 10503 Turner avenue, whose back was broken in a fall a year ago, lapsed into a coma last night and his wife believed he was dead. She called Dr. John C. Smith, 2227 South 52d avenue. Dr. Smith notified the coroner's office of the death. Then he went to the home and found that Nicholson was alive. In his second report to the coroner the physician said his patient's condition was critical.

Brings Simply Told Science Into Homes.

health in the school of medicine of Yale university, and on a fly leaf of his book he had written these words:

"With keen admiration of what Dr. Bundesen has done to make the Chicago health department a model of administrative efficiency."

Later I asked Dr. Bundesen whether I might copy those encomiums.

All the German formalism of the man's inheritance came out in the sharp glance he gave me.

"Why—why, I suppose so," said he, meaning, "I recognize if not admire your cheek."

"The inscriptions," said I, "tell better than I know how to tell it something I want to tell."

"O, is that it?" said he—with a certain dryness.

Anyway, that is what the Johns Hopkins and Yale experts think of the physician and administrator whom our Northwestern university's school of medicine trained seventeen years ago.

Here's Real Best Seller.

The commissioner, reaching for a 72 page booklet that was bound in light green covers decked with pink babies in seven engaging stages of dress and undress and that, as to front cover, was lettered in red with the title "Our Babies: Chicago's Health"—reaching for that, I say, and parentally holding it up, the commissioner continued:

"I wrote this. It took me two years, and, if I do say it, it's a best seller of the ages. Five million copies have been printed. Every baby that's been born in Chicago in the last two years has received one. The babies that are coming will each receive a copy as long as I am here—and all without a nickel's cost to the taxpayers.

Public Spirit Pays for It.

"The first issue of 150,000 copies cost $42,000. John Hertz, the taxi man, and William Wrigley Jr. and Samuel Insull and John R. Thompson and the late Victor Lawson financed this town's baby book. Now Cleveland, Minneapolis and eighteen other American cities are using it as is. The Prudential Life Insurance company has ordered 750,000 copies for distribution at one whack, and a large chain store system is putting 3,000,000 copies on sale at 10 cents a copy. They are not doing it for profit. 'Our Babies' costs 9½ cents a copy to print.

"Do you know what that best seller has done? It's got 75 per cent of the new mothers of each year in Chicago writing to their Chicago department of public health about their new babies!

"How did it all start, and what's the purpose, and what has been accomplished? I'll tell you.

Former Baby Death Rate High.

"Five years ago today the records showed that for years Chicago had had a very unfavorable death rate among babies one year old or less, as compared with other large cities, although our death rate for adults had been and still is low. So we took invoices and made audits to find out why we were not making the progress we should in reducing the rate of infant mortality.

"One of the first facts we learned was that every new mother in Chicago was receiving from 90 to 107 calls a year from agents for patented baby foods and various baby appurtenances who urged those mothers to try the foods and devices on the grounds of how easy it was not to breast feed the baby, and of how such feeding was pulling the mothers down, and what not.

"Then we checked back and across on the data we had gathered and we established for ourselves the fact—long known in medical circles—that the breast fed baby is the best fed baby and that the best fed baby has, naturally, the best chance of living through its trying first year.

Sees Need of Education.

"I felt that the only thing to do was for Chicago to educate its mothers and see that all its babies were breast fed.

"And the first step toward that end was to stop the traffic in baby decoctions and devices with its consequences of deceived mothers and ailing babies. The way to do that was to stop the publication of the department of health's birth lists from which the agents obtained the names that were the source of their livelihood.

"By order we stopped such publication.

"There was loud bluster by the patented food concerns. Suits were threatened. No suit has ever been brought. This department doesn't bluff or be bluffed worth a damn.

"Then the concerns tried cajolery. Each of four of them offered fifty cents a name for the daily baby lists. The department declined the bribe. Some said that taking that kind of money was no crime, that it was being done in this or that city, and that we were 'damned fools' not to take it.

"Well, then, that's the kind of fools we are.

Bundesen's View Different.

"But is a public official a fool not to be willing to trade babies' lives for dirty money? Ask the babies' mothers.

"As the next step, I wrote the book, 'Our Babies,' for we started with the proposition that, in a campaign which was to reach both the ignorant and the indifferent, publicity was the thing."

Again the author of the best seller that has run to a printing of five million copies since Oct. 25, 1925, held up his vivid seventy-two page pamphlet.

"You see," he continued, "how it is stripped of all technical language and how full of pictures it is. I like the dedication—'To the Mothers whose Babies of Today will be the Men and Women of Tomorrow this Book is Dedicated.'

"And how do you like the first paragraph of the first chapter? Only five sentences and mostly one syllable words, but I think it tells a good deal that is vital."

Vital Advice Simply Given.

The commissioner read that paragraph aloud with the fervor of a parson preaching salvation—

> To nurse her baby at the breast is the the first duty of every healthy mother. Nearly every mother can nurse her baby for a time, at least, if she takes the right care of herself by getting proper sleep, rest, and food, and by attending to her general health. After the baby is born the mother should stay in bed until the doctor allows her to get up. Practically no doctors permit mothers to get up before the tenth day. While she is in bed she should have a light diet of fruits, milk, ice cream, cereals, soups, and the like.

"And so on," said the preacher—I mean the physician.

Feeding Mothers and Babies.

"And so on—specific instruction on correct exercises, correct clothing, and correct food for the nursing mother; pictorial emphasis for her of the solemn fact that ten bottle-fed babies die before they are a year old to one that is nursed by its mother; directions on how the mother can empty her breast if her baby has not emptied it when it has finished feeding—that emptying being highly important because the unemptied breast is the principal source of premature drying up of the mother's milk, and hence the cause of premature weaning."

The book is, indeed, a marvel of easily comprehended details. Scores upon scores of details! Details on proper weaning, on infantile ailments, on the baby's bath and bed, and on the importance to the baby of sunshine—that last emphasized by the familiar comparison of the vivid green grass exposed to sunlight and the yellow dying grass over which a plank has been thrown, and the illustration of two chickens of the same age, the one meager and pitiful for lack of sunshine, the other big and thriving. Similarly an anti-scurvy diet for the baby is pictured so simply and strikingly that a mother never can forget it.

Proves Value of Pictures.

"You see," said the commissioner, "how all the department's health literature is sold on pictures."

Now the benefaction of this literature lies not alone in its readableness but in the expeditiousness with which it is circulated.

Within three or four days after the birth the mother of every baby born in Chicago receives a copy of "Our Babies" from the hands of a department nurse who calls at the mother's home.

Not only that.

Every month thereafter mother receives by mail during the first year of her baby's existence a handsomely printed, copiously illustrated pamphlet from four to eight pages. These twelve pamphlets, for which an attractive binder is provided, cost free, make at the end of the year a book which is entitled on the binder "The Baby and You." It goes into more detail than "Our Babies" does, and the adroit system of month to month mailing gives it an instant and flattering timeliness in the mother's eyes.

Every year a total of 744,000 copies of the "Baby and You" pamphlets are sent by Chicago, cost free, to the mothers of Chicago.

Nor are "Our Babies" and "The Baby and You" all.

Special Hints Are Sent.

At summer complaint time and at cold catching time postal cards telling the new mother how to take her baby safely through those periods are sent out by the department. Those cards total at least three a year.

And soon after her baby's birth the mother receives, cost free, from the department a daintily printed birth certificate—blue ribbon under the gilt paper seal for the boys, and pink ribbon for the girls—and on the back of the certificate a list of seven important business and citizenship reasons why mother should carefully preserve the certificate. For such a certificate for his child the Chicago citizen used to be charged 50 cents and subjected to wearisome delay at the city hall when he applied for the document. Now it is courteously delivered to him.

Even Get Birthday Letters.

And when her baby is a year old every Chicago mother receives a congratulatory birthday letter from the department. It is a charmingly written letter, intimate, courtly, humane. Dr. Bundesen composed it on behalf of the department.

Here is one of its five paragraphs:

> "A mother may forget a lot of things, but never her baby's birthday. I, too, remember it. That's why I send you this letter—to share in the joy of your baby's first year."

And it closes with these words:

> "If we can help you at any time we want you to call on us. Most cordially yours, Herman N. Bundesen, M. D., Commissioner of Health."

Now from those data on departmental literature I ciphered out one of the most remarkable facts in the annals of modern humanitarianism and of the social science of which humanitarianism is the parent.

It is this:

The mothers of the 62,000 babies born annually in Chicago annualy receive free from the Chicago department of health 1,116,000 pieces of scientific and social literature bearing on the health and happiness of their babies!

Cipher it out for yourself: 62,000 copies of "Our Babies"; 744,000 copies of "Baby and You" in twelve installments; 186,000 postal cards; 62,000 birth certificates; 62,000 birthday letters. Total, 1,116,000.

Do the mothers appreciate that literature?

From scores of letters of acknowledgment that I glanced at in the files of the department I selected the subjoined letter, partly because it was written in a script like copper plate and partly because it is so obviously sincere. It came from a home on North Ashland avenue, and, beginning "Dear Sir and Friend," it reads:

> "I want to thank you most sincerely for the birthday greeting that came to our home this afternoon and for the helpful, interesting bulletins we have received through the year. I have kept them all and filed them so that I can refer to them often. Both my husband and I feel we cannot be without the help they contain—they are so practical and seem to fit our particular need so often. Time and again we would turn to them to see if we were doing the best for our child. This is our first baby and I am glad to say she has a strong, well body and a happy disposition. Cod liver oil and fresh air have done this.
> "We are trying to train her to be a useful citizen as well as to spread sunshine and joy wherever she goes.
> "We feel we cannot thank you enough for your kind interest and help to folks who want to do all they can for their little ones and don't know where or how to begin."

Doctor Picks Critics Well.

One guess, now, as to who were the final critics on the style of "Our Babies." They were a scrubwoman in the health department and Laura-Belle Bundesen, aged 10. When Dr. Bundesen had finished the book and was about to send the MS. to the printer he bethought himself of the Polish or other foreign born mother, perhaps only two years in this country and still struggling with our language. So a scrubwoman was called to hear the MS. slowly read. Any sentence she did not understand was simplified.

Then Laura-Belle listened and any sentence she did not understand was recast for simplicity's sake. Her father says she was rather severe with him at times—severe but just.

You have been told that the commissioner gave THE TRIBUNE six reasons why he wished to make Chicago's babies the theme of his anniversary message to you.

Laura-Belle is one of them.

The other five are her sisters and brothers, Rega Jane, aged 17 years; Herman Jr., aged 15; Russell, aged 14; Betty, aged 6, and William Evans, aged 3.

In other words, the prime specialty and pride of Herman Bundesen and his wife—she was Rega Russell of Chicago before her marriage—have been for the last seventeen years their own babies. Their specialty has given them broad vision.

They desire all their fellow citizens to be enthusiasts about babies and mothers, because they know that such enthusiasm is the first step toward the creation of a sound citizenry. Their economic and ethical ideal is well babies and informed and successful mothers—successful because they are informed.

Die of Prenatal Causes.

Hence the commissioner's third book, "Before the Baby Comes." He wrote it because he discovered that, as he puts it, "Of the Chicago babies that die within their first year, 40 per cent die during the first ten days of life, and these deaths are almost wholly due to prenatal causes, the vast majority of which could be eliminated if the expectant mother were an informed woman. To inform her is the purpose of the 64 page, lavishly pictorialized brochure called "Before the Baby Comes." The department circulates 107,000 copies of it annually—sending 25,000 copies to newly married women, 62,000 to recent mothers on the chance that they may again bear a child, and 20,000 to mothers who lost a child or had a stillbirth.

Another Bundesen book for free distribution to mothers will appear within 90 days. Its theme is the care of the child from its third to its 15th year. It will contain 175 pages and more than 200 pictures. The commissioner has been at work on it for 15 months.

Some Other Health Warnings.

All this free departmental literature was a bitter pill to frauds who would present themselves to a new mother with the words "I'm from the health department," and, with that introduction, would often end by wheedling the anxious woman into signing a tricky contract for sometimes as high as $21 worth of baby books, baby foods and baby contraptions. The department sends by mail 62,000 fraud warnings a year against these vermin.

But, suppose mother and baby move away from Chicago during the first year of the baby's life, what becomes of their share of the department's free literature?

Bundesen said it.

"Why, we of Chicago love every Chicago baby, no matter where it goes to live. So if the mother left the new address at her former home we continue sending our literature to that address for the rest of the critical first year, and if she didn't leave it we try to find it among her neighbors or with the assistance of Postmaster Lauder, who has been a wonderful help to use. The result is that out of every hundred letters returned to us for lack of the new address we ultimately salvage 90."

Another point in this story of public business transacted with the precision and solicitude which competent business men give to their private affairs: Birth reports used to reach the health department in one, two, or three months. The average report of a birth did not get in within six weeks. Now they arrive within ten days.

Problem of Leadership.

I wondered whether the many changes of method and spirit I came upon might not be the result of having a great city's department of health managed by healers instead of heelers—ward or otherwise.

The commissioner was especially anxious that THE TRIBUNE should make known to the public his gratitude for the work of the Infant Welfare society with 26 stations in areas where the city has no stations. "An invaluable help to us!" he exclaimed. "Please don't forget to mention it. It's magnificent."

So, with an 842 page departmental annual report under my arm, and 16 pages of loose-leaf statistical tables, and five photostats, and three Bundesen baby brochures, and five form letters to mothers, and twenty pages of my own rough-hewn notes of the commissioner's conversation, I took my leave of one of the very remarkable men of Chicago—a man whose farewell words were, "Impress upon the mothers that it's better and happier for all concerned to keep a well baby well than cure a sick one. That's the keynote. That's why this department is trying to weave the heartstrings of Chicago mothers around it."

JORDAN HAS CUT $500

NOW you can buy the Jordan Line Eight enclosed models at the startling price of $1695—only $1545 for the Playboy.

Jordan set the pace in the medium price straight eight field two years ago.

Now nineteen manufacturers out of forty-four are building eight cylinder cars. Fifteen of these are building straight eights.

When Jordan introduced the Light Eight only one other manufacturer had caught the trend of public demand.

Now Jordan has reduced the price of the Line Eight $500.

That means a tremendous demand which the factory cannot possibly satisfy immediately.

The Jordan Line Eight will continue to be not only the leader of the Jordan line but the leader of all competition in price and quality.

LITSINGER MEN CHARGE PADDING OF POLL BOOKS

Thompson Strongholds Hit by Election Board.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Charges by the Deneen-Brundage-Litsinger camp that thousands of stingers and floaters were registered in the Negro wards in a colonization plan promoted by the Thompson-Crowe-Galpin camp, awoke the echoes last night when the judges and clerks of election made the regular revision of the register. Here's the one-two in the night's betting:

1—Revision night, according to election board estimates, knocked off between 35,000 and 40,000 names of persons who have moved or died, or who were not located at given addresses during the canvass. It still leaves Chicago's registration, they say, above the million mark. The election board, under orders of Judge Jarecki, will start tomorrow on inquiry into charges of fraudulent registration still on the books.

2—Copies of Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder's statement in December ripping into William Hale Thompson for "audacious effrontery" in appealing for the German-American vote were sent broadcast in the mails by Dr. John Dill Robertson, the Lundin independent candidate. This is regarded by politicians as an assist from Robertson to Litsinger.

3—Crowe-Galpin-Thompson forces in retaliation charge Deneen-Brundage with padding the registry books in some west side wards.

Say Thompson Is Losing.

The Litsinger managers declared that Thompson has slipped in the last week and that he is leaning on the 2d, 34, and 4th wards, predominantly Negro and is seeking to repeat 1915 when the Second ward gave him votes enough to win the nomiantion over Judge Harry Olson.

Exactly how many names were knocked off the books last night will not be known for a day or two until the election board figures up the totals. Another crop of suspect notices is to be filed with the board as fast as a check up can be made. The Deneen-Brundage leaders say they received reports from canvassers in five Second ward precincts yesterday. Their press statement continued:

"The reports indicated that from six to twelve names were registered from one and two room addresses. In one typical instance near Twenty-eighth street and Wentworth avenue, seven supposed voters, previously unregistered, named 'Bell' and two named 'Harriet' were recorded as registering last Tuesday from one small flat. None of the nine could be found by Deneen-Brundage-Litsinger canvassers.

Prove Hard to Find.

"At another address in South Wabash avenue, thirteen persons were registered from the same address, and canvassers were unable to find trace of any of the thirteen.

"In the 3d ward where Representative Warren B. Douglas is the Deneen-Brundage committeeman, 10,000 new names were reported as registered Tuesday. Last night's revision based on the canvass, it was predicted by Douglas, would result in the removal of 4,000 names placed there in a deliberate attempt to colonize enough votes in every precinct to carry the ward overwhelmingly for Thompson over Litsinger.

"On the west side Sol P. Roderick, head of the Litsinger fraud prevention division, is centering similar efforts toward 'knocking off' thousands of names palpably fraudulent in wards such as the 27th where Thompson forces are led by Homer K. Galpin."

Say Litsinger Is Beaten.

The Thompson-Crowe-Galpin forces, by way of reply, said: "It's the old game; when you're beaten cry 'fraud.'"

The message of Postmaster Lueder, who was Republican nominee for mayor against Dever four years ago, declining in December a request that he run again this time, as revived by Dr. Robertson for widespread circulation, indicates the great struggle made by the rival camps for the German-American vote. Mr. Lueder tore the hide off Mr. Thompson, ex-bosom friend of Robertson-Lundin.

"I believe William Hale Thompson coming before the Republican voters at this time," says the Lueder message, "and asking their support after having only four years ago used his then great pay roll machine to defeat the expressed wishes of the Republicans, is displaying an effrontery never before equaled by any man.

Charges Thompson Trickery.

"After his betrayal of the Republican party four years ago and after his failure to give the German-American any recognition while mayor, he again is bidding for their support largely because of his having been influenced to give voice to certain American principles a decade ago.

"The war is over. What appeal does he seek to make now? First, with a colossal lack of modesty he reminds us that at one time, ten years ago, he was called 'Kaiser Bill.' And secondly, he points to his stand on the prohibition question and thereby seems to feel he is entitled to our support.

"No words can express the full degree of resentment on the part of the better element of the German-Americans toward this cheap political makeshift."

Supply Comic Touch.

Two comic cracks eased up the day's strain on the politicians. Barratt O'Hara, running single footed against Mayor Dever in the Democratic primaries, who recently declared he would refuse to spend $250,000 on his campaign, put forth last night another wheeze: "If Mr. Dever is a wet candidate, as he now labels himself, then the desert of Sahara is a swimming pool."

And Mr. Thompson, commenting on Mr. Litsinger's recent proposal that candidates take a physical test, said to a night audience: "I saw Mr. Litsinger's picture in his gym suit in the papers. All I can say is he'd get more votes if he kept his clothes on."

OPERA STAR HERE

MISS MARY McCORMIC.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

STYLES BEAT HER ACROSS OCEAN, SINGER DECLARES

But late yesterday afternoon, as she sat in her suite at the Belmont hotel, superintending the unpacking of the luggage, she couldn't quite make up her mind whether her clothes were different enough to make news.

"Chicago women," said Miss McCormic, "are such speedy dressers. I mean, of course, that they are so quick to sense new fashions and modes in the style trends of other countries that one may purchase the very latest thing on the Rue de la Paix and step off a train in Chicago to meet the same or nearly the same thing. I can't yet tell whether the things I have brought from Paris are new or different."

Miss McCormic, the Arkansas choir singer who entered the Chicago Civic Opera company several years ago under the patronage of Mary Garden, returns to Chicago after an absence of two years, to a concert tour of the middle west. Her first concert will be in Mississippi next week.

EIGHT ALDERMEN TO HOLD SEATS WITHOUT FIGHT

Hard Race for Fick, Mills, Mendel and Nusser.

One more city council candidate, Ald. John Clark [30] was assured of reelection yesterday when his only opponent, John A. Dunn, withdrew. Ald. Clark's next term will be his sixth.

With the withdrawal of Mr. Dunn the list of aldermanic aspirants who are saved the trouble of campaigning was increased to eight, all of them Democrats. This circumstance is said by the Brennan group to be proof of public satisfaction with the Dever administration.

Five of the winners, incidentally, come from west side wards. In addition to Ald. Clark, they are:

Ald. Jacob M. Arvey [24], Ald. George M. Maypole [28], Ald. A. J. Horan [29], and James B. Bowler, slated to succeed Ald. John Powers [35]. Bowler is an ex-alderman, having served with Ald. Powers when each ward had two representatives.

Arvey Dever Council Leader.

The Brennanites also point out that Ald. Arvey is Mayor Dever's floor leader, while Ald. Horan is known as his "junior floor leader." Horan acquired that title when he brought in a minority report favoring the mayor's hollow tile ordinance and fought it through the council.

In contrast with the peaceful victories of those candidates, however, the west side promises fireworks in the 20th, 26th, 36th, and 37th wards.

The biggest noise, so far, is coming from the 20th ward. There an organization, that of Ald. Henry L. Fick, a veteran of 30 years council service, is tottering. Branding him "an old time gray wolf and obstructionist," the Municipal Voters' league has been out for Ald. Fick's scalp for years.

Facing Strong Opposition.

Against Ald. Fick is A. J. Brignano, also a Democrat, who is backed by the Dennis J. Egan-Bart Collins faction which has disowned Fick. Equally strong is Ernest Kunde, Fick's opponent in 1923, with the support of Morris Eller, Republican ward boss. A fourth entry is Simon A. Murray.

Similar row has developed in the 26th ward. There three candidates are seeking Ald. Joseph Mendel's job in the council. Among other things, he is accused of neglecting ward affairs.

Attorney Rocco De Stefano, a Democrat, Frank A. Sloan, Republican, a nephew of the late John J. Sloan, and Edward Skarda, Democrat, a bailiff in Judge Jarecki's court, are Ald. Mendel's opponents. Skarda ran against him in 1925.

Nusser's Campaign Fight.

Ald. Eugene L. Nusser [34] also seems to be having the fight of his career against William Rieger, president of the northwest park district. Both are Republicans.

Nusser is backed by George Hitzman, Crowe-Barrett boss, against whom Rieger revolted and whipped in a park scrap several years ago. Rieger has the support of the Litsinger forces, in addition to his park patronage. Fred J. Steuber, a law clerk in the office of the clerk of the circuit court, is running as a free lance.

Ald. Wiley W. Mills [37] has the distinction of having more opponents than any other west side councilman. There are seven: Bert Fairchild, Democratic county employé; Edward H. Fedderson, an Austin high school teacher; John Lindholm, James A. Donneley, and Thomas A. Snyder. The latter is a Thompson candidate.

Ald. Mills is stamped as "honest" by the M. V. L., but his reputation as a reformer and a dry may hurt him with some constituents. Mayor Dever, it is understood, is supporting him.

Ald. D. A. Horan, a Democrat, finishing his seventh year in the council, has two opponents, Joseph J. Radomski, an auditor, and John Stoker, a variety store owner, but neither has shown much strength. Ald. Horan, according to the M. V. L. has "a record showing great improvement" as chairman of the streets and alleys committee and should be reelected.

Toman Aided by Dever.

Deneen and Thompson forces have joined in the 23d ward behind Fred Belsan, a bricklayer, to beat Ald. John Toman [23d] but there is no sign that Toman, who has served 12 years has lost any of his popularity. He has the full support of Mayor Dever and is confident he will win in the first election. Winfield J. Held, an ex-alderman, also will be on the ballot.

Ald. Joseph Cepak [22d]. Anton J. Cermak's candidate, should have a return, the experts say. Anthony L. Gofusnski, Frank J. Sebek, and Rudolph Mulac have filed petitions, but none, excepting Mulac, a Republican and former alderman, are causing Cepak any anxiety.

The 27th ward seat, left vacant by John J. Touhy, now a sanitary district trustee, probably will be filled by Representative Harry C. Van Norman now serving a third term in the legislature. He is backed by the Touhy organization. James V. Marquis and Peter Leonardi have filed against him, but, unless there is an upset, the prognosticators say, he will have a walkaway. In the voting, Feb. 22, the ward aspirants getting a majority of the votes will be elected aldermen, but in case of only a plurality the two highest will go on the ballot for the city election, April 5. The aldermanic tickets are without party designation.

KILLS BANDIT IN FACE OF BULLETS; WINS HERO AWARD

Sergt. Curtin Given $100 Prize by Tribune.

In his hazardous work of protecting life and property, veteran officers say, a policeman's success in thwarting a criminal frequently hinges on three factors—quick thinking, courage in the face of danger, and accurate shooting.

All three of these qualities, to a marked degree, were displayed by Detective Sergt. Michael Curtin, winner of THE TRIBUNE'S $100 hero award for January, in a battle with three bandits on the night of Jan. 13. He killed one of them.

Accompanied by Sergt. David Carney, who is his partner at the Wabash avenue station, Sergt. Curtin was returning from the loop when they noticed three men, one carrying a gun. As they watched, the trio approached a tailor shop at 2835 Indiana avenue.

Kills His Assailant.

Sergt. Curtain jumped from his automobile and confronted the bandits. At the same time, the armed man whipped out his gun to fire and the policeman grappled with him. The gunman broke away, again trying to get his revolver into action. Curtin, in the struggle, had drawn his own weapon. He fired one shot and his assailant fell, a bullet through his heart.

The man was later identified as Joseph Brooks, address unknown. He had a police record, and with his companions was credited with a number of south side robberies.

As Brooks fell, Sergt. Carney reached the scene, and with Sergt. Curtin ran in pursuit of the other two bandits. Upon reaching an alley east of Indiana avenue the men separated and escaped in the snow and darkness.

Druggist Tells of Fight.

A story of the affray, as told in a report by the two officers, was verified by W. A. Bredenbeck, druggist at the corner where it took place. Sergt. Curtin showed extreme courage in approaching the men without waiting for his partner, Bredenbeck declared.

Sergt. Curtin is 29 years old and has been on the force nine years. He is unmarried, living with his parents at 7944 Loomis street.

Two other acts of bravery by another policeman and by a fireman stand out on the records of the forces for January. Both received consideration for THE TRIBUNE'S trophy.

The policeman was Patrolman Joseph Baginski, 29th district, who entered a bedroom in a house at 637 Cass street, in which A. D. Fox, said to be demented, had barricaded himself after an alleged attempt to kill his mother with an ax. He was armed with a rifle and threatened to shoot any one who tried to capture him.

Fireman Displays Bravery.

Behind a bullet shield, Baginski entered the room, Fox firing two or three times and striking the policeman on the head with his rifle as the two grappled. He also reached for a hatchet on the table, but was overpowered before he could use it.

Although he did not risk his life, the bravery of the fireman, Arthur MacGarry of squad 9, company 59, was the most unique of the month.

MacGarry's squad was the first to arrive at the Ashland avenue bridge over Bubbly creek after a closed automobile had crashed through the railing, trapping and drowning two women occupants. Spectators reported that two other persons were caught beneath the machine and MacGarry plunged in to search for them.

Although the creek reeked with half frozen, poisonous sewage, the fireman dived under the surface again and again before he was convinced there were no other victims. MacGarry had been cited for bravery twice before.

Honorable mention this month goes to Probationary Policeman Benjamin Marcus, 20th district, who rescued a child from a burning building at Roosevelt road and Central Park avenue Jan. 27, after having warned other occupants of the building in time to permit their escape.

Stork Brings Ship Passenger a Boy in Eighty Mile Gale

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Master Umberto Giuseppi Giovanni Pitoni, two days old and the possessor of 5,000 lire, arrived today aboard the Lloyd Sabaudo liner Conte Biancamano. The child was born Thursday morning, during the height of an eighty mile gale, to Mr. and Mrs. Angelo Pitoni of Easton, Pa., who were returning from a visit to Italy. A purse of 5,000 lire, collected among the passengers by Capt. Giuseppi Turchi, was presented to the infant.

SCHOOL HEADS OPEN DRIVE TO PROTECT PUPILS

Principals Act Following Senn High Expose.

A concerted drive by police, school authorities, and the courts to safeguard pupils in Chicago schools from surroundings such as have been revealed in the Senn high school inquiry appeared imminent yesterday after a special meeting of high school principals at the Hamilton club. Superintendent of Schools William McAndrew attended the meeting, which was held behind closed doors.

Denials were made that the conference had centered its attention on the case of any one high school or elementary school. Juvenile crime and its prevention were discussed as a general topic, those attending the meeting said. Addresses were made by Judge Daniel Trude of the Boys' court and Judge Mary Bartelme of the Juvenile court, both of whom had recommendations to offer the school authorities as preventive measures.

Student Meetings Planned.

An inkling of the probable form of procedure was given by Hiram B. Loomis, principal of the Hyde Park high school.

"My intention is," he said, "to take up this matter with the students in groups. These neighborhood hangouts have always existed in the vicinity of Hyde Park high school, and I have had excellent cooperation from the police in eradicating the nuisances whenever I learned of them in operation.

"It is my impression that matters are not so bad in my district as reported from the Senn high school district. I do know that the boys meet in such places and smoke, and undoubtedly there is some gambling. But we have had only four students appear at classes during the last four years under the influence of liquor, and drinking has not become evident as a vice among the student body.

Girls Get Clean Bill.

"As for the girls, some of them may smoke in their own homes, but the dean of girls advised me that she had never been able to detect the odor of cigaret smoke on any girl student at our school."

A close surveillance of boy and girl truants by an officer detailed for that purpose was suggested to the principals by Judge Bartelme in her address, in order that their tendencies might be directed into proper channels and not allowed to bring them eventually into court.

Urged Moron Home.

In similar vein, Judge Trude advised the educators to endorse a bill that is being prepared for presentation in the Illinois assembly to provide a farm where potential morons may be segregated.

The student council of the Francis W. Parker high school, where Butler Laughlin is principal, will send letters requesting the cooperation of parents in keeping their boys and girls away from these meeting places within a few days.

A protest massmeeting of Senn students has been called for tomorrow morning by John Read, 1426 Berwyn avenue, a senior. The object of the meeting is to seek vindication for the general student body, who assert they are being charged with the derelictions of a few.

Ald. W. H. Pontow of the Fiftieth ward declared he expected to present the matter to the city council at its meeting next Wednesday.

JAIL SIX YOUTHS FOR ATTACKS ON 2 YOUNG GIRLS

Victims Placed Under the Care of Doctors.

Two young girls were under the care of physicians yesterday and six youths were facing prosecution for criminally attacking the girls after picking them up along Chicago boulevards.

In one case three of the boys were held on complaint of a 20 year old north side girl. Two of the defendants, George Burns, 21, of 1457 Leland avenue, a chauffeur, and Ray F. Morgan, 22, of 833 Galt avenue, a solicitor, were charged with rape by Town Hall police after the girl had told her story.

Model Is Other Victim.

In the other case three west side youths were in custody of Lawndale police on charges of having lured a 19 year old artists' model on an auto trip into the country and attacking her a number of times. The girl finally escaped at Kedzie and Ogden avenues and ran to a squad of detective sergeants whose auto was parked near by.

The defendants in the latter case are Albert Kooperman, 21, of 1521 South Springfield avenue, son of Harry Kooperman, owner of a clothing store at 602 Roosevelt road; Edward McDermott, 23, of 4102 Cullerton street, and Frank McConnell, 25, of 1240 South Tripp avenue.

In the north side case, the victim said that she first met Burns two weeks ago.

"I was waiting for a bus on Sheridan road," she said, "when this man [pointing out Burns to Assistant State's Attorney Joseph Nicolai] drove by in a big car and offered to drive me downtown. He seemed to be a nice fellow and persuaded me to give him my telephone number."

Invited to Party.

Early Friday night, the girl said, Burns called her up and invited her to a party at the home of a "wealthy doctor friend." The "wealthy doctor" turned out to be Morgan, said the boys' accuser, and soon a wild party was in progress at the Galt avenue apartment.

"They tried to make me drink moonshine, but I wouldn't," she said. "Then Burns and Harvey slapped me viciously several times. Later Burns and Morgan dragged me into a bedroom and both attacked me."

The girl, escaping early yesterday morning, fled to the Town Hall police station, where she collapsed and was taken to a hospital. Mr. Nicolai said he intended to request immediate grand jury action against Burns, Morgan and Harvey.

VETERAN, 81, SHOOTS BOY, 13.

Elkhart, Ind., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Henry Vesculus, 81, a civil war veteran, is out on $2500 bond on a charge of assault and battery as a result of his shooting Cecil Skaife, 13. Vesculus fired a shotgun into a crowd of schoolboys, who, he said, had thrown rocks at his home.

Police Start Nation Wide Hunt for Kidnaper of G

Four detectives were assigned yesterday "to do everything possible to find 11 year old Brunhilda Koellner, alive or dead, and to track the kidnaper, no matter where she may be."

Capt. John Naughton of the Sheffield avenue station said the kidnaper is Miss Lillian Hochstrasser—formerly Mrs. Heineman—a woman 31 years old, who had been housekeeper for Frank Koellner, a well to do contractor and father of Brunhilda, who lives at 2749 Osgood street.

"The sisters at the parochial school have identified a picture of Miss Hochstrasser as the kidnaper," Capt. Naughton declared yesterday. "It was she who went to the school last Monday and had Brunhilda excused from class."

Clears Mother of Blame.

Capt. Naughton said he had definitely established that Brunhilda's mother had not stolen her away. The mother, Mrs. Martha Koellner, was divorced by her husband two years ago and the custody of the children was awarded to the father.

"The mother is not the kind who would abduct the child," Capt. Naughton explained. "She doesn't care about her children or her relatives. No one has heard from her since the summer of 1925. She may be dead for all her relatives know."

The four detectives were told to learn everything they can about the life of Miss Hochstrasser from her childhood until today, when she is hunted as a kidnaper. Every friend she ever had is to be sought for of the woman.

The police know that [illegible] strasser has at least $1,000 in cash with her, having withdrawn her counts from several banks. [illegible] lieve she has left the city, Brunhilda with her.

They have reached that conclu after nearly a week of unsuc and of hunting for places she have buried the body of Brunhil whom she said, "I'll wring her according to the child's father, police information is that the has Brunhilda so much under her trol that the child would not anything to let her whereabouts known.

Says Child Fears Woman.

Koellner said Brunhilda fears Hochstrasser so much that she would not even attempt to write ter. His hope is that Miss Hoch ser's conduct toward the girl will such as to cause Brunhilda to refuse complain to some one.

The detectives were told that Hochstrasser is addicted to the drugs, that she has a victious and that she constantly seeks companion.

They combed the north side house districts for news of Miss Hostrasser and Brunhilda, but there none. Therefore, yesterday they the hunt into a country-wide the kidnaper.

CULLINAN COUP SAVES CONTROL STOCK COMPANY

New York, Feb. 5. — [Special.] — After three days of sprinting by attorneys between three courts in New York City, following similar litigation in Delaware, about 6,000 shares of stock in the American Republics corporation were registered on the books of the corporation at Wilmington a few minutes before midnight yesterday.

Upon the few minutes probably depended the outcome of a bitter contest for control of the American Republics corporation at the annual meeting in Wilmington on Feb. 24. In that contest Thomas P. Lee, director and former vice president, and two other large stockholders are arrayed against Joseph F. Cullinan, wealthy Texas oil man who was one of the founders of the Texas company and in recent years has been acquiring stock in the American Republics corporation, which owns a minority interest in the Galena Signal Oil company and of all the stock of about 25 other oil producing, iron and steel companies.

Cullinan, it was said today, added 75 stockholders to his side by obtaining late Friday a ruling modifying an injunction against transfer of Galena Signal stock for that of the American Republics and then rushing the list to Wilmington. A Delaware law requires that stockholders must be registered 20 days before a stockholders' meeting in order to vote.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

THE HAGUE, Feb. 5.—Dispatches from Danzig say the position of the high commissioner of the league of nations at Danzig, Prof. van Hamel, has become untenable, owing to the discovery of his alleged illicit relations with the wife of the chief commissioner of the Danzig police. The affair has caused a sensation in Danzig and in Dutch political circles, where Prof. van Hamel is well koown. Prof. van Hamel denies the story.

Rich Beauty Color Options Enhance Its Greater Value

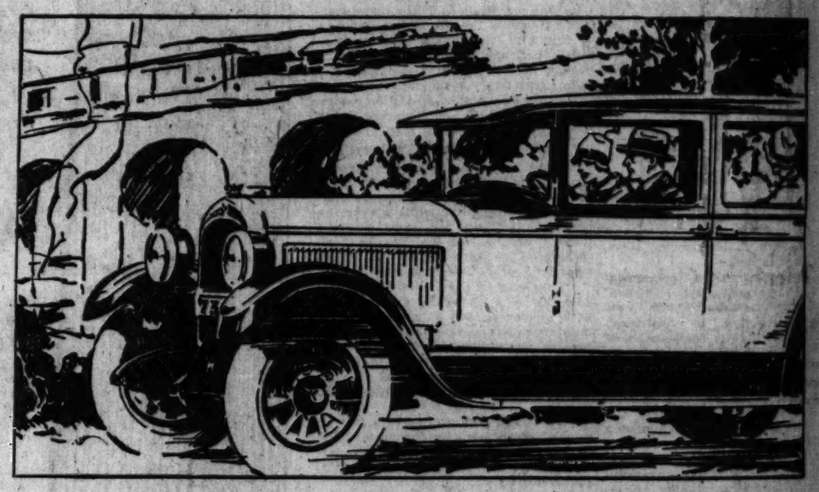
Surrounding the intrinsic value that Hupmobile builds into the engine and chassis of this Six Sedan are many recently added refinements of exterior beauty and interior luxury.

Immediately apparent is the new metal ball-back body—a costlier design that brings new grace of line and custom-built appearance to this commodious five-passenger car.

Color options are now available in any of three brilliant combinations—two-tone green, blue or two-tone grey, in durable lacquer finish.



Inside and out, this improved Sedan realizes your highest conceptions of luxury and comfort. The seats and backs are unusually wide, deeply cushioned and upholstered in the finest mohair. Four wide doors give easy access to front and rear seats. Slender steel pillars permit exceptional vision.

All the qualities of reliability, performance and long life, you have come to expect of Hupmobile are incorporated in the new Six Sedan. Like all Hupmobiles it is built a full 10% finer—in materials, in workmanship, and in inspection.

Thousands of motorists are finding in it the attributes they could not buy elsewhere within five hundred dollars of the Hupmobile Six price.

THE EXPERIMENT IN DIRECT NOMINATIONS.

The legislatures of forty-four states meet this year and in thirty of them there will be attempts to repeal or modify laws for the nomination of candidates for office. The direct primary is on the defensive. In its processes and in its consequences it has astonished its best friends and has perplexed even such supporters as are prepared to insist on further experiment or to persist in the hope that continued use will cure its defects.

It has been proved that the voters have more difficulty in reaching wise decisions in an elimination election than they have in a decisive one. The primary is the elimination. Its field may be large or small. The larger it is the greater the difficulty. The idea that the voter's information is sufficient to give him a knowledge of the candidates is unsupported by results.

The theory of the nominating convention is that a certain number of citizens delegate to a representative the responsibility of deciding who shall be the candidates of a party in the city, county, district, state, or nation. If the theory of its perfectibility seems absurd against the background of convention history it is apparent that the record of the direct primary is even more absurd.

There is now a violent protest against a procedure which the direct primary itself makes necessary—the expenditure of large sums of money in campaigning. This protest is chiefly responsible for the exposure of direct primary defects. In a large state the candidate is engaged in persuading millions of voters that he is the proper man for them and for the state. If they are to know he is running at all he must have a great political organization supported by patronage and public funds or he must have very friendly newspaper treatment and an exceptional acquaintance and a great deal of money.

Many citizens who stick to the direct primary as to something which may still be adjusted to the best purposes of a representative democracy are generally the citizens who most resolutely refuse to concede that the expenditure of money is inherent in the very system itself unless it is to be a closed system for the benefit of a governing class. How could Vare in Pennsylvania have made any headway against Pinchot's state machine and Pepper's federal machine without using money, even assuming that they restricted their direct campaign expenses to $100? They alone could do so and have any hope of success. And yet people denounce Vare and think the direct primary is good.

The American system of government still depends on representative authority and party responsibility. Both are maintained in the nominating convention. Both are eliminated in the direct primary. The convention theory accords with the American system of government. If the results of the direct primary nevertheless were better, the better theory would be discarded. Experience proves that results are not better. They are worse. They are confused, scandalous, irresponsible and with little evidence of good judgment.

MUCH NEEDED REVISIONS OF OUR CRIMINAL CODE.

Michael L. Igoe, minority leader of the state house of representatives, has offered a joint resolution for the appointment of a committee of five senators and five representatives to revise the criminal code. We assume that a complete revision is not contemplated by this resolution. The American Law institute is expected to have a model, uniform criminal code completed by 1930, and the best professional opinion favors postponing general revision until this code is ready for consideration. Experts are at work upon it and it is hoped in the interest of a desirable uniformity their work will be acceptable to legislatures throughout the country. Mr. Justice Thompson of our Supreme court is one of the experts engaged in this effort.

Meanwhile, however, the Chicago crime commission is of opinion that certain changes ought to be made in the Illinois code and may be made without compromising action upon the institute code when it appears. The crime commission's committee on law revision has made a study of our more urgent needs and embodied its recommendations in fourteen proposals which are by no means radical. They are supported substantially by experience and at least the most important would have the approval of informed professional opinion. For example, the proposal for a new bail act touches one of the most flagrant weaknesses of criminal justice in our state. Bail in many cases is merely an open door for the escape of the guilty. The proposal to repeal the statute making the jury judge of the law as well as the fact is supported by experience and common sense. The judge should be permitted to interrogate witnesses and he should give a written continuous instruction to the jury, not merely pass along a sheaf of legal hypotheses got up by counsel. The elaborate forms of indictment phraseology should be abolished and simple forms adopted. The trial judge should examine and qualify jurors. Parole and pardon proceedings should all be public. The law on carrying weapons should be reconsidered.

The proposal for a statute authorizing the Cook county courts to have prepared a list of citizens qualified for jury service may encounter objection, but it cannot be denied that practical measures to better the quality of our juries are of the most urgent importance in Cook, and the subject should be given the most careful consideration by the committee.

We trust this resolution will pass and that a well chosen committee will take their duty seriously and produce results. We have carried conservatism in legal procedure to an extreme, but our crime conditions are so notorious as to put the need for improvements beyond intelligent argument. It is the plain duty, and one of the chief duties, of the legislature to take informed and practical action for modernization of our criminal code.

AMERICAN IMPERIALISM AND EUROPEAN ART.

It has become known that the Baltimore Art museum has received Van Dyck's "Rinaldo and Armida" as a loan from Jacob Epstein, the Baltimore merchant. The purchaser's name was withheld for a while and then made known. Mr. Epstein bought the painting for $250,000 in London. A British group had been trying to raise money enough to save it for Great Britain and put it in the British National gallery. The Britons might have succeeded, but Mr. Epstein's cash gave him the picture and Baltimore has it.

Van Dyck painted from Tasso's epic the allegory of the Christian knight and his incidental dereliction from duties connected with the delivery of Jerusalem. The episode in the lighter vein of knightly adventure is arranged by Armida, a sorceress. Van Dyck painted it on commission from Charles I. of Great Britain. It was in the collection of the duke of Newcastle. If Mr. Epstein had not secured it the painting would have been shown in the Flemish art now exhibited at Burlington house, London.

The war has done something to increase America's store of the art treasure of the world. Wars have done that before. Americans have not removed things their commander admired or their President wanted. President Wilson did not bring home anything out of the galleries of the conquered. He did not make use of our allies' needs to levy on their artistic treasures. An American Napoleon, being out of his own country on the usual Napoleonic mission, would have done so, probably the Venus and the Mona Lisa as being best known to the majority of his traveling compatriots. The war made hard times for the British aristocracy. Paying the debt made the times still harder. Something has to be done to make ends meet, either rent the castle or sell the art gallery or both. It is, therefore, easier for an art loving American to enrich his own country's share of masterpieces by picking them up in the salesrooms.

This manner of acquisition is not liked. The British group which failed to keep the Van Dyck at home may be not only sorry but indignant. On a number of occasions there have been hard and unkind words spoken. It is generally maintained abroad that the governments ought to prevent the sale of works of art to outsiders, and thus keep the American dollar from its deadly work.

There seems to be an impression abroad that it is in a way disgusting for a painting to be taken to America, first, because we are uncultured and would not appreciate it, and, second, because we are uncultured and have to buy it. The collections of alien art in other museums have the dignity of a military ravishment. They were won by the sword or came out of the débris of war. Uncle Sam puts his money on the counter. We fear it is imperialism, our kind of imperialism, which rattles in the pocketbook and not in the scabbard. Nevertheless it must be imperialism to make way with the cherished objects, and undoubtedly it creates a feeling against America, indicating that nothing is safe where the American walks.

Our liberal minded are sensitive as to bananas and oil and regret the way we go about to get them, but possibly the still finer sentiments do not reach them. It might be more disturbing to the peace of the world to irritate the cultured British than to irritate the uncultured Nicaraguans, if, indeed we are irritating and not pleasing the latter. If it would be an extenuation in the case of this Van Dyck we might say that when it was painted in 1630 Charles I. was our king. Our ancestors in Virginia and Massachusetts knew him as such and they did not cut his head off. That's a point for what it's worth. We don't urge it. It probably would have got nowhere unless backed up with $250,000.

It has been suggested that France, Italy, and Great Britain could pay the debt with art. The suggestion has been received with contempt. International comity might recognize the equity of a wider distribution of masterpieces. It doesn't. Our imperialism is regarded as sordid, being that of the dough bag and not of the doughboy. The rule is that the canvas should come home on the bayonet of the soldier and not in the crate of the merchant.

Editorial of the Day

GAS TAX HARD HIT.

[Illinois State Register.]

The overwhelming vote of the Springfield Automobile club against the proposed gasoline tax in Illinois is representative of public sentiment. This tax is tremendously unpopular as it deserves to be. The vote taken Friday night was 472 to 94. Added significance is given to this practically unanimous verdict by the fact that no group of men has studied the subject of the gasoline tax more thoroughly than this group. They realize that the automobile is overtaxed as it is when the license fee and other burdens are considered as a whole. They realize that the automobile has become an essential to business and pleasure in the country as well as in the city. It is the essential of commercial life in every community. It is equally essential in agriculture. The flivver is a part of the farmer's equipment. He travels about the farm in it. He reaches town in it. It is his medium of exchange of business with the town and the city. On Sunday it is his pleasure because he can take the family for a ride and find some cause to smile through the shadow of adversity which has fallen upon him because of tariff discrimination. Now it is proposed to place a tax on that farmer's smile and add to his burdens.

No wonder the gasoline tax has been hard hit by the Springfield Automobile club. It is all right to tax the automobile owner in full measure but it is wrong to over-tax him and to make ownership of an automobile by a city dweller or farmer in moderate circumstances prohibitive.

THE NEGRO AND HIS RELIGION

BY JUDGE ALBERT B. GEORGE.

[Judge George is on the Municipal bench in Chicago, and is a member of Grace Presbyterian church, colored.]

Next Saturday is the birthday anniversary of the great emancipator, Abraham Lincoln, whose name means more to the Negro than any merely human who ever lived. Next Sunday will be observed in Chicago and in the nation generally as race relations Sunday. White and colored ministers will exchange pulpits, and it is to be noted that in Chicago more of the larger churches of various denominations will open their pulpits to colored pastors than ever before. A right understanding between representatives of the white and colored races is of slow growth, but unmistakable progress is being made. We all remember what a furor was created when President Theodore Roosevelt entertained Dr. Booker T. Washington for dinner at the White House, but such outbreaks of indignation are becoming less and less. A wholesome sentiment against the lynching of Negroes is gradually forming in the south as well as in the north, and broadminded men and women are coming to understand that the Negro is entitled to fundamental human rights by the constitution of the United States, as well as by every law of justice and fair play.

There appeared recently in a New York City newspaper a statement that one-half of the 12,000,000 Negroes in the United States were not members of any church, and that almost two-thirds of the more than 2,000,000 Negroes in the north had no church connections. The announcement has caused considerable discussion, and in some cases alarm for the Negro is generally regarded as the most religious group in Amercia.

I do not know the exact situation, but I venture to say that where the Negro has drifted away from the church it is because he has lost faith in the program and purpose of the church, white and colored, to meet and solve his problems. He has failed to recognize that the church is the one and only constant influence which can and will solve his problems. In his impatience he has abandoned the church, become discouraged and given up trying or gone after some "ism" which mistakes noise for progress and thereby deceives himself. It must also be admitted that the Negro, like every person with freedom to choose his own life, is subjected to all the temptations of the world—love of money, ease, ambition for power, and gratification of the senses. The Negro is not immune to evil influences, although by nature he is trustful, reverent, emotional, and hence inclined to worship and find joy in religion.

The record of the Negro in the United States since emancipation has been marvelous. Many authorities assert no such progress has ever been made by any race in the history of the world in the same length of time. This is true in education in colleges, white and colored, in business, the professions, and in skilled labor. Notable poets, artists, sculptors, musicians have been produced, and permanent and important contributions have been made to American literature.

A recent issue of the Crisis reports that 8,600 Negro students were enrolled last year in our colleges and universities, 7,000 in Negro schools, and 1,600 in white institutions. During the year 1,300 Negro students received degrees ranging from bachelor of arts to doctor of philosophy. A number of Negroes were elected to the honorary scholastic society, the Phi Beta Kappa, and 300 received degrees from northern colleges.

In the early days of reconstruction after the adoption of the 13th, 14th, and 15th amendments the Negro attempted to enter into politics. He soon found, however, that the idealism expressed in the amendments had not been accepted in heart by the American people as a whole. He was met by segregation, lynching, and the Jim Crow principle on trains, in hotels, and everywhere in social life. This finally compelled him to stay away from his white fellow citizens and to find within his own ranks the means of social, political, religious, and cultural progress. It was a severe blow to the Negro when he was cut off from contact with his more privileged fellow men, but his progress could not be stopped.

While we believe firmly that the church has been the mightiest factor in the development of the Negro, it must also be remembered that the churches followed the drift of the times and excluded Negroes from equal privileges, with the result the Negro was compelled to establish his own religious institutions. In doing so he has reaped many benefits. In the church he has developed his social and intellectual life. For years every Negro leader was a minister. In the church the Negro learned the power of organization and of coöperation. The churches have also devised social, political, and economic programs, and from speakers lay as well as clerical he has learned of his duties and privileges as a citizen. The Young Men's and the Young Women's Christian associations, which are the direct outgrowth of the church, have taught the young Negro man and woman good health, cleanliness of living, and decency of behavior. The Y's have also been a means for the establishment of cultural contacts with the best in our civilization, although the Negro is still regarded as one separate and apart.

It is also within the churches the Negro has attained his musical development. He has sung in the choirs and his spirituals, often called the most truly American music, have been welcomed into many so-called exclusive circles. Over the radio the Negro has helped change the conception of his people as caricatured in cartoons and exhibited on the minstrel stage and in buffoon jokes to a race interested in high ideals and sincere and earnest in their life purposes. A change of mental attitude towards the Negro is the first step towards a change of action.

Much work in inter-racial coöperation has been accomplished in the colleges and universities where the student body has shown a willingness to talk about the so-called Negro problem and to get some first hand information about the Negro. When these young people learn the history of the Negro, his loyalty to the American flag in the hours of the nation's distress, learn that he is not a menace and seeks nothing more than the rights of manhood and citizenship, much of the old prejudice will pass away.

Another expression of coöperation is the Urban league, a national organization with local branches in most large cities, in which white and colored men and women having similar ideals work together.

But the church more than any other organization has given the Negro the background for self-respect. No matter how small his ventures in business, how meager his success in politics, how humiliated and scorned in social contacts, within the church the Negro has enjoyed a feeling of comfort and importance.

The church remains today the center of Negro culture and leadership. Within its walls the Negro has learned the virtues of home life, honor and honesty which have equipped him against the handicaps of poverty and the vicious traps into which he would otherwise stumble because of ignorance.

The equipment of the Negro church has been inadequate, beginning sometimes in store fronts and back rooms. If the church seems to be losing, as some fear, it is to be observed that the Negro churches, large and small, are crowded on Sunday, and the people both desire and seek more adequate equipment.

The Negro churches cannot by themselves accomplish inter-race coöperation. They must have the assistance of all the Christian churches in America.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations, and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

THE HEALTHY TREND FROM "IRON" CLOTHES.

WHEN we compare the styles at intervals of, say one hundred years, we find that there is a steady tendency away from rigidity in clothing.

In the middle ages warriors wore iron clothes—iron helmets and irons all the way down to the feet. The clothes of the women were rigid enough to be thoroughly uncomfortable.

By the beginning of this century fashion had liberated all parts of the body except the head, the hands, the feet and the liver from the rule; shall we say the "ironclad rule?"

Since then, the iron has fallen away even more rapidly. There was the metal ribbed corset compressing one of the most important organs in the body, the liver. Off came the corset and the liver began to have a better show, with consequent improvement in general health. A disease, chlorosis, which was widespread a generation ago, melted away like snow. If Mann and the other physiologists can have a few more years to work out the duties of the liver, they will make out such a case for that organ, as will prevent any one from daring to put it in irons again.

Then, there was that stiff hat, ranging from the stove pipe down. I never see a picture of Abraham Lincoln wearing that old stove pipe of his, without feeling that he was justified in being stoop shouldered. We have gotten away from the stiff Derby, as well as the stove pipe, though a relapse is entirely possible. It may be that wearing stiff hats is the principal cause of baldness, as Dr. Reynolds thinks, but even if it is not so, there is argument enough against "ironclad" headgear.

Next comes the glove. Tight gloves are cold, stiff and uncomfortable. It is odd that the extremities, hard to keep warm at best, are the very regions where we have hung on longest to stiff, rigid, tight constricting garments. Automobiles have hit tight gloves a wallop. We still wear gloves, and we should. Probably we shall always wear them. But loose, pliable gloves have replaced the old, tight types.

We still wear a rigid garment on the foot. Perhaps we always will. The need of a fairly stiff sole on the shoe worn out-of-doors may cause us to keep our feet in irons always. Perhaps we will always suffer from chilblains, frostbite, trenchfoot, cold feet, bunions, corns, fallen arches and weak feet. But the less tight and the less rigid we can get our footwear, the less we will suffer.

And remember the trend of the custom throughout the ages has been away from "ironclad" organs.

DRINKS TOO MUCH TEA.

E. G. A. writes: 1. My mother drinks two cups of tea at meals twice daily and then drinks between meals the cold, bitter tea that has been left in the teapot with the tea leaves. Is this injurious?

2. Is it injurious to drink cold tea that has stood for some time in an aluminum or tin cup?

REPLY.

1. I think so: too much tea.
2. Depends on the quantity consumed.

TENDENCY TO BEAR TWINS.

Mrs. E. C. D. writes: If my mother is a twin, and I am her eldest daughter, would there be a possibility of my having twins for my first children? There are no twins in my husband's family.

REPLY.

A tendency to bear twins is inheritable.

PUFFINESS UNDER EYES.

A. F. D. writes: 1. Does coffee taken in large amounts (four or five cups a day) cause constipation?

2. Would the coffee, or the constipation, be responsible for broken veins in the face, or for puffiness under the eyes?

3. Would witch hazel be beneficial in reducing the puffiness under the eyes?

REPLY.

1. Don't think so.
2. Neither; that's my guess.
3. Might help a little. Have the heart and kidneys examined.

CLABBERED MILK GOOD.

B. P. writes: 1. Is milk which has passed through the separator and then clabbered and churned or beat up as healthy for drinking as ordinary buttermilk?

2. I am old and dieting as a means of relief from constipation. Is such milk as good for me as ordinary buttermilk?

REPLY.

1. Yes.
2. Yes.

ALL SET FOR PAVING.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—[Friend of the People.]—Can you tell me if the 6100 block of North Artesian avenue will be paved next summer?

How can we compel a property owner to lay sidewalk in front of his vacant property? O. B.

There is a proceeding in court for paving a system of streets, including Artesian avenue, between Glenlake and Granville avenues, etc., and it is expected that the assessment will be confirmed before summer.

The work is already under contract for sidewalks on this street, and the improvement will be made this year.

EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary,
Board of Local Improvements.

LET THEM SUE.

Hammond, Ind., Jan. 25.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I retired from the business I was conducting, closing out my stock, and paying all accounts as shown due to the wholesale houses by check at that time. I held my canceled checks and receipts for three years before destroying them.

After the lapse of over three years time I have received a notice from a collection agency of a claim against me, by a firm. What is your advice? This firm had never mailed me a previous statement or other indication of this bill being due them.

This business was conducted in Illinois and I am now a resident of Indiana. H. C. P.

You should refuse to pay. If they sue there should be an even chance that your version should be believed as well as theirs. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SHIRKING THEIR DUTY.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Whose place is it to take care of an aged woman of eighty-six? How much should be given towards the party that is keeping her? There are five daughters and two brothers. They think one dollar a week is too much to pay. Mrs. E. B.

Our pauper act requires children to contribute according to their means to the support of destitute parents except that married daughters are not required to contribute unless they have independent means. Apply to the public service bureau in the county building. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 6, 1862.

ON BOARD STEAMER "B."—Gen. Grant and his gunboats are within four miles of Fort Henry on the east bank of the Tennessee river near the Kentucky and Tennessee line. The rebel force at the fort is supposed to be 15,000. A land force of the Federals will be disembarked this afternoon and the battle will begin tomorrow. Grant and his officers are fully confident of success. In a reconnoissance some of the gunboats steamed up to within gunshot range of the fort and a few shots were exchanged. A shell from the fort tore a hole in the cabin of the Essex. The Federal troops that will be engaged in the fight total about 22,000.

WASHINGTON.—Senator Jesse D. Bright of Indiana was expelled by the senate. In a speech before the vote was taken he declared he had ever voted for peace and never had given a sectional vote. Every impulse of his heart was for his country, he said, and he would yield to no man in his attachment to it. It is generally believed that Richard W. Thompson, an old Whig, will be appointed to succeed Bright.

PORTLAND. — The Nova Scotian from Liverpool brings European news. The London Morning Post declares that affairs in America are rapidly approaching a situation in which the de facto government of the south may claim consideration in Europe. The Liverpool Post declares emphatically that the civil war must be stopped by mediation if possible, by force if necessary.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 6, 1902.

CHICAGO.—A terrific explosion in the basement of the meat shop of Otto Trostel, 376 West 22d street, resulted in the death of at least eleven persons and the injury of many more. Eleven charred bodies have been taken from the ruins, and it is thought that other victims may still be among the embers. The cause of the main explosion is a mystery. It was followed by three explosions of gas escaping from broken mains. The bodies of those recovered are Trostel, his wife and four children, and his nephew, Fred; Mary Rosenthal, a visitor, and Sophia Kneipp, a domestic.

CHICAGO.—George W. Gray, secretary of the "Forward Movement" society, plans to reform the slums by Christian vaudeville, billiard halls, and bowling alleys. He charges immoral conditions to the saloons, but he has little sympathy with the methods of the W. C. T. U. and the Prohibition party.

CHICAGO.—The committee appointed to investigate the case of Prof. Charles W. Pearson of Northwestern university faculty, who recently denied the Bible's infallibility, found him guilty, and, if its report is accepted by the executive committee, he will be asked to resign.

NEW YORK.—Mrs. Rita H. De Alba Stokes, former wife of W. E. D. Stokes, and Capt. Philip M. Lydig, well known in society, were quietly married, and they have gone to Europe on a honeymoon. She has been receiving $12,000 a year alimony.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

LONDON. — Richard Wallace, an American seaman from Baltimore, was killed when a German submarine sank the British steamer Eavestone. Four other vessels were sunk, one of them being a Belgian relief ship.

WASHINGTON.—War between the United States and Germany is not many hours distant if official advices confirm the report of the killing of an American seaman on the Eavestone by a German submarine. President Wilson is represented as still eager to grasp at any straw that offers hope of averting war. He maintains, however, that friendly relations can be restored only by Germany calling off ruthless submarine warfare. The President issued a proclamation forbidding American ship owners to transfer their ships to foreign registry.

BERLIN.—According to information from official quarters there is no prospect of any modification of the orders to submarines. American Ambassador Gerard called on Foreign Secretary Zimmermann to ask for his passports, as directed by Washington.

WASHINGTON.—German Ambassador von Bernstorff and consuls will sail on Feb. 13 on the Frederik VIII. for Germany, via Christiania.

CHICAGO.—The Chicago Motor club will launch plans tonight for a complete quartermaster's reserve corps in Chicago. Crowds stormed the regular army and navy recruiting offices, eager for enlistment.

CHICAGO.—Mrs. John J. Mitchell, wife of the president of the Illinois Trust and Savings bank, offers her three sons to the nation. "If war comes, I want them to be at the front," she said. They are William H., at Harvard; John J. Jr., at Yale, and Clarence at Middlesex school, Concord Mass.

SMITH AND THE DEMOCRATS.

Millington, Ill., Jan. 24.—Frank L. Smith was turned down at the door of the senate by 32 out of 36 Democrats. Does THE TRIBUNE or any of its readers think for one moment that 32 out of 36 Democrats would have voted against him if it had been Democratic credentials instead of Republican that he had in his possession? I do not think so, and that is why I do not think that either Frank L. Smith or the state of Illinois had a fair shake. The Democratic senators should vote their convictions and not their politics; they were bribed by their party belief when they voted that way. Yet they claim that politics in Illinois are rotten and Smith morally unfit to a seat in the senate.

LIMITING COURT CONTINUANCES.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—Why not limit continuances of civil and criminal cases to not more than three? S. T. HART.

THE VOTE ON ARBITRATION.

Chicago, Jan. 26—The vote of the senate yesterday on the question of submitting the Mexican confiscation of American property to arbitration was a body blow to this country, for it showed that the foreign policies of this country must be taken out of the hands of the state department and turned over to the council of churches.

The history of the human race has demonstrated that when the church begins to dominate a country's affairs it is time to put up the red light, for danger and disaster are ahead.

WILLIAM A. BIELAND.

HELD UP AT A STOP LIGHT.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Maybe if some more of our citizens are held up waiting for useless stop lights to flash green, the city and Lincoln park board will shut them off at a reasonable hour at night. I am speaking especially of the light at Buena avenue and Sheridan road, where a man was held up Monday night while waiting for the light to change "green." There is no need for this light, as Buena avenue is blocked from the east and the traffic coming from the west is trivial. T. W. B.

WINTER SPORT DANGERS.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—The ski picture on the sporting page calls to mind the condition of the field at the forest preserve at Beverly fields, which last Sunday was unsafe. One lady was carried from the field and a man broke his leg. There was a large hole on the east slide which caused sleds to tip over. Where they were building the new ski take-off there is a large stump of a tree and also several holes, all of which are dangerous and could easily be eliminated. There are numerous bushes and small trees at the end of the ski slide on the east side of the field which caused numerous spills.

It would be a fine thing, too, if there was a police officer or two in attendance to keep the sliders in order and warn them of the uncalled for risks they run through carelessness. I. N. KUNTZ.

THE STANDING MOTORMAN.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—The motorman of a street car is always or nine-tenths of the time on his feet. He is more uncomfortable on his stool than standing up. Why not furnish him with a comfortable seat and reduce accidents by keeping his mind off his feet.

W. R. TRICKA.

NIGHT SCHOOL STUDENT'S COMPLAINT.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—I am a student in the Englewood Evening school, struggling with several hundred other young men and women to secure an education denied me in my youth. Our classes have kept above the standard of twenty-five required by the board of education. We had good teachers and were much interested in our work. We students can see no reason why we should not have been permitted to continue our work to the end of school in June.

A new program has just been issued. Our classes are upset, and the whole school is like a scrambled egg. We are discouraged with the new arrangement, and disgusted with the whole mess. Students and teachers are leaving school because of it. Tell me, why it is that some school executives will not listen to any suggestions from pupils or teachers?

L. A. SMITH.

PAY ENVELOPE SHARKS.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—"Pay envelope sharks" could be eliminated. I believe, if the proper system was adopted either by the employer or the union. Those mentioned in THE TRIBUNE this morning as being most affected are members of a union.

Let the unions form a Union Loan bank. Better results could be obtained, I believe, if all unions would join in such a venture; if not, let the individual unions take care of the loan. If a man is working for a railroad or street car company, his credit would be good for a loan on his wages.

If a man goes to work with money matters bothering him, he can't do the company justice or himself, either. He has it on his mind. I know, I have been through it. E. L. EZRA.

HOW THE ARMY IS FED.

Fort Brady, Mich., Jan. 23.—Practically the only reason the army in general has never complained about the inadequate ration allowance is the company funds. In many instances these funds are dwindling very rapidly, and the cause of the apparent drain on these funds is that the men must be fed. These funds are raised through the profits from sales in the various post exchanges. These exchanges depend entirely upon the members of the military service. The men draw their pay and purchase the various necessities of a soldier from the post exchange. So it is quite apparent that the soldier feeds himself to a great extent, although indirectly. RONALD PLEWA.

AN ACT OF KINDNESS.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Last evening about 5 o'clock at the corner of Monroe and State streets I saw a poor, forlorn little stray dog, and talking to it a young lady who had every appearance of being a busy person with her own affairs to attend to. I stopped and spoke to her and she said she was going to take it in a taxicab to 155 West Grand avenue, which, as the public is gradually learning to know, is the headquarters of the Anti-Cruelty society.

Just at that moment a taxi came up and the last I saw of the young lady she and the dog were in it headed for the home. I went on my way with a much kindlier feeling toward mankind because of this episode, and wondered if I, although I am a lover of animals and grieve at the sight of a poor, forsaken dog, would have taken the time from my own interests to do as this young woman did, or if I would not have passed on with just the thought, "Poor dog, I wish something could be done for him." Even the taxi driver, to whom, I suppose, everything is in the day's work, smiled a kindly smile. I hope the young woman will see this letter and know that she not only helped the dog but another woman by her kindly act. E. J. LYON.

FOOTNOTE ON DIET.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Your paper of Jan. 25 contains a report of a paper by Dr. Sherman L. Davis, presented at the dental convention being held in this city. The views of this professor of chemistry are quite different from those held by recognized authorities in the field of nutrition.

Steak, potatoes and white bread may be largely storage foods, but they are efficient sources of important food ingredients. The potatoes and white bread supply relatively cheap energy, while steak and other meats supply the highest quality of protein needed for building and repairing our bodies. The American diet will always be based on these three foods unless some great economic changes come about. The diet will, however, include more green, leafy vegetables and dairy products.

Director, Department of Nutrition, American Institute of Meat Packers.

GIRL, 9, IS KILLED BY AUTO; WOMAN DRIVER ARRESTED

Three Others Die During Day; Toll Now 79.

A youthful matron, driving an automobile that struck and killed a 9 year old girl last night was arrested by Summerdale police on a charge of manslaughter. The death of the child and those of three other persons during the day raised the Cook county death toll from automobiles to 79 since Jan. 1.

WALTER KOLAK.

Mrs. Elsa Wainwright, 32 years old, of 3116 Eastwood avenue, was the woman arrested. She was taken to the Summerdale station after her car had struck 9 year old Joan Hoff of 2146 Giddings street, while the child with her 10 year old sister, Rosemary, was attempting to cross Lawrence avenue at Hoyne avenue. Mrs. Wainwright took the injured child to Ravenswood hospital, but she was dead before they arrived there. The woman later was released on $5,000 bonds.

Mrs. Wainwright is the wife of John Wainwright, owner of the Forest inn at Roosevelt road and Harlem avenue, Forest Park.

Woman, 87, Dies of Injuries.

Another victim was Mrs. Olina Olson, 87 years old, of 448 North Racine avenue. Mrs. Olson died in the Mother Cabrini hospital of injuries received last Wednesday, when she was struck by an automobile driven by Frank German, 5028 West Superior street, at Grand and Racine avenues. German has been ordered to appear at the inquest tomorrow.

John W. Langlen, 68 years old, of 107 North Ashland avenue, died at the county hospital after he had been struck by a taxicab at Washington boulevard and Ogden avenue. The cab was driven by Frank Carey of 2016 East 68th street. Police ordered Carey to appear at the inquest tomorrow.

13 Year Old Boy Victim.

Walter Kolak, 13, of 2232 West 18th place, died yesterday of injuries received on Jan. 31 when he was struck at Blue Island and Oakley avenues by a truck driven by August Reekweg of 2837 West 39th street.

When two street cars crushed an automobile at Milwaukee avenue and Augusta street last night, blocking traffic, Mrs. Mary Prusinski, 3700 North Tripp avenue, left one of the cars to learn who had been hurt. She fainted when she recognized the trapped occupants of the automobile as her husband, Michael, and his sister, Lillian. Firemen extricated the coupla. Prusinski was only slightly bruised. His sister was not injured.

FREE INDIANA U. LAW STUDENT OF SLAYING CHARGE

Rockville, Ind., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Guthrie Harrison, 26, law student at Indiana university, has been acquitted by a jury of a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Samuel Hudoch of Clinton, who was shot Aug. 19.

Harrison, the testimony showed, was standing near the entrance of his father's home and observed Hudoch looking into the window of a neighbor's home. He obtained a revolver and arrested Hudoch, holding him until the arrival of the police. Hudoch broke away and Harrison shot him. Hudoch died the day after the shooting.

Elrod Death Still Mystery; Find No Trace of Poison

Marshalltown, Ia., Feb. 5.—(AP)—A final examination of the vital organs of Charles L. Elrod of Lewellen, Neb., found dead in his hotel room here Jan. 9 under mysterious circumstances, failed to reveal the cause of his death. The report brought out that no trace of poison, which had been suspected as a cause of death, could be found.

The Rev. Louis Mitchell Taken by Death at 72

The Rev. Louis Mitchell, 72 years old, of 20 North Ann street, a retired minister, died at his home yesterday supposedly of heart disease. He had been ill only two days, according to Dr. George L. McLaughlin, who had been attending him.

For the third time within a year the Samuel Schmidt jewelry shop, 1343 Milwaukee avenue, was robbed yesterday.

Some time Friday two burglars crashed their way into the shop by forcing a door in the rear of the second floor and drilled open the back of the office safe. They rifled it of jewelry estimated in value between $20,000 and $40,000.

The first robbery at the shop occurred last June, the police reported. Thieves obtained entrance by breaking a show window and escaped with merchandise valued at more than $10,000. A week later, the show window was smashed a second time, this time at 9 o'clock in the morning with the sidewalk thronged with shoppers, the thief seizing jewelry to the value of $5,000 and making his escape.

Capt. Stege of the detective bureau personally visited the burglary scene yesterday and expressed the opinion that the latest "job" was committed by amateur cracksmen. By smashing the rear of the safe, however, the cracksmen were shielded from the view of passers-by and also avoided disturbing the burglar alarm system.

WHITE HOUSE BEING DWARFED BY HOTEL AND OFFICE BUILDINGS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Workmen have begun to raze the residences built and occupied by John Hay and Henry Adams at La Fayette square and 16th street, facing the White House with the square's area between to make way for the erection of an apartment hotel.

As a result the American Institute of Architects and other organizations and individuals interested in carrying out matured plans for the beautification of Washington are up in arms over the prospect that the White House is to be dwarfed by hotels and office buildings and its modest beauty destroyed.

Gradually the handsome and dignified old residences on La Fayette square are being replaced by business buildings. The Veterans' bureau building occupies the site of the famous Arlington hotel and the residences of Charles Sumner; Daniel Webster's house and the adjoining residence, occupied by Gideon Welles when he was secretary of the navy under Lincoln, were torn down for the erection of the U. S. chamber of commerce home. A theater has been built on the site of the residence where John Wilkes Booth's coconspirator, Payne, tried to assassinate William H. Seward on the night President Lincoln was killed.

An office building has been erected on the west side of the square next the house built by Commodore Stephen Decatur in 1819.

DISMISS BOOTH SUIT TO ENJOIN STUTZ COMPANY

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Suit by James Scripps Booth, millionaire automobile maker of Detroit, to enjoin the Stutz Motor Car Company of America from manufacturing and selling the new Stutz safety chassis automobile and demanding an accounting for $3,000,000 in profits, was dismissed by Judge Robert C. Baltzell for want of equity in the United States District court here, it was learned today.

Booth alleged in his complaint that a "unique, low type chassis construction" was his own design and that some time ago he had presented the drawings and specifications of such a car to Charles M. Schwab, New York capitalist.

Clifford J. Knapp Dies Following Brief Illness

Clifford J. Knapp, western advertising manager of Hardware Age, died at Wesley Memorial hospital yesterday after a brief illness. He was 47 years old and a native of Canton, Ill. He had been connected with the trade publication since 1906. A widow, his father, John D. Knapp; a brother, Clyde, and a sister, Mrs. Leona Elliott, survive. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at St. Paul's Episcopal church, Estes and Ashland avenues. Burial will be at Rosehill cemetery.

JAIL LOOMS FOR THREE WETS WHO BETRAYED PALS

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Continuing their bail with reluctance, Federal Judge Isaac M. Meekins today deferred sentences on Cecil and Clifford Kinder and De Witt Hurner, confessed bootleggers who turned state's evidence in the Eker rum trial and gave the three until Friday to bring their attorneys from Chicago.

The court intimated that despite the aid given the government by the three men he probably would show no leniency.

Bail of $4,500 for Turner and $10,000 for Cecil Kinder was continued until Friday. Clifford Kinder was continued in $500 bail until Monday, when he will be required to furnish a bond of $10,000.

Earlier Judge Meekins had said of Clifford Kinder, "I think it will do him good to go to the Tombs for a day or two to find out what he has done to these other men who will stay in prison for months."

When Kinder offered his "word of honor" to be in court, Judge Meekins remarked that it was not much of an asset and declared: "These men can see from what I have said that there is no primrose path ahead of them for the next twelve months or two years."

Mayor Wissel of Edgewater, N. J.; Police Chief James A. Dinan, and Detectives Edward Pickering and Albert Flannery of that town, all found guilty of conspiracy to violate the, customs law, will be sentenced next Wednesday.

2,510 Miners Killed by Accidents in 1926, Report

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—[U. P.]—Coal mine accidents in the United States during 1926 caused the deaths of 2,510 persons, the bureau of mines announced today. With an output of 663,290,000 tons, the fatality rate was 3.78 per million tons, slightly less than the 1925 rate. Explosives, falls of coal, and gas and dust explosions were the principal causes of the accidents.

Buried Under 1,100 Cheeses (Camembert), He Survives

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CHALON-SUR-MARNE, France, Feb. 5.—Buried under 1,100 Camembert cheeses, which smothered him when a drying shelf at a cheese factory collapsed upon him, Leon Callot today suffered a fractured leg and severe cuts on the head. He was saved from suffocation by other employés, who dug him out.

How Far Away Do You Live?

Long ago Hursen wiped out distance, in its relation to funerals. Before that, distance between the home and the "funeral establishment" was important. Today, and every day, Hursen demonstrates that distance away from any one of the 3 Hursen "funeral-homes" in Chicago is the least important factor to consider.

It is only an organization as big as "Hursen's" that can forget the question of distance. No day passes that a "Hursen" funeral is not seen even at as great a distance as 15 miles, either to the North, to the South or to the West. The reason for it is that there are thousands of families in every part of Chicago who will have no one but "Hursen."

There is good reason, too, for this preference. It is in the unusual elegance of all Hursen funerals. It is in the unusual method, in the unusual generosity of service, in the unequaled "

All 23 Nash Models on Display

And Special Auxiliary Exhibits at All Associate Nash Dealers' Showrooms

Attracted by the sensational new Nash body design, tremendous attendance literally jammed the Nash Exhibit at the Show all week.

Thousands upon thousands of Chicagoans were unable to get near enough to view this body design that has revolutionized the art of body craftsmanship in America.

As exemplified by the two new Special Sedans and the Ambassador and Cavalier models it created the greatest excitement a Chicago Automobile Show has ever experienced.

So, beginning today, we are staging at both our downtown showrooms a continuation of the Chicago Show Exhibit that is enriched with the addition of all other Nash models—23 in all—with prices ranging from $865 to $2090, f. o. b. factory.

Colorfully and vividly finished in masterly blends and harmonies, and every model powered with the great Nash 7-bearing motor—the world's smoothest type—this unique private exhibition presents the most inviting opportunity ever afforded you to view the entire Nash line and its newest and most startling developments.

At all our associate dealers' showrooms similar exhibits are also being conducted simultaneously with the complete line shown at 2000 and 2501 South Michigan.

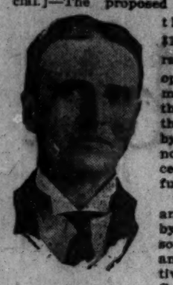
MOVE TO BLOCK COLORADO RIVER DAM PROJECT

Utah and Arizona Lead Senate Fight on Bill.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—The proposed legislation authorizing the $125,000,000 Colorado river development has hit so many snags in the last fortnight that its passage by this congress now seems exceedingly doubtful.



SENATOR H. F. ASHURST. [American Press.]

The bill, framed and being pressed by Senator Johnson [Rep., Cal.] and Representative Swing [Rep., Cal.], authorises the secretary of the interior to construct a 550 foot dam in the Colorado river at Boulder cañon or any other point in his discretion and to erect and operate a power plant of an installed capacity of 1,000,000 horse power and a steady capacity of 550,000 horse power, about three times the steady capacity of the government plant at Muscle Shoals.

Included in the scope of the project is the control of floods, which constitute a serious menace in the lower Colorado river valley; the irrigation of vast tracts of land in the states through which the river flows, the construction of an all-American canal to carry irrigation water to the Imperial valley, and the creation of a domestic water supply for the city of Los Angeles.

Gigantic Engineering Project.

This gigantic engineering undertaking is proposed as the first step in a still more comprehensive plan of river development, involving the erection of additional dams and the creation eventually of a grand total of 5,000,000 horse power of hydro-electrical energy.

With only a month of this congress remaining, however, the prospects of passage of the legislation are far from favorable. In the first place, the seven states concerned in the division of the water of the river have been unable to agree on the terms of the project. Arizona is flatly opposed to the bill, Utah has rescinded approval of it, and California has accepted it with reservations. Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, and Nevada are in favor of it.

Senators Ashurst [Dem., Ariz.] and King [Dem., Utah] have served notice on the floor of the senate that they intend to defeat the bill, even if compelled to adopt filibustering tactics in the closing days of the session to compass that end.

Farmers Voice Opposition.

Finally there is the opposition of agricultural constituencies reflecting the feeling of farmers that this period of depression in the prices of farm products is no time for the government to make a huge expenditure on an irrigation project that will increase production, accentuate competition and depress prices still further. The eastern and midwestern farmers are particularly cold to this proposition of being taxed to pay for the opening up of large additional areas for cultivation in competition with their own vain efforts to wring a profit from the soil.

The Los Angeles chamber of commerce, in a letter to the Associated Chamber of Commerce of the Imperial Valley, Jan. 3, 1924, stated that it was the opinion of that body "that farmers throughout the United States whose products until recently have been selling at a fraction of the cost of production, are at present opposed to the development of new agricultural areas."

Largely at the instigation of the upper basin states a plan for the division of the water of the Colorado river among the seven states affected was proposed. Each of these states named a representatitive to serve on a Colorado river commission and Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, was named to represent the federal government in negotiations designed to apportion the water of the river among the various states.

After an unsuccesful effort to make a division of the water among the seven states individually the commission agreed upon an apportionment of the water between the states of the upper basin (Colorado, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming), and those of the lower basin (Arizona, California, and Nevada), the plan being to let the two groups of states make subdivisions to suit themselves. Each basin was granted the "exclusive beneficial consumptive use of 7,500,000 acre feet of water per annum," and the lower basin states were authorized to increase their use of the water to the extent of 1,000,000 acre feet a year. By such an arrangement, which was signed by representatives of the seven states Nov. 24, 1922, the upper basin states were guaranteed 7,500,000 acre feet of water for future development.

At the meetings of their state legislatures in the early part of 1923 all of the Colorado river basin states, except Arizona, ratified the seven state compact. Arizona refused and has consistently refused to ratify the compact without a supplementary compact among the lower basin states.

All of the six states affected ratified the six-state compact, but California ratified with reservations and Utah's ratification was rescinded on Jan. 19 of this year.

CONGRESS APPROVES $10,000,000 TO FIGHT EUROPEAN CORN BORER

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Senate amendments to the bill authorizing the expenditure of $10,000,000 for the eradication of the European corn borer were concurred in by the house today and the measure now goes to the President.

The actual funds will be provided in the second deficiency appropriation bill to be passed by congress during the closing days of this session.

As a result of the passage of the authorization bill, Secretary Jardine will be in a position to develop a plan of coöperation with the states in an effort to check the spread of the corn borer during the coming season. Illinois is the latest state in which the corn borer has been discovered. The federal horticultural bill has arranged a hearing for Tuesday on the question of extending a quarantine, now in effect in certain eastern states, to include that state.

$50,000 Asked by Boy Injured in Celebration

Five south side business men, members of a committee of the South Shore Business Men's association, and two others are made defendants in the precipe of a $50,000 damage suit filed in Circuit court yesterday. Attorney Lucius Schofield, counsel for the plaintiff, Edward Stevens, 13, of 7446 Kingston avenue, a freshman at the University of Illinois, declares that Stevens lost one of his hands as a result of injuries when struck last August by a fragment of an aerial bomb during the celebration of completing electrification of the Illinois Central railroad.

MILLIONAIRE IS BANISHED FOR 5 YEARS BY JUDGE

Iron River, Mich., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Vernon T. Wakefield, millionaire Milwaukeean and owner of extegsive mining properties in Upper Michigan, was exiled from Iron county for five years by Judge R. C. Flanagan today on conviction of a charge of assault with intent to do great bodily harm.

Wakefield was found last summer, and sentence was suspended until the present term of court. The court's sentence today called for a prison term but on the testimony of the four doctors, Judge Flanagan paroled Wakefield, the condition being the millionaire be banished the full term of the sentence from Iron county.

Wakefield testified two men had come on his property. He said he thought the trespassers were desperate characters. He also said he fired in the air, his purpose being merely to frighten them from his property.

Turkey to Extend Life of Trade Pact with U. S.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Extension of the provisional commercial agreement between the United States and Turkey, expiring on Feb. 18, will be granted, Ali Djenani Bey, former minister of commerce, now a deputy in charge of commercial negotiations, announced today. A request for the extension, he said, had been made by Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, American high commissioner.

"King Ben's" Trial Opens at Benton Harbor May 16

Benton Harbor, Mich., Feb. 5.—(AP)—The trial of Benjamin Purnell, leader of the House of David colony, on charges brought by former girl members of his cult, will open in Circuit court here May 16, under a stipulation agreed to today by Prosecutor George H. Bookwalter and counsel for Purnell.

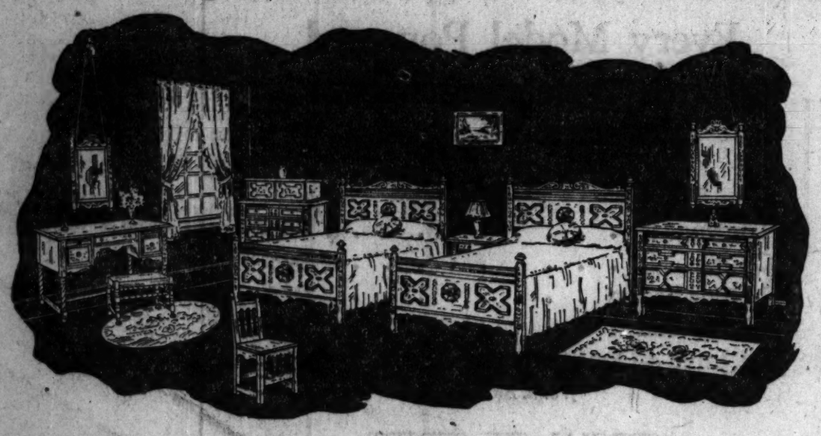
Our Semi-Annual Sale



"The Stanhope"—a group of sturdy walnut bedroom furniture, carrying with it the atmosphere of the early English type of home furnishing.

	Sale Price
Full Size Bed	$121.00
Twin Beds, each	117.00
Bureau	134.00
Chest of Drawers	134.00
Dressing Table	97.00
Bench	16.00
Chair	29.00
Stand	29.00

HERE'S something choice for your bedroom that you certainly ought to see, whether you buy it or not.

It is representative of the way they furnished homes in the period known as Early English. There's a substantial sturdiness about it that is in itself restful to look at.

Every piece has individuality, and yet together they make a most effective group. The wood is walnut; there's a moderation in the decorative ideas which is pleasing. It is very well made, "Scholle-quality" throughout; and we needn't do more than mention the prices.

There are so many other things here that will be a joy to see we hope you'll visit the store just to look at them, even if you buy nothing. We enjoy showing them.

Look through this special list. One of a kind, mostly; don't wait too long.

SMALL SENDS IN SCHOLES TO PUSH STONE OFF BENCH

Speaker Enters Race for Supreme Court.

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Gov Len Small's campaign to push Justice Clyde E. Stone from his seat on the Supreme court of Illinois took on a corroborative definiteness today with the announcement from Robert Scholes of Peoria, speaker of the Illinois house of representatives, that he had yielded to the governor's persuasions and would be Small's candidate for the justiceship.

It is to be a fight to punish Stone politically for having been one of the five Supreme court justices to hand down the majority opinion which charged that Small and his associates withheld nearly $1,000,000 in interest on the public funds. Justice Stone, who is a fellow townsman of Scholes, is the first of the five to come up for reelection.

Ten Counties to Decide.

The decision between Scholes and Stone, Small and anti-Small, will be made at the nominating convention which, it was decided ten days ago, will be held in Peoria on March 15. The ten counties in the district and their votes in the convention are:

Bureau, 9; Grundy, 4; Henry, 13; Knox, 13; La Salle, 21; Marshall, 4; Peoria, 25; Putnam, 1; Stark, 3; and Woodford, 4. Thus 49 votes are necessary for a majority.

Justice Stone will go into the contest with pre-convention prophecies giving him the Peoria, Henry, and Knox county votes, or a total of 51. He will be backed with the support of nearly all the best lawyers and many of the leading business men and bankers in his district, regardless of party.

Use Patronage Bait.

The Small-Scholes faction, on the other hand, will have the usual vote-getting inducement of the governor's control over the apportionment of state pay roll jobs and hard roads. Small henchmen have already begun the rounds of the county chairman and precinct committeemen inquiring about their counties' needs along road and pay roll lines, and about their sentiments in regard to the plan to oust Justice Stone.

It was intimated at the Peoria meeting on Jan. 27 that those who voted right would get the roads and the jobs.

Speaker Scholes has given the appearance during the last few weeks of being not too anxious to be the candidate. His selection has been the subject of several conferences both in Springfield and Peoria with the governor and his immediate advisers insisting that Scholes make the race, and it is reported other political friends of the speaker are warning him that he is going into a fight where his chance of victory is doubtful and the likelihood of doing himself political harm excellent.

It is considered likely that, should Scholes win the convention nomination, the Democrats would not select a candidate, but would unite with the anti-Small Republicans and back Justice Stone as an independent candidate. If this should happen, it is held to be almost a certainty that Justice Stone would be reelected.

SIXTH ARRESTED IN BUCKET SHOP SWINDLE PROBE

With the sixth arrest yesterday, detectives announced that their investigation of the activities of the Charles Fletcher company, 309 South La Salle street, alleged bucket shop operators, is complete. The latest arrest was that of Albert [Irish] Farrell, who is said to have been the manager of the concern.

Others taken into custody on Friday after police had received complaints indicating members of the firm had fraudulently collected some $200,000 from a number of wealthy residents of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Michigan, are: William Matthews, 24, of 1715 Gregory avenue; Sol Lefton, 27, of 1309 South Harding avenue; Harry Sultar, 28, of 5221 South Michigan avenue; George Zeman, 24, of the Sheridan Plaza hotel, and Edward Schulman, 23, of 1223 South Troy street.

Charges of violation of the Illinois securities act were filed against the six yesterday by James H. Mahoney of the state securities department.

Farrell was a defense witness in the trial of Frank Egan, convicted in Criminal court and given a life term for an attack on a girl.

ANNIE WOLFORD WILL GIVES PARK $50,000 FOR CLOCK

With a bequest of $50,000 from the late Mrs. Annie M. Wolford, a carillon tower surmounted by a pendulum clock is to be erected in Lincoln park.

Modeled after the nineteenth century tower in Stockbridge, Mass., the Lincoln park tower must, according to the specifications of the will revealed last night by President David H. Jackson of the Lincoln park board, be constructed of Massachusetts blue limestone, be 55 feet high and 15 feet square, housing a set of chimes as well as a pendulum regulated clock.

Mrs. Richmond A. Mead of Evanston, a niece to Mrs. Wolford, told last night that her aunt, who was the widow of Jacob A. Wolford, pioneer member of the board of trade, had lived for 35 years near the park at 1440 North State parkway and had always wanted to contribute to its development.

Week's Sales Estimated at $12,000,000.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

Officials of the National Automobile chamber of Commerce, under whose direction the national automobile exhibitions in New York and Chicago are presented, estimated last night that fully 200,000 persons had viewed the industry's twenty-seventh annual showing in the Coliseum between the grand opening last Saturday afternoon and the final closing of the show gates at 11 o'clock last night.

Although the exposition was scheduled to end at 10:30 p. m., nearly thirty minutes were required to empty the building of its last show crowds.

Sales Put at $12,000,000.

While no definite sales figures are available, exhibitors estimated last night that the total volume of retail sales and of dealers' and distributors' orders taken during the Chicago show will approximate $12,000,000.

Orders placed for the fine cars and custom body work exhibited in the annual automobile salon in the Drake hotel, which also ended last night, are expected to swell the Chicago week's business to much higher figures.

Models Go to Other Displays.

Many of the 300 shiny new models which have starred all week in Coliseum displays were moved out late last night and began their journeys back to automobile factories or to dealer shows in other cities. The de luxe cars shown at the Drake will be rolled out today and lashed in special express trains bound for Los Angeles and the first Pacific coast salon, due to open in the Biltmore hotel there on Feb. 14.

3 CHICAGOANS TASTE OF WAR—ON MOSQUITOES

They're Helping U. S. to Keep Nicaragua Quiet.

BY ROY BLANK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PUERTA CABEZAS, Nicaragua, Feb. 5.—Here, where barefooted Liberal and Conservatives would chop at each other with machetes but for the presence of United States marines and bluejackets, four Illinois men are helping to enforce the neutral zone recently established by Admiral Julian L. Latimer, commander of the special service squadron.

Sleeping in mosquito infested tents along the beach of Bragman's Bluff and patrolling the sandy street in front of the headquarters of Juan B. Sacasa, Liberal leader, is part of the daily duty of these men who are in turn blistered by tropical sun and drenched by the sudden downpour that converts the streets into muddy swamps.

A Soft Job—for a Marine.

James E. Day of the flagship Rochester is the only Illinois man in the landed forces whose job might be termed "soft." But his job is "soft" only by comparison to the others.

Day, whose home is 2727 West Adams street, Chicago, is, excluding the officers, the only office man ashore. Day is chief clerk with the landed forces, and while he is occasionally called upon to work on twenty-four hour stretches, he sits at a desk in the mosquito screened hotel where Lieut. Commander Joseph H. Hoffman has his headquarters.

Day's wife is in Chicago, and the part about the Nicaraguan situation bothering him most is that she cannot be here with him.

Capt. John W. Thomason Jr., the author of "Fix Bayonets" and many short stories, and Lieut. Kenneth B. Chappell, U. S. M. C., are the only other officers in the landed forces.

Private Frank Wrobleski is a husky Chicago marine who doesn't know what the trouble is all about but wishes "they would finish up soon so he can get out of this place." Wrobleski is from 1749 West Twenty-first street. He was put on guard outside one of the sawmills at Puerto Cabezas.

"What's It All About?"

"What do I think of this?" he said. "How do I know what I think about it when I don't know nothing about what's happening. If I could see THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE I might be able to tell you, but—" he mopped the perspiration from his face and spat. "I ain't seen a newspaper since I been here, not even a Spig newspaper. They don't print papers in this town."

Two other marines, S. E. Lee, who lives at Thirty-ninth street and Cottage Grove avenue, Chicago, and William A. Renken, 871 West Center street, Decatur, Ill., seem to be enjoying Nicaragua.

"Any old place is home to me," said Renken, "if only I knew what to keep the mosquitoes away with."

Yank Army Chief Leaves.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Feb. 5.—Col. C. B. Carter, American organizer and commander of the Nicaraguan national guard, reviewed his men for the last time this morning, when every man of them appeared in the honor guard that escorted him to the Managua station to see the veteran chief off on his departure for Corinto and then Washington.

Lawrence Dennis, Mr. Eberhardt's aid, whom Col. Carter blames largely for his action in resigning as commander of the Nicaraguan forces, was present. The colonel resigned yesterday after receiving a report that President Diaz considered him persona non grata and that Washington wanted him removed.

Mr. Dennis charges that Col. Carter played politics during the régime of Gen. Emilio Chamorro, standing by the unrecognized president, but Col. Carter protests that he opposed Gen. Chamorro while President Solorzario controlled the government, only serving the general when he secured the power.

Asks Redress from U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—A demand for reparations from the American government for the "outrages" perpetrated by Admiral Latimer's forces" will be made to the state department by Dr. T. S. Vaca, confidential agent in Washington of Dr. Juan B. Sacasa, Nicaraguan Liberal rebel leader, the former announced tonight. The list of "outrages" includes charges that American marines dumped war material belonging to the Liberals into the river at Puerto Cabezas, including 1,800,000 cartridges.

Geographer Visits Weather Bureau

Prof. Henry J. Cox, senior weather forecaster here (left), and Dr. Isaiah Bowman, director of the American Geographical society of New York, at the federal building yesterday.

Here to Get Medal

Dr. Isaiah Bowman, director of the American Geographical society of New York, who will receive the gold medal of the Geographical society of Chicago for eminent service and the promotion of geography in America on Tuesday evening, was the guest yesterday of Prof. Henry J. Cox, weather forecaster.

"There are still lands where it is doubtful that a white man has ever stood," Dr. Bowman said. "In North America they lie about Hudson's bay. In South America in Brazil.

Dr. Bowman acted as chief territorial adviser at the peace conference in Versailles. He speaks before the Geographic society of Chicago Tuesday night at Orchestra hall.

Two young high school couples who came to Chicago romance bent beat a sad retreat yesterday to Decatur, Ill., their home town.

It all started on Friday after school, when Joseph Puckett, 18, met his girl friend, Doris Keller, 18, in a candy store.

"Let's elope," proposed Joe.

"Well, maybe," demurred Doris. But Joe decided the issue by hurrying her toward the railroad station. On the way the two met Katherine E. Wonbacher, 18, and Rubin Loeb, 19, and the party became a foursome. They all took the interurban to Champaign and a train there for Chicago.

But the boys ruined everything by making inquiries at the Twelfth street station as to "how do you go about getting married in this town?" This excited the interest of a Travelers' Aid society worker, who held the four and notified the police.

GIRL'S SUICIDE NOTE TO MOTHER IS KEPT SECRET

The contents of a farewell note, penned by Miss Margaret Lee Grant, 25 year old nurse, to her mother, Mrs. Martin Lee Grant of Marion, Ind., just before Miss Grant committed suicide on Friday by slashing her wrists in her apartment at 6417 Kenwood avenue, were not revealed yesterday by Deputy Coroner John Dedrick, who conducted an inquest.

Deputy Dedrick refused to permit Woodlawn police to open the note, but ordered that it be turned over to Martin Grant, the girl's father, for delivery to the mother.

"Another note written by Miss Grant shows clearly she took her own life," said Mr. Dedrick.

A verdict of suicide was returned by the coroner's jury. The girl is said to have been despondent for several weeks. Her father said he would disregard her wish that her body be turned over to the University of Chicago medical school, and that he would return it to Marion for burial.

Prince of Wales Plans to Sail for Canada in August

LONDON, Feb. 5.—(AP)—The prince of Wales will sail for Canada for the diamond jubilee of Canadian confederation about Aug. 1 unless unforeseen circumstances prevent his departure, it was authoritatively stated today. It also was announced that King George and Queen Mary would be unable to go to Canada this year.

$10,000 Fire Burns Hall at Lake Forest Academy

Damage estimated at $10,000 was caused yesterday by a fire in the Reid science hall at Lake Forest academy. The flames, which started from crossed wires, were extinguished by the Lake Forest fire department. No students were in the building at the time.

MEXICO BOOSTS DUTIES AS OIL REVENUE FADES

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 5.—(AP)—President Calles today decreed increased import duties of 5 per cent ad valorem, effective in 30 days, upon virtually everything imported into Mexico.

The purpose of the decree is to increase government revenues, presumably to offset the actual or prospective diminution of oil tax revenues resulting from the decreased operations of foreign producers under the new petroleum law.

The president's proclamation lists 717 classifications subject to increased duty, including almost every kind of food, drink, clothing, cloth, raw materials, and manufactured products generally.

Grant More Injunctions.

Dispatches from Tampico say that the Tuxpan District court, sitting at Villa Cuauhtemoc, in the state of Vera Cruz, has granted two more general "amparos" against the new Mexican oil laws, making four such blanket injunctions by this court. The amparos suspend application of the new oil regulations until the Mexican Supreme court can act on the constitutionality of the legislation.

The companies granted amparos today were the Atlantic, Gulf, and West Indies Oil company and the Mexican Crude Oil company.

American flags flew today on the United States embassy and the United States consulate general buildings here in recognition of the tenth anniversary of the promulgation of the Mexican constitution of 1917 under which were enacted the land petroleum laws. These are the laws to certain features of which the United States government has protested insofar as they affect its citizens.

Former Governor Executed.

As a result of instructions from President Calles to inflict drastic punishment if they were found guilty of conspiring against the government, Julio Arriola, former governor of Oaxaca, and Nino Rivera, a former army major, were executed at Puebla City after a rapid court martial.

The two men, leaders of an anti-government plot, were captured with six of their followers at a meeting at midnight Thursday. At daybreak yesterday Arriola and Rivera were put to death, having confessed.

The others arrested also will be tried by court martial, and it is reported that at least two of them will be executed. Files discovered by the police in the conspirators' meeting place are said to have disclosed various military appointments signed "Fernando Gonsales," chief of staff under Porfirio Diaz. Gonzales, according to the police, claims the title of "supreme chieftain of the revolution."

Oil Parley in San Francisco.

[Copyright; 1927; By The New York Times.]

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 5.—Former President Obregon and Alberto J. Pani, former minister of the treasury, are said to be in San Francisco to confer with prominent oil men in an effort to straighten out the present oil tangle. Gen. Obregon is said to have full powers from President Calles to make such arrangements with the oil men which will enable the companies to resume work in the oil fields.

Señor Pani is representing the financial side of the government, which is facing losses of revenue because of the restriction on the oil companies.

NINE INJURED AS TROLLEY CRASH CAUSES PANIC

Nine persons were injured, one seriously, early yesterday when an eastbound Lawrence avenue street car collided with a southbound Robey street car, knocking the Robey car from the rails and causing a small panic among the passengers.

Michael Canavan, 30, of 2636 Mildred street, motorman of the Robey street car, sustained a twisted kneecap. Among the others injured were: Ira Gurda, 28, of 4856 Winthrop avenue; Peter Murray, 21, of 4711 North Albany avenue, a mail clerk, the most seriously hurt, who sustained a possible skull fracture; Patrick Murray, 31; Charles Gallard, 59, of 2729 North Halsted street, conductor of the Robey street car, and William Henry, 40, of 5127 North Robey street.

Police investigated, but held no one.

$300,000 FIRE IN TUBE PLANT.

Ambridge Pa., Feb. 5.—(AP)—One fireman was slightly hurt late today while aiding in combatting a fire which destroyed the large machine shop of the Standard Seamless Tube company, with a loss estimated by company officials at $300,000. Bursting of an oil valve started the fire.

Competitors Compliment STUDEBAKER at Chicago Show

NEVER were any cars so widely imitated by competitors as have been the Studebaker Custom models. Many manufacturers have followed the Studebaker lead with "Custom Cars"—at least they have used that name.

Others have given their most distinctive models names in an apparent endeavor to trail the success of the Studebaker President—the fastest selling seven-passenger sedan in the world.

Studebaker Sets Style

Ornaments have blossomed forth on many radiators simulating the dash and verve of the Studebaker Atalanta.

The extended roof visor, which Studebaker featured eighteen months ago, was introduced on several cars as a novelty.

A limited number of manufacturers have followed the Studebaker lead and equipped their new models with bumpers, although in a majority of cases purchasers are still compelled to pay from $35 to $50 extra for this equipment.

In some cases, dash gasoline gauges are standard equipment, but on a surprising number of cars this indispensable item is still charged for as an extra. The hydrostatic gasoline gauge has been standard equipment on Studebaker cars for more than two years.

A rain-drop doesn't make a river, and a name or feature doesn't make a motor car. It is the ensemble that counts. And no manufacturer has approached the exquisite completeness of the decorative treatment of Studebaker Custom Cars. None has approximated the dash and durability which have brought fame to Studebaker performance.

Leads in Performance, Too

With all the talk about vibrationless motors and crankshafts, Studebaker remains the only car in its price field equipped with a fully machined and dynamically balanced crankshaft.

Next year, and in subsequent years, other manufacturers will attempt to imitate the graceful lines and safety of Studebaker's clear-vision steel bodies.

A ride in a Studebaker is a revelation of custom performance. The price of a Studebaker is a triumph of One-Profit manufacturing.

All Studebaker Custom Cars have the following equipment:

Front and rear bumpers; no-draft ventilating windshield, exclusively Studebaker; disc wheels; engine thermometer and hydrostatic gasoline gauge on the dash; coincidental lock; oil filter; automatic windshield cleaner; rear-vision mirror; rear traffic signal light; 4-wheel brakes; full-size balloon tires; two-beam acorn headlights, controlled from steering wheel; full-vision, custom-designed steel body; broadcloth or fine mohair upholstery; exquisite broadlace trim; and the silvered figure of Atalanta poised above the radiator.

KAISER'S WOMEN FOLK INTRIGUING TO SEIZE THRONE

Daughter-in-Law Pitted Against His Wife.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—With the return to power of the former junkers and artistocrats in the guise of new converts to the Republican régime, the battle in the ranks of the German monarchists has broken out anew.

Former Crown Princess Cecilie, mother of Prince Wilhelm Friedrich, recognized as the rightful heir to the crown by most monarchists, is pitted in a bitter struggle against "Kaiserin" Hermine, wife of the exiled kaiser, who is determined to bring her imperial husband back to Germany to enjoy the glory of the throne.

Hermine has seized millions of dollars paid by Germany to the former kaiser for the Hohenzollerns, cutting off the income of Princess Cecilie and depriving her of funds for the political campaign of her son. But Princess Cecilie's daughter, a Russian grand duchess, has a political training denied Hermine, who was a princess in one of the smallest principalities of Germany.

Her Tactics Won.

Hermine's tactics were superb when she invaded the solitude of the former kaiser and triumphed over the sentimental appeal of Baroness von Rochow, childhood sweetheart of the former kaiser, and over the stately impressiveness of Duchess Johann Albrecht of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, when Princess Cecilie was absent and unable to watch her father-in-law. But now Cecilie knows a point or two over her opponent in the game for the throne.

Hermine has every cent of the family's money, but Cecilie has attractive sons. They can marry money. She is going in for match making, like Queen Marie of Roumania. Prince Louis Ferdinand inherited Russian charm. He is an ardent student of music, and, imbued with the glamour of the prince and artist, the girls love him. Already Potsdam points at young Ursula von Amnwitz as the bride of Prince Louis Ferdinand, who will help Cecilie win the throne for Louis Ferdinand's elder brother, Wilhelm Friedrich.

Dowry of $18,000,000.

Ursula von Amnwitz is of the small nobility. She is 16 years old and her dowry is estimated at $18,000,000. In the eyes of Cecilie, young Ursula is an ideal Hohenzollern bride because she establishes a much needed link with the world of finance. The crown princess and the cream of German aristocracy are convinced that one of the reasons America sided with England and France in the world war was because American heiresses had married English and French nobility.

Ursula's wealth hails from South America. Prince Louis Ferdinand is conscientiously studying Spanish, as requested by his mother. He went to Spain to enhance his linguistic ability. This, Cecilie is certain, will be a great asset to his courtship of Ursula, whose wealth will help the grandson of the former kaiser slowly to prepare propaganda for a reconquest of the throne of his ancestors.

Mendota, Ill., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Arlington, Ill., a village of 700 inhabitants, nine miles southwest of Mendota, holds a unique record, for there is not a barber in the entire village, nor is there a ladies' hair dresser or beauty parlor.

MOODY PRAISED FOR BIBLE WORK IN TWO NATIONS

More than 1,500 alumni participated in closing exercises of Founders' week of the Moody Bible institute yesterday. Among the visitors were many former co-workers of Dwight L. Moody, founder of the institution.

"In Moody's later years he mingled a great deal with the nobility and gentry of England and with the wealthy of this country, but he always kept the poor and lowly first in his thoughts," declared the Rev. R. A. Torrey, who became active in the institution work in 1889.

The Rev. C. R. Scafe, Detroit, is president of the alumni association, which has a total membership of 2,443. Illinois leads in members, with 585, and Pennsylvania is second, with 191.

PRICE OF FRENCH WINE DOUBLED; STILL GOING UP

PARIS, Feb. 4.—(AP)—France is facing a shortage of wine and many a Frenchman is melancholy at the prospect of having less to drink and paying more for it than ever. Wine has doubled in price in the last three months and dealers say there will be a further rise of 50 per cent before spring. The ordinary Frenchman no longer complains that prohibition in America has cut off one of his country's most profitable markets. He is afraid there won't be enough wine to keep everybody in France contented even if all the rest of the world goes dry. Today he is paying four francs [about 16 cents] for a carafe of red wine such as was sold for two francs last autumn and next spring he is going to have to pay six francs for it, the dealers say.

Hundreds of persons were attracted to the scene yesterday when a man, later identified as George Waski, 3618 Cheney avenue, Detroit, committed suicide at Wells and Monroe streets by slashing his wrists with a razor.

MARX WINS O. K. OF REICHSTAG IN RIOTOUS SESSION

New Cabinet Receives 61 Vote Majority.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—In one of the most dramatic sessions in the history of the reichstag, the new cabinet of Chancellor Marx today obtained a vote of confidence of 235 votes against 174, with eighteen members abstaining from voting.

This vote was preceded by general turmoil, which endangered the very existence of the cabinet, since the socialists produced documents to prove that in the days of the Kapp monarchist plot, the present minister of the interior, Walter von Keudell, gave orders to disregard the instructions of the Ebert government. Herr von Keudell frantically denied the charge of treason to the republic. His protestations were drowned in the shouts of the reichstag's republicans, who stormed toward the ministerial seats& Herr von Keudell threw up his arms and flung himself back in his seat, while Chancellor Marx slumped forward in despair.

Marx Gives Promise.

The chancellor guaranteed that he would carry out a severe examination of the past actions of the Nationalist minister of the interior, but this failed to appease the house. The reichstag adjourned for an hour. The Nationalists rushed to the archives of the reichstag and dug up old documents and informed several prominent leaders of the political factions that documents compromising them had been found also. They pointed to the fact that even Foreign Minister Stresemann, in the days of the Kapp putsch, had not entirely opposed the Kapp faction.

Politicians Give In.

The politicians recalled the stormy hours of their pasts and to save their faces they demanded a most gruelling cross-examination of the minister of the interior, making Dr. Marx responsible.

Then they expressed the confidence demanded in a vote which gave the Marx cabinet a majority of 61 votes, but this was only achieved through the absence or abstention of sixty-two members of the opposition.

McERLANE TRIAL FOR KILLING TO START TUESDAY

Frank McErlane, one of the leaders of the Saltis-McErlane south side beer running gang, will go to trial in Valparaiso, Ind., on Tuesday for the murder of Attorney Thad Fancher.

The killing of Fancher occurred in a roadhouse near Cedar Lake, in Lake county, but a change of venue was taken. Two special prosecutors assigned by the Lake county state's attorney will be assisted by the Porter county prosecutors during the trial.

McErlane is the third man to be tried for the Fancher murder. John O'Reilly, now serving a life sentence in the Michigan City prison, will be the principal witness for the state. He asserted that McErlane was the man who shot Fancher.

FATHER OF SEVEN A SUICIDE.

Rufford Prinner, 42 years old, 833 Roscoe street, the father of seven children, who drank poison on Jan. 30 died yesterday in the County hospital. Prinner was a plumber. No motive for the suicide has been determined.

FUR MERCHANTS HELD ON CHARGE OF FAKE ROBBERY

John and Archilles Balalis, proprietors of a fur store at 1135 Wilson avenue, were arrested yesterday on charges of conspiracy after Frank Brown, 26 years old, confessed at the detective bureau that he was implicated with them in a plot to stage a fake fur robbery.

Brown asserted that the brothers had paid him and two others to steal the furs, that they then had collected theft insurance and taken back the goods. He implicated Walter Hill and Ted Regan as his accomplices. Hill already has been tried on another charge and sentenced to ten years to life in the penitentiary.

Distinguished in criminal annals as the first man who ever stole an airplane in the United States, Brown was known to the Chicago police as the champion stool pigeon, it is alleged. He escaped penalties several times by telling the activities of his pals. One pair, getting wind of his habits, went to his home a few weeks ago and tortured Marie Burwick, with whom he was living. She declined to tell where he was and Brown was arrested a short time later.

LOSES CHILDREN; GOES INSANE.

Clinton, Ill., Feb. 5.—[U. P.]—Frank Riley, father of the four children who were burned to death here five weeks ago when their home was destroyed by fire, was today adjudged insane and committed to the Kankakee hospital for treatment.

An unusual alienation of affections suit, in which a husband charged that his wife had been stolen away by another woman, was filed yesterday in the Superior court by Nicholas Harnishfeger, 31 years old, baker at 606 North Wells street.

Harnishfeger asked $100,000 damages of Mrs. Martha Moller, 40 years old, 7 West Pearson street, who, he charged, had caused his wife, Catherine, 29 years old, to lose her love for her husband. As a result, Mrs. Harnishfeger has left him and filed suit for divorce, he said.

The baker declared the reason he had incurred Mrs. Moller's enmity was that he had refused to lend her $3,000. She then sought a revenge by inducing his wife to leave him, the husband declared.

British Women Insist King Promise Vote in His Speech

LONDON, Feb. 5.—(AP)—A demand that the king's speech opening parliament next Tuesday contain an unequivocal promise of votes for women over 21 is made in a manifesto issued by the "equal political rights campaign committee." Among the prominent signatories are Lady Rhondda and Mrs. Margaret Wintringham, both former members of parliament.

SUBWAY PLANS ARE APPROVED BY ENGINEERS

Subway plans for Chicago, [illegible]ed by the Strong-Tyson citizens' committee, were endorsed yesterday by the Western Society of Engineers. The plans call for tubes in State street [illegible] Jackson and Washington boulevards.

"We regard the report as constructive, and in general approve of the recommendations," the society declared. "In general they agree with those made by the society in February, 1926."

The report commended in particular the proposed arrangement for special assessments, extension of elevated lines, and the recommendation for unification of all transit lines in the city.

WAR ON CRIME SPEEDED AHEAD BY CONVICTIONS

Judges to Push Murder Trials This Week.

Encouraged by the apparent reawakening of jurors in criminal cases to their responsibilities to the community, Chief Justice William J. Lindsay of the Criminal court called on his associates yesterday to start a drive against criminals in cases involving serious offenses. As a result each of the judges in the criminal division will have on their calls for Tuesday morning several murder trials.

The chief justice will head the list by having before him Harold J. Croarkin, confessed slayer of 6 year old Walter Schmith, who was killed after an alleged attack by the youth in the Devon Riding academy. State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe announced yesterday that he is ready to proceed to immediate trial and will have assisting him as special prosecutor former Assistant State's Attorney Joseph Savage.

Defense to Seek Delay.

Attorneys Thomas D. Nash and Michael Ahern for the defense announced that they would attempt to obtain a continuance because of a missing witness.

Croarkin's defense will be insanity, it was announced. Dr. William Lorens of the University of Wisconsin and Dr. William J. Hickson are expected by defense attorneys to testify in behalf of Croarkin.

The optimistic views of those interested in enforcing the laws were brought about by the dispatch with which juries in the last weeks have brought in guilty verdicts. The conviction of nine boys for manslaughter in the death of Stanley Ciesla before Judge John J. Sullivan and the life sentence of Frank Egan, attacker of a girl, before Judge Emanuel Eller brought forth a statement yesterday from Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the Chicago crime commission.

Chamberlin Praises Juries.

"The jury which returned a verdict of life imprisonment against Frank Egan, and the jury which sentenced nine street corner hoodlums to life imprisonment for killing performed distinct public services," Mr. Chamberlin said.

"These verdicts will be of permanent value to the community because they are both just and merciful. Both crimes were cruel and atrocious.

"The Egan verdict expresses public opinion in this community with respect to attacks on women and children. It is a notice to parents, guardians, and all social agencies of the community that if they are to absolve the youth of our city from responsibility for their acts they themselves must accept the blame for the sad plight in which these unfortunates now find themselves. These two juries expressed this trend of public opinion clearly and it is a wholesome trend which should continue."

Egan was practically placed in solitary confinement in the jail. Warden Edward J. Fogarty feared that even the prisoners might resent the attack made by him on the 20 year old girl.

(Copyright: 1927: By The New York Times.)

GENEVA, Switzerland, Feb. 5.—A painting by Bernardino Luini, the celebrated master of the Lombard school and friend of Leonardo da Vinci, which was recently discovered at Bergamo, on the Swiss-Italian frontier, has been sold to the museum of Cleveland, O., for $800,000. Luini, when young, used to make paintings for the equivalent of about $3.75, plus board. The question now arises whether the Italian government will permit exportation of the painting.

PREMIER TELLS PEASANTS CAROL CANNOT RETURN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Feb. 5.—Only a coup d'état remains for former Crown Prince Carol if he still intends to retrieve his claim to the Roumanian throne.

This is the interpretation given here to an uncompromising declaration by Premier Averescu in answer to a demand presented by the Peasants' party in the Roumanian chamber of deputies for the restoration of the former crown prince to his rights to the throne.

Premier Averescu traced the government's complaint against Carol from 1915, stressing his marriage to Zizi Lambrino, and recalling how he left his present wife, Princess Helen of Greece, for another woman. The premier asserted the action taken by the crown council in establishing a regency to supplant Carol was done for the "good of the dynasty and throne."

Reports that extra guards have been stationed at the frontiers to prevent any movement on the part of Carol's followers indicate that the government is aware that force may be tried to return the abdicated prince to the throne.

OPORTO REBELS STILL HOLD OUT AGAINST TROOPS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LISBON, Feb. 5.—The war minister announced today that the Bengo artillery, which revolted yesterday at Faro, south Portugal, surrendered to government troops this morning. The revolt at Tavira also has been suppressed.

The revolutionists at Oporto are completely surrounded by government troops. The rebels, totaling 2,000, threaten to fight until the last man has been killed, and government troops fear to bombard the town because of the danger of injuring the population, many of whom are fleeing.

Government airplanes dropped pamphlets on the town saying the rebels would soon be beaten and requesting the people to remain faithful to the government. The number of wounded is high. The total of deaths is not known here.

SENTIMENT

"Public sentiment is everything. With public sentiment nothing can fail; without it, nothing can succeed. Consequently he who molds public sentiment goes deeper than he who enacts statutes or pronounces decisions. He makes statutes and decisions possible or impossible to be executed. ABRAHAM LINCOLN."

Lincoln's words are world-wide in application. Adapting an idea therefrom, it is just and fitting to say that favorable public sentiment is the most valuable asset of any business enterprise.

SHEPHERD WINS TECHNICAL POINT IN ESTATE FIGHT

Named Executor; Contest Ties Up Riches.

William D. Shepherd yesterday was appointed executor of the $1,000,000 estate of his ward, the late Billy McClintock, in an order entered by Probate Judge Henry Horner. The Union Trust company was appointed depositary for the estate funds, which may be expended only on a court order.

Shepherd thus won the point for which he has striven ever since he was acquitted of the charge of murdering young McClintock by administering typhoid germs. But the victory was only a technical one. Shepherd may not spend any money from the estate pending lengthy litigation to be brought by ten cousins of the millionaire youth, who charge the will was made under Shepherd's influence.

There was some dispute in court yesterday as to the bank to be appointed to hold the funds of the estate. Shepherd, through his attorney, Weymouth Kirkland, asked that the Union Bank at Chicago be selected, while the cousins, represented by Attorney Orville Taylor, insisted that the Northern Trust company retain control.

Judge Horner suggested that the lawyers confer together and agree upon a bank. They finally compromised by selecting the Union Trust company to take care of the estate.

Attorney Chester Cleveland, representing Percy B. Coffin, the public administrator, was also present at the hearing and declared that the estate should be turned over to his client. His petition was denied.

A suit to break the will by the cousins will be filed some time next week, it was announced.

ENTERS JUDGMENT FOR $10,512 AGAINST MARGARET WILSON

MARGARET WOODROW WILSON.

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—A judgment for $10,512 was entered today in the county clerk's office against Margaret Woodrow Wilson, the eldest daughter of the late President Wilson. Miss Wilson is well known as a singer and social worker. The judgment was given to Rose Fichtel in payment on four promissory notes dated Jan. 12, 1926. Attorneys representing each party refused to discuss the case.

Her father bequeathed $2,500 a year to Miss Wilson so long as she remained unmarried. She is stated to have negotiated three notes for $2,000 each and one of $5,000. A stipulation filed with the papers showed $1,000 was paid on the indebtedness.

31 Saved When Rammed Freight Vessel Sinks

GERMAN DRAMA RE-ENACTS FORD PEACE VOYAGE

BERLIN, Feb. 4.— (AP) — Henry Ford's ill fated peace crusade of 1915-16, when the automobile manufacturer tried to "get the boys out of the trenches by Christmas," has found its way to the European stage.

In four German cities—Gotha, Beuthen, Hindenberg, and Glewitz—and one Polish city—Kattowitz—a drama called "The Peace Ship" has been successfully staged. The playwright is Julius Maria Beneker, a young writer.

"In so far as the drama carries a lesson," young Beneker said, "it is this: That the cessation of wars is possible only if our sociological and perhaps our religious concepts undergo a thorough change. Ford in his peace attempt was a tragic figure."

The drama's chief character is Ford himself, who is depicted as starting out well intentioned. He soon encounters an angry mob of discordant members of the ship's company. After landing in Norway Ford learns that the United States has entered the war. He sees copies of American newspapers in which he is made to look ridiculous and he returns home disillusioned.

Dean Samuel Marquis of St. Paul's cathedral, Detroit; Mme. Rosika Schwimmer, and S. S. McClure of New York are among the actual voyagers on the peace ship who are impersonated.

McAlester, Okla., Feb. 5.—[U. P.]—With three marines armed with machine guns standing guard, the First National bank of McAlester opened for business today—the only active banking institution in McAlester. Banking officials were generally optimistic over the ability of the institution to withstand a heavy run caused by the closing of the $2,000,000 McAlester Trust company, the Bank of North McAlester, and other small banks yesterday.

Call Off Several Russian Elections; Too Few Voters

MOSCOW, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Soviet town and village elections now in progress throughout Russia show a surprising apathy among the voters. The newspapers say that in some districts 30 per cent of the voters are abstaining from voting. In several districts the elections were annulled because the number of voters fell below the legal minimum.

It has a new and exclusive locking switch that can be removed for cleaning, repair or replacement in a moment's time, yet is as simple and convenient to work as the light switch on your wall.

The lens is of purest, clearest glass specially compounded for spotlight use. An octagonal rim prevents rolling when lying on a flat surface. The reflector has a highly polished silver surface encased so that it need never be touched when changing lamps. The head is removable, allowing use as a candle. The case is heavily nickeled.

This new spotlight is made by the makers of the famous Ray-O-Vac radio batteries and it is equipped with Ray-O-Vac batteries, too. These batteries have staying power.

Ray-O-Vac spotlights and batteries are sold by flashlight dealers everywhere. Be sure to ask for them by the name Ray-O-Vac.

TRIBUNE WANT ADS

sell pedigreed kittens,

recover lost fur cap

"I advertised three beautiful pedigreed kittens in The Sunday Tribune. Before noon five people, one of them from Pullman, came to my house, and I made three sales for a total of $42 at a small cost."
MRS. S. R. BINGHAM,
657 Oakdale Avenue.

MANY people of Chicago are eager to own household pets. As Mrs. S. R. Bingham, 657 Oakdale Avenue, has found out, The Tribune Want Ad Section reaches the most desirable of these prospects.

The experience related by Miss Frances Jacobson, 5129 Harper Avenue, again proves The Tribune's ability to find the finder of a lost article. The return of her brother's fur cap quickly followed the placing of a Tribune Lost and Found Want Ad.

Both for selling and service, The Tribune Want Ad Section is rich in results. Let a Tribune Want Ad help you today!

"A want ad in the Lost and Found of The Tribune brought prompt and joyous results, when we offered $5 reward for the return of a sealskin cap which my brother had lost at a theater. Since then with honest enthusiasm I have gratefully recommended The Tribune Want Ads."
FRANCES JACOBSON,
5129 Harper Avenue.

Watch for the Winners!

They will be announced soon.

104 WAYS TO MAKE MONEY

Superior 0100—Adtaker!

Will cold rooms spoil the happiness of your new home?

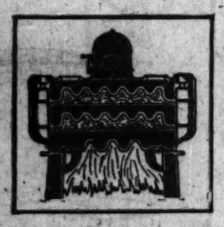
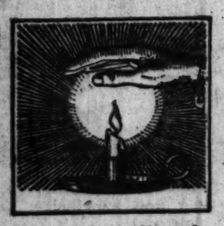
How often have you suffered discomfort on a winter evening in the home of a friend or neighbor—a home improperly and insufficiently heated! And how often have you determined that when you open your new home to your friends, its genial warmth and coziness shall be proof of the genuineness of your hospitality?

Long back-and-forth fire travel



Fuel-saving corrugations in every section



The surface directly above the fire is most efficient. To prove this, first hold your hand at the side of a flame—then directly over it. You will find the hottest point directly over the flame.

The two great wastes

Heating men everywhere know that the common cause of cold rooms and the chief cause of high fuel bills are two great boiler wastes—waste down into the ash pit and waste up the chimney. And Weil-McLain has always contended that the most desirable boiler for the home is the one which most nearly overcomes these costly wastes.

We bring out this point for only one reason. Because we emphatically believe that we have taken a long step forward in overcoming these wastes.

Science ends waste into ash pit

Science accomplishes miraculous things, but the results achieved by science are not miracles. Science is not magic. It is an exacting, painstaking method for determining principles—for discovering facts. It is a means of making analysis and procedure more secure. It eliminates the penalties of guesswork.

Science is organized knowledge. And scientific combustion is the effective application of this knowledge to Weil-McLain Boilers. Scientific combustion ends waste of fuel into the ash pit.

Chimney waste is also ended

But Weil-McLain has gone still farther, by determining also to overcome waste up the chimney.

And Weil-McLain has succeeded. The corrugated crown sheet section, directly above the fire, and the corrugation of all other vital heating surfaces, adds vastly to the total area of heating surface. The heating surfaces are corrugated like this ∿∿∿ instead of flat like this ———.

More heating surface in the same space

Increase the amount of heating surface in a boiler and you increase the boiler's efficiency. That is what Weil-McLain has done—without increasing the size of the boiler and without adding to its cost.

Weil-McLain users save real money on their fuel bills because of this and other revolutionary improvements.

Weil-McLain boilers, due to the corrugated design of the crown sheet section, give you practically double the usual area of heating surface at this important point. You get this extra heating surface without extra size in the boiler and without added price. You get increased efficiency and reduced chimney waste.

Back-and-forth fire travel

Moreover, there are no short cuts to the chimney in this modern-type boiler. The illustration shows how the hot gases are baffled backward and forward until every available heat unit has been extracted and sent to your radiators.

This is a practical, fuel-saving feature that means warm rooms on zero days and a real saving on your fuel bills.

And these added features

The Weil-McLain Boiler, from top to bottom, merits your detailed inspection. Everywhere you will find careful engineering and quality construction. Among these additional features are:

—Triangular grates which easily and quickly crush out stubborn clinkers

—Lower one-third of firepot smooth to avoid clogging and to permit clean shaking down of fire

—Large fire door for convenience

—Handy front clean-out doors in each section

—And more heat absorbed and utilized from oil, or any other kind of fuel or method of firing

See your heating contractor

Your heating contractor will gladly show you the many fuel-saving Weil-McLain features. He will also help you select the Weil-McLain Boiler best suited to your needs and quote you a price for installing it complete.

Or write us, or our wholesale distributor in your territory, for a copy of our booklet, listing all sizes and describing every detail of these unusual boilers.

Unexcelled for use with Oil Burners

Weil-McLain Boilers are unexcelled for use with oil burners, because their corrugated heating surfaces, large water spaces and long back-and-forth fire travel supply the great amount of concentrated heating surface and fire travel required to absorb the quick, intense heat produced by modern oil burners.

TURN PROHIBITION PROBLEM BACK TO STATE—RITCHIE

Says Volstead Law Can't Be Enforced.

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Prohibition cannot be enforced and it is high time America faced the truth and turned the problem back to the states "in accordance with the traditional American doctrine of local self government and state determination," Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland declared in a speech at the dinner of the real estate board tonight.

GOV. ALBERT C. RITCHIE.

Gov. Ritchie, generally considered an aspirant for the Democratic presidential nomination, said that national prohibition has "bred more interstate discord and more political cowards and hypocrites and has done more damage to the body politic and to our social fabric than anything else that has ever entered our national life."

Thinks Conditions Are Worse.

"The Volstead law," he said, "must either be changed or enforced—and I am convinced that it cannot be enforced. We have spent nearly $150,000,000 trying to enforce it and have sacrificed nearly four billion dollars in taxes while the effort has been made and our last state is worse than our first.

"I believe in the right of each state to settle, in its own way, questions which intimately concern its people, its peace, its order, it morals and its customs.

"This is such a question. Many of the states may prefer absolute prohibition. Others do not. There is no use in ignoring the fact—there is in fact serious danger in ignoring it—that in many states the population is preponderantly urban and that the urban element is against Volsteadism.

"Why intensify the conflict between rural and the urban? The south and the west are rich in achiement and richer still in promise. If they want prohibition they are entitled to have it; but why submerge the infinity of problems that confront them in a futile struggle to enforce prohibition in states which do not want it?

Urges State Determination.

"So instead of attempting to standardize human conduct, instead of attempting to club communities which resent the Volstead act into taking it, let the problem be settled under the traditional American doctrine of local self government and state determination and turn the subject back to the states so that each state may handle it in accordance with the convictions and the will of its people.

"If the fall elections teach any lesson at all it is that both parties must face the prohibition question honestly and fearlessly. It embodies a national issue that is irrepressible."

DENY NEW TRIAL IN BANKRUPTCY CASE

Motion for a new trial in the case of five officials of the Bridgeport Electric company, convicted of conspiracy to conceal assets in bankruptcy, was denied yesterday by federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe. Sentence will be passed on Feb. 12.

SENATOR A. A. JONES IS VICTIM OF AN ATTACK OF HEART TROUBLE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Stricken with a heart attack in the senate barber shop, Senator A. A. Jones of New Mexico was in a serious condition tonight at the Emergency hospital.

Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, the attending physician, expressed hope that the veteran Democratic legislator would recover, but added that he was a very sick man.

Senator Jones, who is 65 years old, has suffered from agina pectoris for several years and once during the last session of congress he was obliged to give up work for several weeks.

The barber was half finished when the senator suffered an acute heart attack. Senator Copeland, of New York, a physician, was hurriedly summoned and had the shop attendants place Senator Jones on the floor, there being no couch handy.

There was a general response to a hurry call for whisky sent out by Dr. Copeland, and this and other restoratives were administered gradually.

The patient's condition was such that he could not be moved immediately. As his pulse gathered strength he was taken to the hospital two hours after the attack.

N. Y. MEDICAL CHIEF CALLS DRY LAW A MENACE

Poor Booze More Deadly than Autos, Gas.

"Actually," prohibition does not exist.

The "poor, poisonous quality of liquor consumed" constitutes a public health meance, and causes more deaths than vehicular and gas poisoning accidents.

Cases of "alcoholic psychosis" (alcoholism marked by delirium) have increased enormously due to "impurities of the liquor."

Increase in Alcoholism.

These are some of the findings by Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner of New York City, in a report made to Mayor Walker today. In charge of all investigations regarding suspicious deaths in New York, Dr. Norris was requested on Jan. 5 by Mayor Walker to make a study of the poison liquor situation in the city.

His report is based on exhaustive examination of statistics from the various city hospitals. These show, beginning with 1922, "a marked increase in the number of cases of alcoholism." The figures for 1925 and 1926 for acute alcoholism have reached close to the pre-prohibition ratio.

"My opinion based on actual experience of the medical examiner's staff," said Dr. Norris, "is that there is actually no prohibition. Instead of licensed saloons, open to inspection, there are speakeasies which greatly outnumber the licensed saloons of former days.

Calls It Health Menace.

"Experience has taught us, and it is common knowledge, that at least all people who drank before prohibition are drinking now, provided they are still alive. Because of the poor and poisonous quality of the liquor consumed steps must be taken as promptly as possible to remedy this public health menace.

"The statistics are self-explanatory. The citizens of our city have not given up drinking alcohol. The alcohol that they take is mainly poisonous. The contention that the prohibition law is made to benefit the rich and protect poor is obviously ludicrous. The cases which we have handled come from the poorer class of citizens."

It's 'Dr.' Harry S. New Now; Postmaster Gets Degree

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Harry S. New, postmaster general, slipped into Indianapolis today, received an honorary LL.D. degree from his alma mater, Butler university, then went back to Washington. New refused to discuss politics, but spoke enthusiastically about aviation and its future.

RAIDED WITHOUT WARRANT; FOUR GIVEN FREEDOM

"Constitutional rights cannot be waived, and especially where persons are forced into a situation," Commissioner Henry C. Beitler said yesterday in dismissing charges of violating the Volstead act, placed against A. C. Allyn, investment broker at 67 West Monroe street, and three executives of the concern.

On Jan. 15 prohibition agents found a varied assortment of liquors, valued at $10,000, in the vaults of the brokerage concern. Arrested with Allyn were W. E. Kistner, vice president; G. L. Sponsler, assistant treasurer, and E. W. Thomas, vice president and treasurer.

Attorney Edwin L. Weisl, representing the defendants, argued that the evidence be suppressed and the charges dismissed, as no search warrant had been served.

Mr. Thomas testified that he allowed Prohibition Agent Frank L. White to enter the vault after White had inquired if three cases of liquor in the vault were owned by a man named Fresch. He said White told him he did not have a search warrant, and that no legal action or publicity would follow if he were permitted to enter without a warrant.

White admitted Thomas' charge.

BRITAIN STARTS TO SWEEP NATION CLEAN OF REDS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The British government means to make a cleanup of bolsheviks and other Red agents who have been operating in England for years, Sir William Joynson-Hicks, home secretary, announced last night.

"The government has resolved to frustrate insidious propaganda carried on in this country by bolsheviks from Russia and will not permit such license to aliens as free speech that would make England a 'cockpit' for every crank and traitor throughout the world," he declared.

PARTY LINES TO FALL ON ALIEN PROPERTY BILL

Nonpartisan Action in the Senate Pledged.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Nonpartisan action on alien property legislation was pledged by Republican and Democratic members of the senate finance committee today as the revised house bill was reported to the senate by Senator Smoot [Rep., Utah].

Senator Smoot announced his intention of calling the measure up for action at the earliest possible date. Senator Jones [Dem., N. M.], a member of the finance committee, told the senate that the Democrats had cooperated with the Republicans in revising the bill and that it was in no sense a partisan measure.

Borah May Oppose Sections.

That Senator Borah [Rep., Idaho] may oppose some features of the bill was indicated by questions he asked Senator Smoot. Senator Borah has favored the immediate return of all alien property, whereas the senate committee would retain 40 per cent in order to make possible the payment at once of 80 per cent of the awards of the mixed claims commission to American citizens.

The house bill provided for only 20 per cent, but set a maximum of $100,000,000 to be furnished by the treasury for compensation of German owners of ships, patents, and radio stations seized by the United States, half of this fund to be used toward the immediate payment of mixed claims commission awards, and the German owners to wait for the balance of their bill.

Senate Revises Bill.

The bill, as revised by the senate committee, provides only $50,000,000 for principal and interest on the German ships. Under its terms deferred payments for 40 per cent of the alien property, 40 per cent of the value of the ships, and 20 per cent of the awards of the mixed claims commission will be met from the Dawes plan annuities over a long period of years.

"Under the circumstances, it is impossible to provide for the immediate payment of all the American claimants, the immediate payment of all the ship owners, and the immediate return of all the alien property," Senator Smoot said in reporting the bill to the senate. "Accordingly, your committee was confronted with the task of providing for the immediate payment of as large a percentage as possible of the claims of the American nationals and German ship owners, and for the return of as large a percentage as possible of the alien property."

FLORIDA FEELS EFFECT OF BOOM TIME PROSPERITY

Tourists, Tenants Profit in Cheap Rents.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5.—A survey of the situation in southeastern Florida as it exists at the height of the winter season, with possibly 150,000 northern tourists added to the normal population, indicates that boom time construction resulted in an overbuilding of more than 50 per cent. In the matter of transportation it is found that the railway equipment is 80 per cent beyond requirements. The Florida East Coast railway in an official discussion this week stated that it is using only 20 per cent of its facilities this winter to handle existing business. It was explained, however, that the present system was designed to take care of Florida's growth for the next twenty years.

In the matter of housing and business building the situation is regarded as serious. It is conceded that the present supply of houses, apartments, and business structures will take care of the growth and demand for two decades. It is also admitted that there is little likelihood of any further construction in these classes of buildings for ten years at least.

Building at an End.

The building program in this part of Florida is practically at an end. This applies to Miami, Miami Beach, Hollywood, Hialeah, Fort Lauderdale, and north to and including West Palm Beach.

Analysis of the housing situation indicates that a general refinancing of the whole project will be necessary shortly. According to most reliable authority, the number of apartment houses in Greater Miami is approximately 1,600, which contain more than 19,000 apartment units of three rooms, or 57,000 rooms of this class.

On the basis of ground, construction and furnishing costs, which existed when the bulk of this building was done, the cost exceeded $2,000 a room, including furnishings, and the whole represents an investment of approximately $120,000,000. This figure, when submitted to bankers and others close to the heart of the situation, was said to be very conservative.

Survey by the apartment house owners' association as of the last week in January shows that occupancy is not more than 60 per cent, despite the winter influx. Average rentals are now $75 a month, with some as low as $40.

There are roughly 10,000 places of business, stores, offices, and workshops in the area. In downtown Miami a check has shown 1,200 vacancies and in outlying territory about 800. These figures are conservative. Store rents that were $300 to $500 a month a year and a half ago are now down to $75 and $100. In this period of supposedly business peak conditions, seasonable business houses are closing up daily.

Hotel Rates Reduced.

There are 137 hotels of record in the Greater Miami area. These are mostly of the resort character and are operated on a basis of a three or four months' season. Present occupancy by patrons is estimated to be at 60 per cent, but some hotel men insist the figure is below 50 per cent. The hotel investment represents approximately $100,000,000. The rates this winter in very high class establishments are as low as $5 or $6 a day. These charges alone demand a revenue of 8 per cent or $8,000,000 annually above operation costs on the combined hotel development.

A year ago owners of acreage that had been taken over by developers to subdivide began to get their property back, because of failure by developers to meet purchase payments. This year the projecters of apartments and business buildings and original owners of hotel property are beginning to get that class of property back, purchasers being unable to complete buying agreements.

On the face of published figures building operations as represented by permits totaled over $700,000,000 in the Miami district up to July, 1926. Five-sevenths of these operations were financed by first and second mortgages. The first mortgages, generally speaking, were handled by large mortgage finance concerns that spread out in the form of mortgage bond issue obligations for hundreds of millions of dollars, mostly 6 per cent paper.

The day of interest and amortization reckoning is now rapidly approaching and will make refinancing imperative. The Greater Miami Apartment House Owners' association is now busily at work with committees of mortgage bankers trying to figure some way to fix a disorganized scramble for cover which would be hurtful to future interests of Florida. These organizations have had the matter under continuous consideration since last summer.

In the opinion of some of the best informed, notably Mayor E. C. Romfh, Miami improved property will have to undergo a complete revaluation downward and future financing on that basis. The bulk of mortgage finance paper existing is held in middle western, New England, and middle Atlantic states.

Florida's tourist season is larger this year than last. The railways estimate 2,000 passengers at this time passing through Jacksonville, or other points of entry.

SENATE ACTION ON CONFERENCE REPORT ON RADIO BILL BLOCKED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Senate approval of the pending conference report on radio legislation was blocked again this afternoon when Senator Pittman [Dem., Nev.] moved to ask a new conference with the house on the bill. His motion carries with it instructions to the conferees on the part of the senate to demand revision in a number of particulars. An agreement was reached under which a definite time for a final vote will be fixed on Monday.

Senator Pittman's principal objection to the bill in its present form is that it does not deny the acquisition of "vested rights" by the present holders of broadcasting licenses. Under his motion to recommit, the senate conferees would be instructed to demand the inclusion of provisions requiring applicants for broadcasting licenses to waive claims of rights to wave lengths or "use of the ether."

CITIES REPORTED SWELLING CHORUS FOR FARM RELIEF

Hamilton Club Demands Congress Action.

Sentiment favoring immediate farm relief legislation—which comes up before both houses of congress this week—is rapidly gaining strength in the cities and in congress itself, according to members of the Hamilton club of Chicago, who revealed last night that the club has twice sent resolutions to Washington urging action.

It is pointed out that the fact that a city club with 2,500 members—especially a Republican club—wants action, speaks for itself. The attitudes of representatives and senators on the subject is indicated by the fact, the members say, that the club has received more than 100 answers to its resolutions, most of them favorable.

Believes Other Clubs Have Acted.

"The answers indicate that practically all the middle westerners in congress favor some sort of farm relief," said W. G. Edens, chairman of the agricultural political action committee of the Hamilton club. "We believe that this indicates that other city organizations besides ours may have taken similar action."

Dispatches from Washington state that action on farm relief, probably on the McNary-Haugen bill, will soon be taken in the senate, and that if the senate acts favorably the house will follow immediately.

To indicate the favor with which midwestern members of congress view farm relief measures, Mr. Edens made public a letter received in reply to the club's resolution from Congressman John C. Ketcham [Rep., Mich.].

Congressman for Relief.

"Doubtless if legislation is enacted at this session it will be either along the lines of the McNary-Haugen bill or the Curtis-Crisp bill," Mr. Ketcham writes. "Both of these measures seek to meet the two ideas of price stabilization and surplus control effectively.

"Believing firmly that something ought to be done immediately to relieve the unbalanced agricultural situation, but having clearly in mind the strong opposition to the McNary-Haugen bill and the conviction that President Coolidge will not approve it, even if passed by congress, I think it is my duty to work for the best compromise measure to meet the two requirements of the farm relief program—namely, to raise farm prices and control surplus production."

Farm Interests in Club.

Asked why a city organization like the Hamilton has concerned itself with farm relief, Mr. Edens replied:

"In the first place, because it is good business, and in the second place, we have many farm members, just as many other city clubs must have.

"Many of our members," he said, "come from farm homes. Many have inherited farms and farm lands. Many others in the last several years have purchased farm lands as investments. These latter have seen the value of their lands shrink and their incomes cut down, so we have many members who need farm relief as badly as the farmers do."

DENY FINANCIAL WORRIES CAUSED BANKER'S SUICIDE

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Rumors that the suicide of William E. Knox, president of the Bowery Savings bank, might have been caused by alleged speculations or other affairs connected with the bank were denied from all quarters today.

The bank's board of directors, called after Mr. Knox's death, issued a statement in which it was said there was "nothing whatever in the condition of the bank or Mr. Knox's relations to the bank that was not in every way satisfactory." It added that the semi-annual audit by the trustees had just been completed, and "everything was found in perfectly sound condition."

Every one connected with the bank, as well as members of Mr. Knox's family, expressed belief his suicide was the result of an impending nervous breakdown. He left no message of any kind.

BLOC SEES EARLY VOTE FOR HAUGEN BILL IN SENATE

But House Delays Debate for Two Days More.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Action on the McNary-Haugen farm surplus bill by the senate in advance of a vote in the house appeared assured today.

Instead of commencing debate in the house on Tuesday, it was decided today to defer calling up the bill until probably Thursday.

The expectation is that the senate will have acted on the farm bill by the latter part of next week. Farm leaders will file a petition to invoke cloture by the middle of the week if it becomes evident that the bill cannot be brought to a vote within the next three or four days.

Farm Bloc Optimistic.

In view of an alliance between the farm bloc and supporters of the McFadden bank bill, under the terms of which each group will help the other to get prompt action, there is every reason to believe that the necessary two-thirds vote can be obtained to apply cloture.

If the senate passes the farm bill it will be substituted for a similar bill on the house calendar. In case the bill meets defeat in the senate, it is assumed that the program in the house may be changed, the leaders in that case probably preferring that the time of the house should not be wasted on a measure which has no chance for enactment into law.

House Plans Long Debate.

Debate in the house is expected to run for a week or more. A special rule for its consideration provides for twelve hours of general debate, followed by the reading of the bill for amendment.

Farm leaders in both houses continued hopeful today that the bill will be passed and will reach President Coolidge before the end of the session. They profess to believe that he will sign it, notwithstanding his opposition to legislation of this character.

His Ancient Horse Stolen; Nabs Thief; $200 Reward

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 4.—(AP)—After Einar Gydesen, a local meat dealer, had asked the Humane society to shoot his decrepit horse the animal was stolen. Now Gydesen will realize $200 from the horse. He caused the arrest of the thief, and the Municipal court today held him entitled to $200 reward under a "horse thief" law in operation here for thirty years.

One Aviator Killed One Hurt in Crash

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 5.—(AP)—A. C. Turner, 23, of Lewisburg, Tenn., was killed, and Vivian Jones, former army aviator, was severely injured when the airplane piloted by Jones crashed from an altitude of 1,500 feet here late today.

JOHNSON WORLD'S GREATEST TENOR M'CORMACK SAYS

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—The popular theory that all artists are jealous of one another, which received a setback Friday when John McCormack, declared in London that Edward Johnson, Metropolitan Opera tenor, "is the best all round operatic tenor in the world and in addition he has a perfect figure," was further undermined today when Mr. Johnson was asked if he concurred with Mr. McCormack.

"Well, we Irishmen must stick together," laughed Mr. Johnson, adding that while born in Canada he was of Irish extraction.

Johnson said McCormack's statement was a surprise to him.

"Why, for years I have looked up to McCormack as a model," Johnson said. "No one else has his enunciation, his diction. There is no one else in the world who can sing lyric music with the finish, the perfection of John McCormack.

"I don't think you can pick any artist and call him the best in the world. While Caruso was alive there was no question as to who was the best. Nature had given him an organ and the ability to use it which placed him above all others in rank. Today one man excels in one point and another in another.

"Even Caruso," he added, "never came up to John McCormack in his chosen field of lyric music."

Ohio Priest, Hurt as Auto Plunges Over Cliff, Dies

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 5.—(AP)—The Rev. Vincent Cleary, 44, Catholic priest of Columbus, O., died at a hospital here this afternoon from injuries suffered Monday night when an automobile in which he was a passenger missed a bridge and plunged 25 feet to a creek bank at High Grove.

Your hands take chances every day
Use this soap—removes germs as well as dirt

MANY times a day, you and every member of your family must touch things which may be germ-laden. Telephones, doorknobs, money, car straps, school books—all these and many more things may transmit germs to hands.

The Life Extension Institute lists 27 germ diseases that hands may spread just from touching things—ranging from colds and grippe to diphtheria.

That's why it's safer for all to use the purifying toilet soap — Lifebuoy. Delightfully refreshing and cleansing, wonderful for skin, a preventive of body odor, this favorite toilet soap of millions also safeguards health. Its antiseptic lather removes germs.

Lifebuoy's clean, hygienic scent—which quickly evaporates after rinsing—tells you it gives greater protection. Yet it costs so little. Get Lifebuoy today.

Autumn Tint Shingle Slabs

Have you seen the AUTUMN TINT ROOF? Natural colored crushed slate in tan, red, grey-green and blue-black drifted together in a blend like a frosted maple leaf. We offer this week, AUTUMN TINT SHINGLE SLAB seconds, at a very low price.

Each slab is thirty-six inches long and eleven and one-third inches wide at the widest point. The slab shows two tabs on the exposed edge. When laid, they form a seven-inch hexagon over the roof, giving the appearance of individual hexagonal shingles. The easiest slab on the market to lay because they are self spacing both ways. Sorted as seconds at our factory because of slight imperfections, scarcely noticeable. Will blend with any color scheme of house painting.

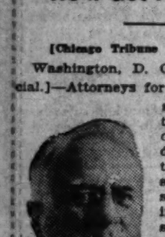
MELLON MAY BE CALLED IN FORD STOCK SALE SUIT

Couzens' Lawyer Warns He'll Get All Facts.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Attorneys for former minority stockholders of the Ford Motor company will go down the line in the treasury in seeking circumstances surrounding the sudden supplementary assessment of $10,000,000 in back taxes against Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.], six days before the statute of limitations expired.



JAMES COUZENS.

Commissioner David H. Blair and Assistant Commissioner Charles R. Nash of the internal revenue department have been subpenaed for appearance Tuesday. Unless they give a picture satisfactory to the taxpayers, of steps leading up to the notice of the assessment, it was said that Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, will be summoned to tell what he knows of the matter.

"Unless we get what we consider a full and complete explanation from Mr. Blair and Mr. Nash, we are prepared to go higher or lower in the treasury until we get all the facts," Attorney Arthur Lacy, Senator Couzens' counsel, said today.

Contest Enters New Phase.

With the appearance of Blair and Nash the $31,000,000 tax contest will enter a new phase. It is anticipated that the spotlight which has been focused on the colossal wealth and remarkable financial career of Henry Ford will shift to the old controversy betwen Senator Couzens and Secretary Mellon, which flared forth during Couzens' investigation of the internal revenue bureau.

When the additional tax assessment was made against the minority stockholders in March, 1925, Senator Couzens charged on the floor of the senate that the action was in retaliation for his activities as chairman of the special senatorial committee which investigated the internal revenue bureau. Senator Couzens had accused the bureau of favoritism in dealing with tax cases involving Mellon corporations.

Secretary Mellon denied that the Couzens investigation of the bureau had anything to do with the matter. He said that his action in reopening the transaction of 1919 was due to the receipt of a memorandum from an unnamed "responsible person," who alleged that the valuation of Ford stock was incorrect and that additional taxes were due from Senator Couzens and the others who sold their holdings to Henry Ford.

Stir Personal Animosity.

Whatever the merit of reports that personal animosity stirred the treasury to bring the action for additional taxes, the testimony of Commissioner Blair and Mr. Nash is expected to shed considerable light on the government moves preliminary to notification years after the tax matter seemingly had been closed.

When the Ford family made overtures to purchase the minority stock in 1919, the holders declined to talk until the government set their tax liability.

Daniel C. Roper, then commissioner of internal revenue, set the value of the stock at $9,489 a share. On this basis the minority sold. Then in March, 1925, the treasury department suddenly notified the tax payers that the Roper valuation had no legal authority and that a new valuation showed the stock worth only $3,547 a share in 1913.

STRIKES GAS ON FARM, WOMAN'S FAITH IN LORD STRENGTHENED

Muskogee, Okla., Feb. 5.—(AP)—A grimy oil derrick rising from the spaces of her country home has strengthened the faith of Miss Alice Robertson, former Oklahoma congresswoman, that "The Lord will provide."

MRS. ALICE ROBERTSON [Green Photo.]

"Miss Alice," as she is affectionately known, said today that the gas well struck yesterday on her country estate, "Sawokla," would enable her to pay taxes on the place when they become due March 15. She had not known whether she would be able to pay the taxes.

The well is a small one as gas wells go. Its daily output is only one million cubic feet.

SAVANT HOLDS SUNSPOTS CAUSE FLU EPIDEMIC

Russian Explains Hope of Curing Disease.

MOSCOW, Russia, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Sun spots are responsible for the present epidemic of influenza, in the opinion of Prof. A. L. Tchijevsky of Moscow university. He is the scientist who, in a paper sent to the recent convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Philadiphia predicted another great war in 1929, due to solar agitation.

He says the combined electrical influence of the sun on the earth have increased bacterial activity to the point where whole countries are affected by disease.

Need Sun's Action.

Most poisonous bacteria are bacteria for humans, the professor explained, provided they are not acted on by the sun. He believes that by isolating the human organism from solar influence and submitting it to electrical treatment a quick and effective cure for influenza will be found. He also ascribes typhoid fever, hydrophobia and bubonic plague to sunspot activity.

"Man," he said "is the slave of the sun and its vast electrical power.

"My theory that the present spread of influenza throughout the world is due to the sunspots is brilliantly supported by the history of epidemics for the last thousand years.

Belgrade Closes Schools.

VIENNA, Austria, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Belgrade dispatches say that in consequence of the rapid spread of influenza in the Jugo-Slavian capital, the government has ordered the closing of the university and all secondary schools.

Former Policeman Is Freed of Federal Liquor Charge

Edward Smale, former police sergeant, who has served a year in Leavenworth penitentiary on a charge of tampering with a federal jury, was freed by Federal Judge Colin Neblett yesterday on a liquor law charge. Smale was charged with the ownership of a saloon at 5859 South Western avenue in which police found liquor. George Van Ritter, bartender, arrested with Smale, was sentenced to 90 days in the county jail.

GREEKS MAP NEW LAW TO GOVERN MT. ATHOS MONKS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Feb. 5.—A law is being submitted to the Greek chamber of deputies to regularize the administration of Mount Athos, ratifying the law of Sept. 10, 1926. Mount Athos heretofore formed an almost autonomous section of Greece.

Regarding spiritual affairs the sacred mountain comes under the jurisdiction of the Ecumenical Patriarchate of Constantinople. Novices or monks retiring to Mount Athos acquire Hellenic nationality without further formalities. The sacred mountain is governed by twenty monasteries between which is divided virtually the whole island of Athos.

The laws for Mount Athos are worked out under a constitutional charter which confines the vote to the twenty monasteries, with the cooperation of the representative of the state—the governor—and they are ratified by the Ecumenical Patriarchate and the Greek chamber. The governor has the rank of prefect and is subject to the jurisdiction of the minister of foreign affairs.

Several Russian, Bulgarian, and Serbian monasteries have been on Mount Athos for centuries. The sacred mountain has been the scene of bloody fights between the monks of diverse nationalities.

Harry Daugherty Goes on Trial Again Tomorrow

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—The second trial of Harry M. Daugherty and Col. Thomas W. Miller, will begin Monday morning before Federal Judge John C. Knox on the indictment charging them of having deprived the government of their proper services when they were attorney general and alien property custodian, respectively. United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner will be in charge of the prosecution. It was reported today that the trial would probably occupy the same length of time as the first which ran for 23 days, ending on Oct. 8 last.

South Africa Plans Fetes for 400 American Tourists

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Feb. 5.—South Africa is making extensive preparations to welcome 400 American tourists due to arrive here on Feb. 18. They will be accorded a mayoral reception in Cape Town, with dances and other entertainments. A fleet of 100 cars will take the visitors to wine farms and other places of interest on the cape and special trains will carry them to Kimberley, Mafeking, Bulawayo, Victoria Falls, Johannesburg, and Durban. Another 400 Americans are expected on the Franconia in March.

WARN STRIKING STUDENTS IN OLD EGYPTIAN SCHOOL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAIRO, Feb. 5.—The sector of the University of El Azhar today warned striking students that their action in trying to resist the government's decision to transfer from El Azhar to the ministry of education the supervision over the various schools and training colleges is alienating public sympathy from El Azhar and is contrary to constitutional procedure.

Meanwhile, El Azhar is seething with agitation. The striking students are holding meetings at which inflammatory speeches are delivered against parliament's attitude toward the religious institutions generally, while outside a police cordon is maintained around the university, preventing the students from going into the town and repeating their recent demonstrations.

El Azhar university, one of the principal seats of Koranic learning, was founded in the year 361 of the Mohammedan era, or 972 of the Christian era. Heretofore, all the principal institutions of learning have been under the supervision of the council of the University of El Azhar.

REPARATIONS TO U. S. FROM BERLIN ARE ARRANGED

Washington, D. C., Feb. 5.—(Special.)—Arrangements for the reparation by the United States of its 2½ per cent share in German reparations under the Dawes plan were announced today by the state department.

The scheme provides a method of converting into dollars the sums which accrue in German marks to the credit of the United States. German firms will arrange through the agency of the Berlin Reichsbank to deposit monthly with the Federal Reserve bank of New York certain sums in dollars arising from their dealings in the United States. These deposits will correspond in each month to the credit accruing to the United States in that month's marks in Germany. The German firms, in turn, will be reimbursed with the marks at the prevailing rate of exchange.

The 2½ per cent share will amount to $5,800,000 during the current reparation year, and after Sept. 1, 1928, is expected to amount to about $16,700,000 annually.

SENT TO INSANE ASYLUM.

Harry Redmond, 55, of 636 South Dearborn street, former owner of a string of race horses and once a wealthy south side restaurant owner, recently arrested for stealing pennies from a newsstand, was committed to the institution for the insane at Kankakee yesterday.

Roast Beef for 65c

at the North American Restaurant

We use only the choicest ribs from the finest steers—a quality of beef you get in very few restaurants or hotels, no matter how high their prices.

Beautifully roasted and browned in our kitchen you get it smoking hot—tender and juicy with just enough fat to give it that flavor which everyone loves.

Yet a big, thick cut of this wonderful roast beef costs you only 65 cents—instead of the 75c to $1.40 you must pay elsewhere for an order of roast beef that seldom matches it either in quality or quanity.

And this is only one striking example of the savings you make by "serving yourself" in this Common Sense restaurant.

Halibut and Peas: The portion is big—usually enough for two people and, there is no charge for portions shared by two 45c

Steak or Whitefish Dinner A fine steak, or a big portion of Jumbo whitefish with potatoes and salad. . . 65c

And for Breakfast:—

17,008 EMPLOYEES TODAY

FROM ACORN TO OAK.

After 25 years of growth now a nation-wide shopping service

Founded in 1902, the J. C. Penney Company has had an eventful career of quarter of a century, constantly increasing the number of its Department Stores, serving new legions of homes year after year and today standing out as the World's Largest Chain Department Store Organization with a shopping service that is nation-wide.

Young, Ambitious Retail Salesmen Are Needed!

The continuous growth and expansion of the J. C. Penney Company Department Stores opens to young, ambitious Retail Salesmen a field of business pursuit and success that is without a peer in any line. "Know your opportunity."

To young men who have chosen Retail Selling as their life's work and are possessed with an unquenchable urge to succeed far beyond the commonplace, this Company extends an invitation to investigate the splendid opportunity.

There are probably several young salesmen in each locality where this newspaper is read who would make a pronounced success in this Organization. Are YOU one of them?

You are paid a good salary as salesman. Your training begins from the day you come with the Company for the greater responsibilities of Co-partner Store Manager.

When qualified, you are promoted to the management of a Store. Then in addition to an increased salary, you begin to share in the profits which you help to create.

Applications will be considered confidential. Write our nearest office today. Or, see our Representative at any of the cities listed in this advertisement on the day named.

Facts About the J. C. Penney Company You Should Know—

This year—with upwards of 800 Stores to be in operation—it is estimated that sales will be in excess of $150,000,000.

The policy of the Company is always to sell at the lowest price possible consistent with current market conditions.
Never to hold so-called "sales"—the same price alike to all always.
Selling for cash only; receiving and giving the public the advantages of cash buying and selling.
Operating on "carry-your-purchases" plan, thus eliminating large expense which enables the giving of Greater Value.
"Whatsoever ye would that others should do unto you, do ye even so unto them." The Golden Rule guides all operations.

PEONAGE GUILT PLACED ON TEXAS SHERIFF BY JURY

Justice of Peace, 3 Others Also Convicted.

Corpus Christi, Tex., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Five men, including Sheriff Raymond Teller of Willacy county, were found guilty of peonage by a jury in federal court here tonight.

The others convicted were Justice of the Peace Floyd Dodd, Frank Brandt and Carl Brandt, former deputy sheriffs, and L. K. Stockwell, a farmer. All five were found guilty on several counts. Four defendants were acquitted.

The law provides a penalty of five years on each count.

Vagrants Forced to Work.

The peonage charges were based chiefly on testimony of several young men that they had been arrested in Raymondville, Tex., on vagrancy charges but that instead of being tried, were taken to cotton fields and forced to work for farmers under an armed guard. Their "fines" were deducted from their pay along with 75 cents a day for meals, they said.

Attorneys for the government alleged that Willacy county had been made "a slave market during the cotton picking season."

Performing a Duty.

The defense argued that the county officers merely believed they were performing a duty in arresting transients who might commit acts of lawlessness. They contended that the county was overrun with a lawless element imported for cotton picking.

W. K. VANDERBILT, IN PARIS, SCOFFS AT DIVORCE TALK

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

PARIS, Feb. 5.—Mum was the word as the incoming liners Majestic and France when the various notables arriving refused to discuss rumors of divorce, marriage and other personal affairs.

William K. Vanderbilt, arriving on the France, denied reports that he intends to sue for divorce.

"I am making an ordinary visit to Europe, the same as I have done many times," he said. "My wife did not accompany me, but that is often the case and means nothing."

"I am not Mr. Vanderbilt's lawyer. We conversed on the ship, but never mentioned a divorce," Dudley Field Malone said.

Count Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraeten, husband of the heiress, Millicent Rogers, looked bored and declined to give the name of his hotel. Bud Fisher, the cartoonist, said he is not worried over his divorce. He is going to the Riviera for a month.

Herman F. Wilke, 55 years old, an attorney, was found dead yesterday in a gas filled room at his home, 529 Hartland court. The police believe that he committed suicide while despondent over ill health.

TWO DIE WHEN BLAST WRECKS TOLEDO CHURCH

Janitress and Husband Buried in Ruins.

Toledo, O., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Natural gas was responsible for an explosion which wrecked the interior of the old First Congregational church here today, killing two persons and seriously injuring a third, and causing $150,000 damages, Coroner Charles J. Henzler and fire officials said tonight.

The dead are: Mrs. Katherine Wilt, 36, caretaker of the church buildings, and Clyde H. Wilt, 40, her husband, who accompanied her to the church before going to work.

Mrs. Mary Fitzgerald, 33, sister-in-law of Mrs. Wilt, who had gone to assist her in preparing the building for the Sunday service, is in a hospital with serious burns.

Reports that explosives planted in the church building caused the blast were scouted by Henzler. He said no apparent mystery surrounded the explosion.

A leak in the gas lines in the building was thought by fire officials to have allowed the gas to accumulate during the night and after the three persons entered the building it was ignited when one of them struck a match.

Draft Report on Bribery Charges Against Gould

POPE HONORS CHICAGOAN FOR CHARITY WORK

Thomas J. Forschner, 4800 Ellis avenue, has been made a Knight of the Order of St. Sylvester by Pope Pius, a dispatch from Rome received yesterday by Cardinal Mundelein announced. The honor was conferred in recognition of Mr. Forschner's interest in the charitable work of the archdiocese of Chicago.

During the Eucharistic congress last summer Mr. Forschner was host to Cardinal Faulhaber, for whom he had had a private chapel built in his home. He is associated with Cardinal Faulhaber in extensive relief work among the people of Europe. Mr. Forschner is a member of St. Ambrose parish.

COMPANIES MAY REFUSE TO MAKE DIVIDEND REPORT

Manufacturers may refuse to furnish the federal trade commission with the amount of their stock dividends, as requested in letters recently sent to Illinois corporations, according to an opinion made public yesterday by Colin C. H. Fyffe, general counsel of the Illinois Manufacturers' association.

The commission requested corporations to fill out a report which asks for the cash and stock dividends for the years from 1913 through 1926, together with the value of outstanding capital stock and surplus for each of these years. The information was sought, the commission explained, in accordance with a senate resolution last December.

"A senate resolution has not the mandatory effect of a statutory enactment," said Mr. Fyffe. "The federal trade commission has not the power to compel the issuance of the information asked. Enforcement of the income tax law is not one of the duties of the commission and, in my opinion, companies do not need to furnish the information requested."

Farther than ever beyond the reach of imitation

$825 SEDAN or COUPE

Every one knows that when announced a year ago, the Pontiac Six was an extraordinary automotive development. It represented the very best and finest that Oakland could create in a low-priced six, utilizing all the resources of General Motors.

The General Motors Research Staff pioneered Pontiac Six basic design. The great General Motors Proving Ground provided an unparalleled opportunity to perfect that design. Another great General Motors division—the Fisher Body Corporation—contributed bodies of unexampled beauty, comfort and strength and General Motors combined purchasing power assured minimum costs on quality materials.

Obviously, the Pontiac Six was then beyond duplication. For it was the product of three great interlocking organizations whose collective skill, facilities, and experience are nowhere else duplicated. Obviously, it is today still farther beyond the reach of imitation—

—because the Pontiac Six now carries this important additional attraction to buyers:

In a period of more than a year, it has served tens of thousands of owners in performance, reliability and economical operation, to a degree of satisfaction far beyond their fondest expectations!

Pontiac Six, $825 to $975. Oakland Six, companion to Pontiac Six, $1025 to $1295. All prices at factory. Bodies by Fisher. Easy to pay on the liberal General Motors Time Payment Plan.

DEMPSEY SERIOUSLY ILL; BLOOD POISON

DENTON BEATS HALL, 50 TO 25, IN CUE TOURNEY

HO, HUM! TILDEN NO. 1 FOR 7TH STRAIGHT YEAR

Richards Barred in National Ranking.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Professional tennis, with Vincent Richards of New York and Miss Mary K. Browne of California as its two leading exponents in the United States, met a rebuff at the hands of the United States Lawn Tennis association today when, at their annual meeting at the Penn Athletic club, the assembled delegates, by a vote of 38,650 to 28,875, upheld the executive committee of the national body and struck from the national ranking the names of the players who joined with Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen in the professional tour staged by C. C. Pyle.

GEORGE M. LOTT.

In the original ranking, which was compiled by the national ranking committee, of which William M. Fischer of New York is chairman, Richards was given the top position in the men's singles.

This original ranking was presented to the executive committee at its last December meeting, and that body in considering it adopted the following recommendation, which was passed today:

"None but amateurs at the time such rankings are officially approved by the annual meeting shall be ranked in any official ranking of the United States Lawn Tennis association or its subsidiary associations."

Tilden Ranked No. 1.

Along with the recommendation, the executive committee presented the ranking as it had revised it, which was approved by the annual meeting today in passing the recommended addition to the national ranking regulations.

Richards' place at number 1 in the singles is taken by William T. Tilden II., former champion, who was placed at number 2 in the original ranking and all the other players in the original list are moved up one place. This is the seventh straight year Tilden has been ranked number 1. Williams loses his number 1 place in the doubles ranking with Richards, and Tilden heads this list also, with Alfred H. Chapin Jr. of Springfield, Mass. Philip Neer and James Davies of California move up into fifth place, originally allotted to Richards and Hunter.

Miss Browne, who was captain of the Wightman cup team, yielded her place at number 3 in the women's singles to Miss Eleanor Goss of New York. Mrs. Molla Mallory of New York, who regained the national championship last year, heads the list, with Miss Elizabeth Ryan, runner up for the title, at number 2.

For the first time since 1915, when he first won the title, William Johnston drops to a lower position than third in the ranking excepting the year 1918, when he was in the service and did not play and therefore was not given a ranking. Manuel Alonso of Fullerton, Pa., Spanish Davis cup player, is ranked second, and Takeichi Harada of the Japanese team, who defeated Johnston at Seabright, is third, with the Californian following in fourth position.

Vinty Loses "Met." Ranking.

Not only does Richards lose his place in the national rankings but his name must also be dropped from the metropolitan list, in which he was ranked first. The adoption of the recommendation today makes this mandatory, in spite of the fact that the executive committee of the New York State Lawn Tennis association, whose name today was changed to the Eastern association by action of the meeting, upheld William Fischer and his metropolitan committee in ranking Richards. Similarly, Howard Kinsey of California, who also turned professional last year, must likewise lose his place in the northern California doubles ranking, in which he was placed third.

The debate on the ranking of Richards was the big feature of the meeting today, but it did not take on the serious a nature as had been anticipated. William Fischer, as chairman of the ranking committee, led the opposition to the recommending, supported by Dr. Philip B. Hawk of New York and also by Tilden, whose stand in favor of the ranking of Richards, and at the top position, was communicated to President Merscreau by letter and announced by the latter to the delegates.

The complete national rankings follow:

MEN'S SINGLES.

1—William T. Tilden II., Philadelphia.
2—Manuel Alonso, Fullerton, Pa.
3—Takeichi Harada, Boston.
4—William Johnston, San Francisco.
5—Howard G. Chandler, San Francisco.
6—Lewis W. White, Austin, Tex.
7—Alfred H. Chapin Jr., Springfield, Mass.
8—Watson Norton, Dallas, Tex.
9—George M. Lott Jr., Chicago.
10—Vincent Richards, New York.

MEN'S DOUBLES.

1—William T. Tilden II. and A. H. Chapin Jr.
2—William Johnston and H. G. Chandler.
3—Lewis N. White and Louis Thalheimer.
4—H. G. Chandler and T. Stow.

Tiff Reels Off Fifty Points in 38 Innings

Yesterday's Scores

Denton [*9] defeated Hall [*4], 50 to 25 [*38].
Campanioni [3] defeated McCourt [7], 50 to 39 [57].
Reiselt [5] defeated Lookabaugh [5], 50 to 40 [52].
Copulos [5] defeated Kenney [4], 50 to 37 [53].
*High run; innings played.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

Tiff Denton picked up two cues to start for the table in the players' room of the world's three cushion billiard tournament in the Auditorium building yesterday, and Allen Hall, his opponent, kiddingly asked, "Are you going after me with two guns?"

"Well, if one doesn't hit the other one should." Denton drawled in his Arkansas twang, and then went out and reeled off the second best game of the tournament, running his string in 38 innings to beat Hall, 50 to 25.

RAIMUNDO CAMPANIONI.

Tiff's jinx, which inspires his opponents to do the impossible, took a vacation, and the tall Kansas Citian shot tall billiards. He set a withering pace for his fellow Missourian from the start. He won the bank and ran two in the first inning and six in the second, the first of three similar counts. By the fifth inning he was leading, 11 to 2, and after a slight letup counted a string of nine in the fourteenth. Hall in the meantime had added four to his two and the score was 22 to 6.

Hall, chipper as usual, was trying hard and he soon began to count with greater regularity, but Denton was a juggernaut. Four in the twenty-fourth, a zero and then in four consecutive innings one, six, two, one.

Allen had counted two strings of three each and several singles to bring the score up to 41 to 23 at the beginning of the thirty-fifth inning, and after Tiff had missed, ran two, his last points. For Denton ran three in the thirty-sixth and his third string of six, to complete the fifty, in the thirty-eight.

Copulos Beats Kenney.

Gus Copulos used up another can of cue chalk last night and for half of a match regained his usual form, but then slumped back into the same rut he's been traveling. He defeated Leonard Kenney, 50 to 37, in 53 innings, but that isn't the real story of the match.

Copulos started like a fire chief on his way to a 4-11 alarm. With forehead wrinkled and jaw muscles rigid he counter three after winning the bank and went in to count a total of 13 by the end of the ninth inning. In the twelve innings from the 19th to 30th he scored 24 points, making his total 41.

In the meantime Kenney also had been shooting excellent billiards, but was far from Copulos' speed. He scored 21 points in the 30 innings.

Then Copulos went into a slump and scored only 6 points in 21 innings, while Kenney crept up. Starting in the forty-third, he counted in seven consecutive innings. Then Copulos scored two, the second a spectacular follow in the fifty-second, and one in the next to end the game.

Raimundo Campanioni, smiling and shrugging as usual, forgot he was playing in his first world's championship tournament in the first match, and as a result he won his first victory. The little Cuban ran out in 57 innings, defeating the gray-haired Charlie McCourt of Cleveland, 50 to 39.

Mundito discarded soft play and drove the balls riotously about the table. On three different shots he counted by accidental kisses and once a kiss spoiled a natural for McCourt.

Reiselt Beats Lookabaugh.

Otto Reiselt won his fourth consecutive game in the first evening match, 50 to 40, from Earl Lookabaugh. It wasn't a bad billiard game and it wasn't a brilliant one, but amazingly, it was played in only 52 innings.

Lookabaugh started with a rush, scoring eight in six innings with the help of a run of five in the fourth and thirteen by the thirteenth. Reiselt caught and passed Earl in the sixteenth with a cluster of five. Thereafter Lookabaugh would score two or three with several zeros between the counts, while Reiselt drew even more blanks but made better runs of three and four, so gradually drew away.

Maroons Elect Burg Captain of Track Team

Members of the University of Chicago track team yesterday elected Anton Burg, Western conference champion in the high jump, captain for this year to take the place of Bert McKinney who resigned recently after he had been advised by his physician not to compete this year.

Burg, former Senn high school star, won the last indoor championship in the Big Ten, tied for the outdoor title and won in his event at the Iowa and Pennsylvania relay carnivals. His best mark is 6 feet 6¼ inches.

MAROON FIVE UPSETS INDIANA IN RALLY, 25-21

Hoerger, Gist Lead Chicago's Attack.

Playing slow but savage basketball, the Maroons jolted Indiana's title hopes last night at Bartlett gym with a 25-21 victory. Chicago played a leisurely first half, stalling even when Indiana swept into an early lead, with which they closed the half ahead, 15 to 11. Then, in the second period, while the Hoosiers were forced to content themselves with free throws, the Maroons shot ahead after five minutes of play, never to be seriously threatened, keeping the ball in their own possession with a stalling game, which they carried through for the final twelve minutes of the game.

CHUCK HOERGER.

Hoosiers Score on Long Shots.

Coach Norgren opened the game with his revised attack, Gist and Farwell, forwards, playing a slow, deliberate game, keeping possession of the ball, while Indiana maintained a lead through long shots by Beckner and Correll. During the period both Beckner and Capt. Krueger of the Hoosiers broke loose from their Maroon guards to dribble under the basket for a shot, but each time they muffed, only to have Chicago recover the ball and whittle away at their lead.

Hoerger furnished the high light of the game in this half by dribbling slowly down the floor, feinting a pass to Farwell, who broke toward the basket to open the Indiana defense. Then Hoerger, putting on a burst of speed, dribbled through under the basket for a counter. Gist, McDonough, and Farwell furnished the other Maroon baskets of the half on short shots.

Stalling Clinches Victory.

The start of the second period found Zimmerman in Farwell's place for the Maroons, and starting with his basket, followed baskets by McDonough and Hoerger, and two free throws by Sackett. The Maroons swept into the lead, which they maintained for the remainder of the game through stalling.

Indiana missed Jack Winston, their back guard, who was graduated last week, for Chicago did most of its scoring through short shots, and missed many more which might have been baskets. Coach Dean took Beckner and Krueger out after the Maroons won the lead, resting them while Chicago stalled, and shot them back into the game too late to be effective.

Chuck Hoerger, guard, with his defense and floor work, and Gist, center, were the stars for the Maroons. Gist got the jump on Sibley and Leonard, giving the Maroons an advantage which they had not known before, and guarded Sibley so closely that the latter failed to get a basket.

IOWA, 39; OHIO, 25

Iowa City, Ia., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Iowa regained prestige as a contender for the conference basketball title here this evening, decisively whipping Ohio State, 39-25, in the prettiest basketball exhibition the Hawkeyes have shown here in two years.

Coach Sam Barry's short pass offense was too fast for the visitors, and the Buckeyes were unable to get with-

Giants to Sell St. Louis Stock for Hornsby

New York, Feb. 5.—[U. P.]—Rogers Hornsby's stock in the St. Louis baseball club, which he values at $125,000, will be taken over and sold on the open market by the New York Giants, it was learned today from a responsible authority.

SAM BREADON.

Sam Breadon, owner of the champion Cardinals, and Charles A. Stoneham, president of the Giants and a person versed in financial affairs, No official answere in a long conference today.

No official announcement was made after the session, but it was understood the Giants had assumed the responsibility for the disposition of Hornsby's stock on terms that would be satisfactory both to the former manager of the champions and to the other stockholders of the club.

Trade Will Stand.

"There is not a chance in the world that the trade which sent Hornsby to the Giants will be called off," Breadon said. "The differences in our opinion on the valuation of Cardinal stock is just a business matter and too much has been made of it."

Breadon and Stoneham said that John A. Heydler, president of the National league, aptly described the situation when he said a few days ago, "there are seventy days in which to adjust those business matters."

Hornsby with 1,067 shares of stock ranks next to Breadon as a stockholder of the St. Louis club. Breadon, it is understood, helped Hornsby to arrange the financial means by which the star ball player was able to take over the stock at the valuation of some $50,000 or a little more.

Wants Huge Profit.

Now that he has to dispose of his holdings Hornsby does not want to sell at the purchase price. He claims the stock is worth twice the price he paid for it, and that he is entitled to take a 100 per cent profit because he was allowed to buy the stock instead of getting the increased salary he felt his services were worth.

Hornsby has accepted an invitation to attend the annual dinner of the New York baseball writers tomorrow night and he was said to be here today, but he could not be located.

PHELAN DENIES REPORT HE WILL LEAVE PURDUE

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—"Rumors that are moving me from Purdue university to other fields and attributing to me remarks that I am displeased or dissatisfied with the Boilermaker athletic situation are absolutely without foundation of fact," Jimmy Phelan, Purdue football coach, said tonight in a statement that squelched the wild tales that have been circulated about his movements in the last week. Phelan stated that he was not considering any overtures to leavue Purdue.

Phelan seemed particularly surprised at stories which carried the implication that he was dissatisfied with his present post, saying "My relations here have been entirely satisfactory."

For the last six weeks, with the exception of the "big sixty" meeting in Chicago last week, Phelan has been out of touch with the Big Ten athletic situation, due to his enforced presence at Columbia, Mo., where his wife is seriously ill.

The SPORTING GOODS of WESTBROOK PEGLER

LONG MAY THEY DREAM.

THE baseball court has disposed of its winter docket of police cases, the two victims or beneficiaries of baseball justice have been invited to shop around for jobs, Ban Johnson has been eradicated, and Judge Landis has achieved that great compromise which all umpires regard as the masterpiece of arbitration—calling men out and safe on one and the same play.

In a few weeks there will be ceremonial leave takings in various towns as the traveling secretaries, the correspondents, and a few handfuls of ball players depart for the south or west, and the baseball industry will begin to prepare to resume business. It is a strange industry, making its own laws, which are interpreted in its own courts, empowered to boycott workmen, claiming to be a public institution, a private business and a sport, and still resenting public interest in certain of its affairs.

Now that the excitement of the winter has abated, one feels slightly foolish for having become so excited over the justice or injustice of the Cobb and Speaker case. Certainly the public curiosity was all that saved Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker from being whispered out of the game, for they had been dropped secretly, and if the baseball reporters hadn't squeezed the story out of Judge Landis, the customers would have thought that two old ball players, full of honors and well upholstered with savings, had decided to call it a day and turn in the keys to their lockers.

But now they are back, and although it was obviously wrong to whisper them out in the first place, the baseball industry prepares to resume business as usual if not more so, with no apology to the customers for thus dishonoring two prominent men. It was right to fire them on the evidence and right to reinstate them on the same evidence, and if you can't understand that you are a town scold, trying to cast aspersions on the great national game, and you are breaking the heart of the dirty faced little kid in the street.

THE PLEASANT PROCESS OF ELIMINATION.

THE elimination of the heavyweights has become one of the major industries in New York this winter and the process seems to be fairly pleasant for all concerned.

Knute Hanson eliminated Monte Munn, and Michael McTigue, who was eliminated himself a few months ago, returned to do as much for Paul Berlenbach.

Presently Maloney and Jack Delaney will indulge in an evening's elimination and Hanson and Paolino Uzcudun will do likewise.

It may have been noticed that Mr. Rickard does not shoo all his heavyweights into the ring and get the elimination done in one night. This is done in the amateur fight business and the survivors, having met two or three others in the elimination bouts, finally get together about 1 o'clock in the morning to settle the championship as the janitors sweep out.

Altogether, these elimination bouts will run up a cash register count almost as great as the tally for a championship fight.

Sometimes one becomes cynical and wonders whether Mr. Rickard is really making all possible haste to find an opponent for Gene Tunney or is merely prolonging the eliminations with the object of making money. This may be an injustice to the great promoter, but this is a sophisticated age and the motives of great men are often scrutinized.

Maloney, a salvage job, rescued from a position as night watchman on the Boston wharves after he had retired from the ring, will be one of the most prosperous young men of his time when he is elimfnated, as he probably will be, considering the known fragility of his chin. His share of three star bouts and one semi-final in the Garden at heavyweight prices will be enough to keep him safe from toil forever.

Purple Swim Team Sinks Purdue, 48-16

Northwestern university swimmers easily defeated Purdue, 48 to 16, in the opening conference meet at Patten gymnasium last night, and the Purple water polo outfit took the afterpiece, 8 to 3.

The protégés of Tom Robinson, who inaugurated his eighteenth year as the Northwestern coach, won every individual event and both of the relays. With the exception of the two sprint events, each victory was by a wide margin.

Colbath Fails to Compete.

Capt. Dithmar of Purdue closely pressed Northwestern's pilot, Paul Manovitz, in both the forty and hundred yard free style events, losing the latter only because of one bad turn, which cost him five yards and the race.

Walter Colbath and Omar Miller were kept on the side lines. Although expected to participate, the two local stars will not complete their one year residence, as required by the conference rules, until midnight tonight. They will represent the Purple against Indiana at Evanston next Saturday.

Collopy Scores First.

The Purple's title holding water polo team took the lead on Paul Collopy's first goal and held it throughout by superior team work and more accurate goal shooting. Collopy was high scorer with three points. Summaries of the meet:

200 YARD BREAST STROKE—Won by Farrell, Northwestern; Bayer, Northwestern, second; Meyer, Purdue, third. Time, 2:59.2.

Chicago Horses Win in Show at Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Chicago entries featured in the first events of the Los Angeles horse show here today. First and second in the three gaited novice saddle horse class went to Chicago stables. Mrs. Christine Weber's entry taking first honors, while Mrs. A. C. Thompson's horse was second. Shetland ponies shown by Mrs. Harry Goelitz of Chicago were second in their class. Third in the same event went to William E. Dee of Chicago. Mrs. Goelitz had the winner of first place in the novice hunting class.

DOCTORS FIGHT TO SAVE LIFE OF FORMER CHAMP

Estelle Watches at Jack's Side.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 5.—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, is in bed with a severe case of blood poisoning. The infection developed in his left hand and arm. The injured members were cut and drained in four operations by Dr. Warren Clark of Hollywood hospital this afternoon and tonight.

JACK DEMPSEY.

Dempsey refused to go to the hospital. He is at his new home on Los Feliz boulevard under care of day and night nurses.

Dr. Clark tonight said the infection seems localized and he does not fear its further spread.

Estelle at Bedside.

Mrs. Dempsey (Estelle Taylor) was at her husband's bedside. Jack's arm is twice its normal size. He has canceled his preparations to go into training at his camp in the mountains, where he was to move on Tuesday.

The physicians said they could not calculate the seriousness of the infection.

"Dempsey is in such physical condition that he may be well on the way to complete recovery in a week," they said. "On the other hand, blood poisoning is serious and we are directing our efforts to rid his system of the poison."

Develops from Scratch.

The infection developed from a scratch under the former champion's middle finger of his left hand which first caused a swelling while the Dempseys were on a trip to San Francisco early this week.

Dempsey drove from San Francisco to Del Monte, Cal., on Wednesday, and Thursday was compelled to go to bed in Del Monte. The pugilist drove the car in which he and his wife came from Del Monte to Los Angeles on Thursday and aggravated the swelling.

Dempsey and his wife were to have celebrated their second wedding anniversary next week, prior to the ex-champion's departure for his ring camp in an effort to undertake a comeback to fight Gene Tunney.

Huddleston, Meyer Start Catalina Swim

San Pedro, Cal., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Taking advantage of favorable weather and favorable tides, two swimmers jumped off at Catalina island isthmus this afternoon in an attempt to swim to the mainland.

Mrs. Myrtle F. Huddleston, 226 pound natator from Long Beach, Cal., was first in the water, about 3 o'clock. Two boats accompanied her. Peter Meyer of Cincinnati started his attempt at 4 o'clock, although the channel was pelted with a drizzle at the time.

After three hours' swimming Mrs. Huddleston was reported over three miles out and going along easily. Meyer's course led a little northward of the Long Beach woman, although both were reported as making for the strip of beach betwene Point Firmin and Point Vicente, which is most accessible in mileage and current.

Fourteen persons, in four boats, accompanied Pete Meyer, who at 5:35 this afternoon was reported one mile and three-quarters out and swimming much faster than Mrs. Huddleston.

YOUNG ASKS GUARDIAN

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 5.—(AP)—George Young, the Catalina channel swimmer, today petitioned the Superior court to appoint the Southwest Trust and Savings bank of Los Angeles as his guardian. The petition states he has more than $30,000 in deposits in the bank.

Filing of the petition followed the failure of Young to meet his mother, Mrs. Jane Young, at an appointed hour here today.

Prior to the filing of the petition Will T. Getz, representing Mrs. Young, had asked the San Francisco police to bar every one from the meeting between mother and son. A police detail was on hand but had nothing to do.

Leahy, Irish Ring Champ, Faces U. S. Deportation

Portland, Ore., Feb. 5.—(AP)—John Leahy, who claims to be lightweight boxing champion of Ireland, is in custody of United States immigration officers here facing deportation on a charge of illegal entry into the United States. Officers say he deserted the British steamer Vulcan City here several months ago.

MISS NORELIUS BREAKS 2 WORLD SWIM RECORDS

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Martha Norelius of the Women's Swimming association of New York tonight won the right to be classed as one of the greatest girl swimmers of all time when she shattered two world's records and captured her third title of the Women's National A. A. U. swimming championships at the Buffalo Athletic club.

Miss Norelius, seeking to retain her crown in the 500 yard free style champion, not only succeeded in the attempt, but lowered her own world mark of 6:35 2-5, and at the 400 yard mark was caught by the timers in 5:14, lowering her former record of 5:18 3-5.

Ethel McGary of the same club finished second to Miss Norelius, Margaret Ravior of the Philadelphia Turners was third and Virginia Whitenack was fourth.

Miss Norelius' victory gave the Women's Swimming association of New York eight titles in as many events.

Corinne Condon, Omaha, Neb., captured the 100 yard backstroke event in 1:18 4-5; Adelaide Lambert, W. S. A., New York, was second; Elaine Delaney, W. S. A., third, and Susan Laird, Carnegie Library team, Homestead, Pa., fourth.

Miss Agnes Geraghty lowered the world record by nine seconds in the 400 yard breast stroke, her time from scratch being 6:29 3-5.

GORMAN BEATS FARRELL IN ICE TITLE TOURNEY

QUEBEC, Que., Feb. 5.—Canada successfully turned aside all Americans tonight on the second and concluding stages of the Canadian indoor speed skating meet when Charles Gorman of St. John, N. B., and Leila Brooks of Toronto, Ont., were officially proclaimed champions in their respective classes.

O'Neil Farrell of Chicago, who was leading the male speedsters last night, made a gallant effort to add to his laurels tonight, but the best he could do was to place second in the three-quarter mile and score twenty points, while Gorman was winning the same event as well as leading the field in the quarter mile and ending third in the two mile for a total of seventy points, which gave him a total of 120 points, as against 80 for Farrell.

MAROON TRACK TEAM DEFEATS PURDUE, 50½-35½

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 5.—[Special.] —Chicago made a successful track invasion of Memorial gymnasium here this evening, Coach Stagg's squad defeating the Boilermakers by a score of 50½ to 35½. Every event was closely contested, but the Maroons' superiority in the middle distance and distance runs gave them a lead early which they retained until its close.

Burke, the Chicago dash man, was the leading point getter for Chicago, with a first in the 40 yard dash and the 440. William and Burg, Chicago, tied with Little, Purdue star, for second scoring honors with a first and second place apiece. Burg took the high jump at 5 feet 2¼ inches, but failed with the bar set at 6 feet 4 inches.

Williams of Chicago forced Little to a new gymnasium record when the Purdue flash captured the mile run, but the former came back strong in the two mile and won handily. Purdue's relay team walked away from the Maroon squad, winning the event by ten yards.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 5.—The Senators added another pair of points to their already great total by taking a close verdict from the Chicago Blackhawks in a stirring National Hockey league tussle here tonight. After tallying in both the first and the second frame the league leaders held the Hawks to a lone goal in the final period to win, 2 to 1.

After going strong in the early part of the battle the visitors weakened long enough near the close of the period to allow Cy Denneny to put the locals a goal up. Hooley Smith tallied the Senators' second goal near the end of the middle stanza.

The Hawks attacked viciously in the final twenty minutes, but after Dick Irvin, gray-thatched Chicago center, had rammed one in the Ottawa defense tightened to hold the slim margin. Lineup:

CARDINALS LOSE, 5 TO 1

Duluth, Minn., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—The Duluth Hornets displayed a big improvement in their form tonight to defeat the Chicago Cardinals, 5 to 1, in the second game of their series.

Duluth scored three goals in the first period, one in the second and another in the third. The Cardinals counted their lone marker in the first period after Taylor picked up a "loafer" inside the Duluth blue line to beat Goalie Turner with a long shot.

Goodman started the scoring for Duluth in the opening period. Seaborn followed a few moments later and then Dunfield beat Moore near the halfway mark of the session. Scott scored his only goal of the season in the second period, taking a pass from Mitchell to beat Moore. Lewis tallied in the last period when he and Dunfield got a clean break with only Moore to outskate. Nearing the goalie, Dunfield passed to Lewis, who picked the far corner to score the final marker. INTERNATIONAL GOLF SHOW TO OPEN MARCH 21

The golf season will be teed off in this district with the International Golf show, March 21 to 26, at the Sherman hotel, where everything known to the golfing world will be on view.

Last year's show at the Furniture Mart was so successful that space is at a premium. All of the big golf accessory manufacturers will be represented with exhibits ranging from bent stolen to trick putters.

The National Association of Greenskeepers, which recently was formed with headquarters at Cleveland will hold its first convention during the show.

Joe Kirkwood, the world's trick shot golf champion, has been engaged to do his stunts which, he says, will include a number of new freak shots that he is perfecting in Florida.

A fashion show and golf follies also will be held in conjunction with the show and a number of the city's most popular debutantes will be models. All of the proceeds from the fashion revue will go to Emerson house, a west side charitable institution, and half of the advance ticket sale also will go to Emerson house.

BOILERMAKER FENCING TEAM DEFEATS PURPLE

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Northwestern university's fencing team fell before Purdue here this afternoon in a big ten dual meet. The Boilermakers won the foils match handily, 7 to 2, and tied the Purple in both the sabers and dueling sword matches, 2 to 2. Phillips was the only Purdue man to drop a bout in the foils, losing to Zettleman and Morf of the invading squad.

TURNESA LEADS FIRST DAY PLAY AT SHREVEPORT

Shreveport, La., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Joe Turnesa of Elmsford, N. Y., turned in a 70—69—139 for 36 holes today to take the lead in the Broadmoor open golf tournament over a field of approximately 75 amateur and professional golfers from all parts of the country. Anthony Manero, a fellow townsman of Turnesa was second with a 70—73—143. John Rodgers of Pittsburgh was third with a 73—71—144.

Scores for the day's play ran rather high and Turnesa and Charles Lorms of Columbus, O., was the only ones to shoot lower than par 70 for 18 holes. Lorms shot a 68 in the morning to set a new course record, but blew up on the afternoon trip and was ten strokes over his previous efforts.

Winnetka Five Wins Eleventh Straight.

New Trier's heavyweight basketball extended its winning streak to eleven last night by defeating Freeport, Illinois state champions last year, 36 to 24, last night at Winnetka. With Sheldon and the Palletti brothers shooting from all parts of the floor, the home five had little trouble in keeping ahead throughout the contest. Sheldon and W. Palletti scored eleven points apiece. Lineup:

Morgantown, W. Va., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—The U. of Illinois wrestling squad tonight defeated the West Virginia university grapplers, 24 to 3. Illinois won every bout except the 125 pound contest. Capt. Shively threw Lough of West Virginia in the heavyweight match.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

FOOTBALL COACHING.

WITH the signing of Glenn Thistlethwaite as head football coach at Wisconsin, A. A. Stagg of Chicago and Fielding Yost of Michigan are the only two athletic directors in the Big Ten who undertake direct tutelage of the gridiron candidates.

Director Little was urged to relinquish the reins at Wisconsin to give more time to the upbuilding of intramural athletics and the school for coaches. Little was somewhat loath to give up his favorite sport, but promises of a nervous breakdown if he did not delegate some of his duties decided the problem.

Few persons on the outside realize the manifold responsibilities of the man in charge of physical education at a large college. There is the exacting business side in these days of large gate receipts, the intra-mural activities, supervision of the coaching, the school for coaches in many colleges, and frequent requests to speak to alumni and high school bodies. No one person can cover that field without competent aids. The question is just what duties he shall entrust to others.

The Wake always has thought that Stagg attempted to do too much personally and that is not said in criticism of his zeal or of his results. For a time he had to go slower because his health demanded. Yost, with a mammoth stadium in the building and with the most comprehensive plans for student athletic activities we have ever examined, would seem to have plenty to do without the gridiron task.

But both Stagg and Yost love football. We doubt whether either could be perfectly happy with this responsibility turned over to any one else. With such an attitude one hardly can quarrel even if one wanted to. It shows not only confidence but also courage, for no other position in college life invites more criticism when the football eleven goes badly.

MIDGET SCORES TECHNICAL K. O. OVER FILIPINO

Referee Stops It After 8 Knockdowns.

Midget Smith, New York bantam weight, scored a technical knockout over Binga Bella, game Filipino, in the eighth round of the feature bout of the boxing show at the C. A. A. last night. After Bella had been floored twice in the eighth session, Referee Phil Collins stopped the bout, although Binga wanted to continue fighting.

In the first round Smith connected with two right crosses and each time the Filipino took the count of nine. It looked as if the fight was over, but the game little brown boy came back and fought like a tiger in the next three rounds. In the fifth Midget again connected with two right crosses and each time Binga took a nine count.

Referee Stops Bout.

Smith landed another right cross on Binga's jaw in the seventh, but before a count was started the bell sounded. Smith lost no time in the eighth. A right cross sent Binga reeling to the canvas for a nine count. He got up in a dazed condition, but went down again as a result of a right hook. As the Filipino staggered to his feet Referee Phil Collins stopped the uneven battle. They scaled 122 pounds.

Joe Jahelka Wins.

In the other bouts Joe Jahelka won the four round decision over Harry Wilson, Earl Mastro stopped Ray Bissey in the second round, Frankie Hall and Joey Patz went six rounds to a draw, and Benny Miller was given the decision over Joey Abrams in the other six round preliminary.

Sheldon Clark, chairman of the C. A. A. athletic committee, and James Barsaloux, a member of the same committee, acted as judges. The show was staged by Promoter Jim Mullen and attracted a capacity crowd.

HILL, N. U. COACH, KEEN STUDENT OF TRACK ATHLETICS

Began Career as Runner in Public Parks.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Like Charley Bachman, track and field coach at the Kansas Agricultural college, who started his athletic career in the public parks and playgrounds, Frank Hill, who has given Northwestern some of its most successful teams in recent years, first came into prominence while competing for the Hamilton park team of Chicago.

FRANK HILL.

Hill is a native of Chicago. He was born and reared on the south side. He attended the McCosh grammar school and then went to Armour academy. Later he attended Armour institute. Frank did not do much in the athletic line at Armour, although he played on the academy football team.

The Purple coach started out to be a boxer under the tutelage of Mike Butler, physical director of the C. A. A. at that time but who is now track and field coach at Oregon Aggies. Hill did well as an amateur and won several bouts while competing for the Cherry Circle. Parental objection ended his boxing career and he started to take an interest in track and field athletics.

Joins C. A. A. Team.

He joined the Hamilton park team and started to train for the middle distance runs under Henry F. Pearson, the director of the park. S. H. Darwent, present physical director of the C. A. A., and Johnny Behr, who holds a similar position at the I. A. C., also were members of Hill's team. Frank improved so rapidly and showed such strong possibilities that Martin Delaney, coach of the C. A. A. track and field team, made him a member of the Cherry Circle squad.

Under the tutelage of Delaney, who generally was considered one of the country's keenest judges of athletes, Hill developed rapidly and won many points for the Cherry Circle club in sectional and National A. A. U. competition. Hill ran all distances from 100 yards to two miles. If Delaney thought Frank had a chance to score in one or more races on the same day Hill never hesitated to run and always gave his best. In fact, the Northwestern coach attributes his success in developing athletes to the schooling he received from Delaney.

At the outbreak of the world war Hill was appointed track and field coach at the Great Lakes Naval Training station. He held this position during the year of 1917 and part of 1918, when he was ordered to other duty. Among some well known stars whom Hill coached at the naval training station were Eddie Fall, the middle distance runner; Andy Ward, sprinter; Harold Erickson, dash man; Scott, sprinter; Knourek, pole vaulter, and Murchison and Hayes, sprinters.

Signs with Purple in 1921.

Hill resigned his commission as an ensign in the navy in the summer of 1921 and took over the position of track and field coach at Northwestern in the fall of 1921. During the time he has coached the Purple the following men have scored points in Western conference championship games and those of the National Collegiate A. A.: Ole Dahl, shot put; Sefton Faust, pole vault; S. L. Crippen, two miles; Hilding Hagen, quarter mile; E. W. Telford, half mile; W. B. Campbell, running high jump; H. K. Kahn, half mile; A. O. Martin, quarter, half, and mile; R. Bouschor, pole vault; G. D. Furrey, mile; A. Bagge, shot put; W. Droegemueller, pole vault; F. N. Rettig, running high jump, and J. S. Garbey, half mile.

In 1924, the Northwestern two mile relay team composed of Calhoun, Kahn, Loveland and Martin won the event in the Drake and Kansas relay games. By substituting Cole for Kahn, the Purple won the western conference one mile relay race in the same year. In 1926, the Northwestern two mile relay team composed of Reynolds, Furrey, Garby and Martin won the event at the Kansas relays.

Like many other successful track and field coaches, Hill continually is making a study of his profession. He never hesitates to ask questions regarding certain types of form essential to success in the field events or those decided on the track. He always is on the alert for new ideas and never fails to give them a thorough test. Although the material which reports for track and field athletics at Northwestern is not of the caliber of that at some other universities and colleges, Hill makes the most of it.

Acts as Athletic Director.

He has some promising material for this year's team and while it may not be one of all around strength, there are some performers of ability who should score points for the Purple in important games.

Frank is a valuable man to Northwestern. Following the death of Athletic Director Dana Evans, the present track and field coach acted as director until the appointment of K. L. Wilson to the post. In the absence of Wilson the track coach generally acts as the director.

THREE LOMBARD TRACK STARS ARE RULED INELIGIBLE

Galesburg, Ill., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Prospects for a winning track and field team at Lombard this spring have been given a jolt by the faculty. Chet Wilmoth, the star 440 and 880 yard runner, failed to put in an appearance for semester examinations and was dropped from college. He recently enrolled at the University of Iowa. Walberg, weight man, was placed on probation for failure to pass examinations and Thomas, a quarter miler, received a condition which makes him ineligible.

AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY

Lessons in Bridge

The advantages of playing a conventional and dependable bridge game were demonstrated in yesterday's radio bridge broadcast from station W-G-N by Mrs. Prescott Warren of Boston and Mrs. Elizabeth Clark Boyden of Hartford, Conn. By their perfect teamwork these two women, both well known as players and instructors, brought defeat to Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead, who played as partners.

MRS. ELIZABETH CLARK BOYDEN.

Mr. Whitehead, the dealer, in the "south" position, held: spades, K, J, 3; hearts, 5, 4, 3; diamonds, A, K, 10; clubs, Q, J, 10, 9.

Mrs. Warren, "west," held: spades, A, Q, 2; hearts, A, J, 7, 6, 2; diamonds, 8, 7, 2; clubs, 7, 4.

Mr. Work, "north," held: spades, 9, 5, 4; hearts, 10, 9; diamonds, Q, 9, 6, 5, 4; clubs, A, K, 6.

Mrs. Boyden, "east," held: spades, 10, 8, 7, 6; hearts, K, Q, 8; diamonds, J, 3; clubs, 8, 5, 3, 2.

Mr. Whitehead opened the bidding with one no-trump. He had more than two quick tricks in his hand, and three suits—spades, diamonds, and clubs—stopped, each of them probably stopped twice. While his heart suit was weak, no-trump was the only sound vehicle with which to show his partner the high card strength of his hand. It is not often that the bidder of an original no-trump is fortunate enough to have protection in all four suits. As a rule, he must depend on his partner for some one suit.

Mrs. Warren passed. While she had a strong five card heart suit and the ace and queen of spades on the side, her hand did not warrant an overcall of a no-trump on her right. Game at hearts was extremely unlikely, and in her position she felt it much better to pass in the hope of preventing declarer from going game. She preferred to pass rather than to run the risk of driving the adversaries into a suit at which they might have had an easy game. She also feared that if she bid her partner might carry her to a point where she could not make her contract.

Work Decides to Pass.

Mr. Work passed. While he was weak in spades and hearts, he had a five card diamond suit, and his ace and king of clubs offered good support to his partner's no-trump. With a hand of this character a pass after partner's no-trump is advisable, trusting partner to be able to take care of the weak suits.

Mrs. Boyden passed.

Mr. Whitehead knew he was in hot water when Mrs. Warren led the 6 of hearts and dummy put down only the 9 and 10. His adversaries had the entire heart suit and the ace and queen of spades. However, if either the ace or queen of spades were in Mrs. Boyden's hand, at his right, and if Mrs. Warren had no more than five hearts, he saw he could make his contract. If the adverse hearts chanced to be divided 4-4, it was possible he could make two odd. But the loss of at least four heart tricks was inevitable. He played the 9 of hearts from dummy.

Mrs. Boyden, using the rule of eleven subtracted 6, the value of the heart led, from 11, thereby discovering that there were five hearts outstanding better than the heart led originally by Mrs. Warren. Two of these were in dummy and the other three in her own hand. Therefore Mrs. Boyden knew that Mr. Whitehead had no heart better than the 6, and as Mrs. Warren must have led from a suit of at least four cards, Mrs. Boyden could see that she and her partner had at least that many heart tricks, with nothing to fear from declarer in that suit. Mrs. Boyden played the queen; Mr. Whitehead the 3.

Continuing her partner's suit, Mrs. Boyden led the king of hearts; Mr. Whitehead played the 4, Mrs. Warren the 2, and dummy the 10.

Mrs. Warren Dodges Lead.

Mrs. Boyden played the 8 of hearts; Mr. Whitehead the 5; Mrs. Warren the 7. Mrs. Warren ducked under her partner's heart because if she won the trick she would be compelled to lead. She realized that Mr. Whitehead, in order to have bid no-trump originally without any high hearts and without the ace and queen of spades or the ace and king of clubs, must have the ace and king of diamonds, the king of spades and the queen of clubs. The chances were, therefore, that Mr. Whitehead could make his contract, seven tricks, in the club and diamond suits alone. Mrs. Warren depended on her partner to recognize the situation and on the next trick lead up to dummy's weakest suit. This would give Mrs. Warren two spade tricks in addition to her heart tricks and enable her to set declarer.

Mr. Whitehead realized that Mrs. Warren had some motive in not winning this trick and at once making her two good hearts. His club suit in the two hands was solid and good for not more than four tricks no matter how it was played, whereas the three spades in dummy might prove valuable. So he discarded the king of clubs from dummy.

Mrs. Boyden deduced that her partner passed the heart trick because she desired Mrs. Boyden to lead some other suit through the declarer. The discard of the king of clubs from dummy showed that declarer must have a solid club suit. The length of dummy's diamonds, and the fact that Mr. Whitehead did not discard a diamond from dummy, prohibited a diamond lead. Yet, to account for her play, Mrs. Warren must have at least two other sure tricks. Since these tricks could not be in either diamonds or clubs, they must be in spades. Mrs. Boyden led the 6 of spades.

Mr. Whitehead feared Mrs. Warren held both the ace and queen of spades. If she did, he could not make his contract. Apparently the only chance for him to make a spade trick was to trust that Mrs. Boyden had the queen. Therefore he finessed his jack. Mrs. Warren played the queen; dummy the 4.

Takes Two Tricks.

Mrs. Warren proceeded to cash her two good hearts. She led the ace; dummy discarded the 5 of spades; Mrs. Boyden the 2 of clubs; declarer the 9 of clubs.

Mrs. Warren led the jack of hearts; dummy discarded the 9 of spades; Mrs. Boyden the 3 of clubs, and Mr. Whitehead the 10 of clubs.

Mrs. Warren then put the opponents down one trick by leading her ace of spades. Dummy discarded the 4 of diamonds; Mrs. Boyden played the 7 of spades, and Mr. Whitehead the 3.

Mrs. Warren was sure that Mr. Whitehead now had the rest of the tricks. However, as it was probable, judging from her discards, and from dummy's holding, that her partner was strongest in spades, Mrs. Warren continued the spades by leading the deuce. Dummy discarded the 5 of diamonds; Mrs. Boyden played the 8 of spades; declarer won with the king.

Mr. Whitehead led the ace of diamonds. Mrs. Warren played the 2; dummy the 6; Mrs. Boyden the 3.

Mr. Whitehead led the king of diamonds; Mrs. Warren played the 7; dummy the 9; Mrs. Boyden the jack.

Mr. Whitehead led the queen of clubs; Mrs. Warren played the 4; dummy the 6; Mrs. Boyden the 5. Mr. Whitehead led the jack of clubs; Mrs. Warren played the 7; dummy the ace; Mrs. Boyden the 8. Dummy's queen of diamonds was good for the last trick, giving declarer six tricks in all—one less than his contract. As each side held two aces, there was no score except 50 in the honor column for Mrs. Warren and Mrs. Boyden, points well merited by their skillful defensive play. Even with the cards against him, Mr. Whitehead would have made his contract against the vast majority of players who, as his opponents, would have run their hearts and taken their ace of spades without seeing the opportunity to make the spade queen good also, or being able to depend on the partner for the one lead that would make the extra trick possible.

The principal thought to carry away from this game is that when one does not win the partner's lead of an established suit, the running of which would save game, it is a clear command to partner to lead up to the weakest suit of dummy.

Canadian Club to Battle Sparta in Soccer Topliner

Sparta and the Canadian club soccer teams will clash today at 27th street and Kostner avenue when the Midwest league resumes its schedule. The Bricklayer-Thistle match scheduled for De Paul field has been canceled owing to wet grounds.

The Brickies and Sparta are tied for first place in the league standing and a win or draw for the Bohemians will put them out in front. Manager Dan Russell of the Canucks has signed several new players and they will be used today.

NEW TRIER WINS IN TRIANGULAR PREP TRACK MEET

Senn Finishes Second; Lake View Third.

New Trier high school yesterday won the junior and senior honors in a triangular track meet with Lake View and Senn at the Northwestern university gymnasium. The Winnetka school scored 40½ points in the senior meet and 30 in the junior competition.

Senn was second in both events, scoring 38½ points in the senior meet and 16 in the junior. Lake View's seniors tallied 15 markers and its juniors made 13.

Alexander of Senn was the star of the meet with two victories and a tie for first place in another event. He won the senior 40 yard low and high hurdles, and was tied in the pole vault. In the junior meet McIntosh of New Trier placed second in the shot put and 40 yard dash, and captured first place in the pole vault for high scoring honors.

HYDE PARK WINNER

Hyde Park high school's strong track teams defeated University High and Austin in a triangular meet yesterday at the University of Chicago. The Stony Island avenue school's junior team tallied 31 points while the seniors were making 49.

Runer-up honors in both classes went to University High, which scored 29 points in the senior events and 22 in the junior meet. Austin scored 12 points in each division.

Although Hyde Park took the majority of first places, the school was not represented by an outstanding contestant. Catton of U. High easily took individual honors with three firsts and a second place in the senior meet.

Gardner, Linn Beaten in U. S. Racquets Meet

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Clarence C. Pell and Stanley G. Mortimer, New York, regained their national amateur racquets doubles championship with a minimum of effort at the Racquet club today, defeating Robert A. Gardner and Howard Linn, Chicago, their conquerors last year, in a four game final, 15—8, 15—9, 3—15, 15—12.

BOB GARDNER.

Pell and Mortimer, save in the third game, forced the playing. Their superior speed and stroking were evident from the first service, and Gardner and Linn could do little but return the ball. Gardner made up to some degree for his inaccuracy of service by splendid kills throughout the match and a determined rally in the last game, but the faults occurred at inopportune times.

In the final game, with Pell and Mortimer leading game ball to 8, Gardner scored four points on his service, but he ruined his own rally by smashing a shot into the telltale. Mortimer won the match point on his next service.

Jock Soutar, Philadelphia, holder of the world's professional racquets championship, concluded the successful defense of his title against William Standing, New York, winning the final half of the challenge match, 4 games to 1. The scores were 15—6, 15—6, 14—15, 15—13, 15—9.

Soutar, who is 42 years old, has reigned without interruption as world champion since 1913.

ICE MELTS, TWO CHICAGO SKATE MEETS HALTED

Two speed ice skating tournaments scheduled to be held today have been postponed because of the mild weather and lack of ice.

The annual derby of the Opal A. A. carded for Douglas Park this afternoon was postponed last night after officials of the club had inspected the ice at the park. The meet will be run off on either Saturday afternoon, Feb. 19, or Sunday, Feb. 27.

The Inner States A. A. derby scheduled this afternoon at Lincoln park has been postponed until next Sunday.

Bob Becker Tells How Hunter Starts Campfire

BY BOB BECKER.

When you take a few dry sticks, toss them any old way on a hatful of leaves swept from the forest floor, you have what might be called a combustible combination, but—have you ever tried to make a fire this way? Most of us have, and the result was just a flareup of flame, which quickly died down to a smudge.

If one wants to be comfortable out of doors, if you want to cook a meal far from a gas stove—how to stack up the fuel wood must be learned first of all. Once learned, you always will start your fire in the correct and the quickest way. Select no sticks that lie flat on the ground, "feather" some of the twigs with a jack knife and remember that fire burns easier when it has something to climb.

When we were on a big game hunt in Alaska, Field, our Indian guide, demonstrated these principles every noon, as boiling a pot of tea and eating lunch meant building a fire. First, the Indian assembled several small piles of thin twigs. Then he would select three or four of his best sticks, get out his pocket knife and the "feathering" would start. He would shave each of them almost through, but always leaving the shavings attached to the sticks. Turning these "feathered" twigs upside down so that the curl of the shavings pointed toward the ground, the Indian built a miniature tripod and then enlarged it by placing other dry sticks on this center. The result was a wigwam, well ventilated, and all Field had to do to this fragile outfit was to touch a match to the shavings. In a moment we had a merry little blaze over which the "pot" could be hung.

[This is an illustration of the correct way to build a campfire. Select three or four dry sticks, "feather" them, and turn them upside down, so the fire will climb.]

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question O. F. Fremzen, 7020 W. 34th street, Berwyn, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

Who do you think will come through Rickard's heavyweight elimination as Gene Tunney's most formidable rival?

Where Asked.

Sheffield and Diversey.

John M. Haines Jr., 5247 N. Kimball avenue, patrolman.—Jack Delaney, in my opinion, will be the man to defeat all comers in the heavyweight eliminating tournament. My reason for this belief is that Delaney combines strength and science in his fighting and is fast.

D. A. Du Brock, 6339 Ridge avenue, dress business.—Jack Delaney should come through the tournament as victor. After he has disposed of the other challengers I would like to see him matched with Jack Dempsey, the winner to meet Tunney for the title.

Maurice O'Connell, 2677 N. Orchard street, operator. — If Mike McTigue continues his present pace and can pick up a few pounds in weight I think he'll be the man eventually to meet Tunney. That McTigue's comeback is no flash in the pan was shown by his knockout victory over Berlenbach.

Adam Roberts, 5834 W. 22d street, milliner. — Mike McTigue, on the strength of his recent record, seems the logical choice. He is a trifle light for heavyweight competition, but with his clever defense and his newly found knockout punch he should be able to dispose of the other entrants and give Tunney a real battle.

W. F. Higgins, 2838 Mildred avenue, detective sergeant.—If Maloney beats Delaney he should be able to defeat the remaining contenders easily. He is a big man, with plenty of speed and a good punch. I believe he will defeat Tunney if the two meet.

CARR, YALE POLE VAULT STAR, SETS WORLD'S RECORD

Soars Over Bar at 13 Feet 7 1-8 Inches.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Sabin Carr of Yale, intercollegiate pole vault champion, shattered the world's indoor pole vault record by more than half a foot when he cleared the bar at 13 feet 7⅛ inches at the sixty-eighth annual indoor Boston A. A. games tonight.

His performance was the second world's mark recorded at the meet. "Monty" Wells of Dartmouth equaled his performance of two weeks ago in sprinting over the 45 yard high hurdles in 5 4-5 seconds in one of his preliminary heats.

E. E. "Laddie" Myers, vaulting under the colors of the Chicago A. C., was second to Carr with an ascension of 13 feet 1⅝ inches, equaling the old mark set by Paul Harrington last Wednesday.

Lermond Wins 3 Mile Run.

Uncorking a terrific sprint in the last quarter mile, Leo Lermond, Boston A. A. distance star, raced to victory over Ove Anderson of Finland in the Gardner B. Williams trophy three mile run. His time was 14 minutes 47 3-5 seconds.

Ray Dodge of the Illinois A. C., won the 1,000 yard run from A. O. Martin of the Chicago A. A., in two minutes 19 1-5 seconds. Philip Edwards of New York university was third. Dodge and Martin hung behind in the picked field of six for the first half of the run and came out together on the last two laps to kill off the opposition. Dodge's margin was six yards.

Helffrich Takes 660 Race.

Alan B. Helffrich of the New York A. C., raced to an easy victory in the A. Paul Keith memorial 660 yard run in the fast time of 1:25 3-5. He took the lead at the gun and was seven yards up on Gail Robinson of the Boston A. A., at the tape. Horatio M. Fitch of the Chicago A. C., was third.

Harold Osborne of the Illinois A. C. went six feet 3 inches to win the high jump. There was a triple tie for second place between Charles Major of St. Bonaventure, Gail Robinson of the Newark A. C., and T. L. Maynard of Dartmouth at six feet two inches. Osborne tried for a record at six feet six and a quarter inches, but thumped his heel on a rough edge of the take off on his second attempt and was forced to stop.

BOWMAN HELPS CLEAR CUBA OF GYPSY RACING

Better Grade of Turf Material Appears.

BY FRENCH LANE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Feb. 5.—Winter racing at Oriental park will reach metropolitan lines within another season, most American turf followers here this winter believe.

JOHN M. BOWMAN.

The days of gypsy racing, the inning of the $10 top and bottom horse from the remote corners of the "Leaky Roof" circuits, are near an end, all because the name of John McEntee Bowman of New York has become linked so strongly with the Cuban turf that he is held responsible for everything that goes on at Oriental park.

It is the second season Bowman has been at the head of Cuban racing and even this winter the good horses came in sufficient numbers to keep many cheap nags of other years away.

Cubans Like "Books."

To the American turf follower the coming of the better grade of racing material naturally will bolster the sport, but another condition will have to be remedied, they believe, before Havana can step ahead of Tia Juana and compete with New Orleans and Miami for the highest grade of North American racing patronage.

That is the syndicate betting "books" controlled by the track, which take enough play away from the parimutuel machines to make the odds against the different horses appear ridiculously short, when compared to the prices quoted at other big tracks.

While talk is heard here of many prominent stables sending divisions to Cuba next year, little is heard of a change in the betting conditions.

"The Cubans like to bet in the books, hence we must have them," one official of the Jockey club declared.

Track Free of Scandal.

"For those who like the mutuel form of wagering they can get plenty of action. If they believe they can beat the prices quoted by the 'books' they are welcome to try it," he continued.

There is plenty of betting even this year at Oriental park, where a crew of noted officials, headed by Charles F. Flynn of New York, James Milton of Maryland, and Martin Nathanson of Chicago and including S. C. Nuckols Jr. and W. H. Shelly of Kentucky, has kept the racing free of scandal and provided evenly fought contests even though the fields in many instances have been made up of the cheaper grade of horses.

Derby Candidate at Havana?

Cuban race fans, and even some of the American officials here, believe they have watched a formidable candidate for the Kentucky Derby develop this winter in Mormask, son of Morvich-Masks and Faces. He is the property of Benjamin Block of New York, who owned the sire Morvich when he galloped away with the Derby in 1922.

Mormask is in the care of Trainer Clarence Buxton, who accounts for the colt's defeats here at the hands of what seem to be ordinary 3 year olds to the fact that he is just learning the tricks of racing.

The son of Morvich is a strapping colt with a high order of speed. He has not been tested under heavy weight or over a distance. Mr. Block is said to have refused an offer of $35,000 for the colt.

The 2 year old developments have been little out of the ordinary and the handicap division short of real stars.

Noah Carries Chinn Colors to Victory in N. O. Handicap

New Orleans, La., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Noah sprinted into his second consecutive victory at the fair grounds this afternoon when he carried the colors of Phil T. Chinn past the winning post in the fourth running of the Comus handicap, a dash of six furlongs for three year olds and upward. Kelsay had the mount on the bay son of Peter Pan and First Flight, which was heavily played in a field of seven sprinters.

Noah carried top weight of 128 pounds and handled the heavy impost in first class fashion. At the end the former H. P. Whitney sprinter had enough left to hold off the meteoric burst of G. Collins' Old Slip to win by a neck. W. M. Daniel's Vespasian carried off the short end of the purse.

MIDDLEWEIGHTS TOP ARMORY MAT CARD TOMORROW

A double windup featuring middleweight championship contenders will top the wrestling show at the Broadway armory tomorrow night. In one half of the main event Jimmy Logas will take on Capt. Walter Evans and in the other Charley "Midget" Fisher will meet John Kilonis. The other bouts will bring together Gus Johnson and Walter Billiter, and Lou Talaber and Ted Sarres.

Paddy Harmon, who will conduct a wrestling show in his Dreamland arena on Feb. 14, has signed Joe Malcewicz and Wayne "Big" Munn for the windup and Mike Romano and Leon Labriola for the semi-windup.

Barnum Succeeds Merkle as Wisconsin Basket Captain

Madison, Wis., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—When the Wisconsin five takes the floor at Madison Feb. 28 against Notre Dame, it will be led by a new captain. Rollie Barnum, the Badgers' only three sport man and for the last three seasons a regular back guard, has succeeded Ralph Merkle, first semester captain, whose period of competition ended last week.

MRS. PIERCY WINS TRAP SHOOTING CROWN FOR 1926

Dayton, O., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Mrs. L. R. Piercy, Trenton, N. J., leads the women trap shooters of America for 1926, having an average of .9365 on 1,025 targets, according to statistics compiled by J. M. Robinson, statistician of the American Trapshooting association.

Miss Belisa Gleaves, Wytheville, Va., is second with .9200 and Mrs. C. B. Pike third with .9133.

Mrs. Pike was high average woman trapshooter in 1925.

Mrs. Gus Knight, 60 years old, of West Riverside, Cal. won fourth place with an average of .9055 for 4,000 registered targets.

Mrs. E. L. King, noted big game hunter, who is now in Africa, was fifth with an average of .9003.

Wheaton Ends Winning Streak of North Central

Naperville, Ill., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—Wheaton college broke North Central's string of victories in the Little Nineteen conference by winning, 34 to 25, tonight. McKinney was high point man for Wheaton with 12 points.

No Gas Tax for Illinois

ENOUGH money has been provided to continue our road building program for the next four or five years. Why should we have a gas tax?

A gas tax is not needed; it would be only another burden placed on the already heavily laden backs of the motoring public.

A gas tax would mean that the vast majority of motorists would pay for roads over which they would never travel.

The Chicago Motor Club is recognized as one of the leading good roads advocates in Illinois. This club supported the $60,000,000 bond issue, the $100,000,000 bond issue and the $15,000,000 bond issue for Cook County.

If this organization believed a gas tax were necessary for the carrying out of Illinois' road program, it would support a gas tax. But a gas tax is not needed, and the Chicago Motor Club is opposed to such a burden being placed on the motoring public. Help organized motorists fight the gas tax. Sign the coupon now!

The feature game on today's Knights of Columbus league basketball schedule will be staged at the Broadway armory, where Marquette and De Soto meet in an important game in the north division. Marquette has not been defeated this season.

In the west division Damen and Feehan will supply the feature combat. Calumet and Loyola-Hyde Park, south division finalists last season, will clash at the 8th regiment armory. At Morton High school in the southwest division Santa Maria and Ketteler should wage an interesting battle. The schedule:

NORTH DIVISION.
[Broadway Armory.]
Ravenswood vs. Columbus.
Brownson vs. Lafayette.
University vs. O'Connell.
De Soto vs. Marquette.

SOUTHWEST DIVISION.
[Morton High school.]
Santa Maria vs. Ketteler.
Cardinal vs. Washington.
St. Francis vs. San Salvador.
Ridge vs. Sherman.

WEST DIVISION.
[132d Regiment armory.]
Barry vs. Setters.
Carroll vs. Americus.
Damen vs. Feehan.
Hennepin vs. Hildebrand.

SOUTH DIVISION.
[Eighth Regiment armory.]
Peres vs. Auburn Park.
Englewood vs. Aquinas.
Bowling vs. La Rabida.
Calumet vs. Loyola Park.

FORESTER LEAGUE

Six games are scheduled for this afternoon in the Catholic Order of Forester basketball league. The south side games at St. Rita gym, 63d street and Oakley boulevard, are: Tom Moore vs. St. Elizabeth, St. Sabina vs. Carmelite, Englewood vs. Queen of Angels. In the north division at St. Alphonsus gym, Southport and Lincoln avenues, the leading Hofbauer team will meet Visitation. St. Cecelia meets De Soto and St. Monica plays Western Reserve.

PUPIL OF GIBBONS BROTHERS TO BOX IN COLISEUM RING

Sullivan Matched with Coast Fighter.

Andrew Myron Sullivan, the St. Paul 142 pounder who will meet Len Malody of Portland, Ore., in one of the preliminaries of the boxing show at the Coliseum on Thursday night, is a product of the amateur ranks.

Myron, who is 21 years of age, started to box two years ago. During his amateur career he engaged in fifty-three contests and lost only two decisions. Since he turned professional he has had twenty-one fights. He won all of them, the majority by decisions.

The St. Paul junior welterweight is a second cousin of Tom and Mike Gibbons. It was under their tutelage that Myron picked up the fine points of the game. He learned to hit without getting set and he also mastered the knack of blocking and hitting at the same time, something rarely seen nowadays.

The Gibbons brothers taught him how to hit straight and how to conserve his energy by eliminating unnecessary movements. They impressed upon him the importance of a left hand and the advisability of mixing his punches. He learned the one, two punch, and the straight left lead followed by a right cross. He also learned how to slip punches.

Although the appearance of Sullivan will be watched with interest, the bout for the world's junior welterweight championship between Mushy Callahan of Los Angeles, the titleholder, and Spug Myers of Idaho is causing plenty of comment.

In the other half of the main event Ray Miller of the west side, a strong contender for the world's featherweight championship since he won the decision over Eddie Shea, will meet Johnny Hill.

CULVER PREPS SINK LINDBLOM SWIMMING TEAM

Culver, Ind., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—The Culver Military academy swimming team won a dual meet with Lindblom High school of Chicago today, 38 to 11. The Cadets took all first places including the two relay races. Summaries:

MOTORDOM

9,417 Miles of Road Paved by U. S. Aid in 1926

Transcontinental Route Is Nearly Ready.

Federal aid road projects completed during the fiscal year 1926 contributed a net addition of 9,417 miles to the mileage of improved roads in the federal aid system, according to the annual report of the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture. Added to the mileage improved with fereral assistance in previous years, the above brings the total length of improved federal aid roads to 55,902 miles.

At the close of the year construction was in progress on 10,962 miles, and projects involving the improvement of 2,469 miles additional had been approved. Including the mileage of projects in these latter stages, all of which are included in the federal aid system, the total mileage improved or in process of improvement with federal aid was 69,334.1 miles. With the exception of a few hundred miles improved prior to the designation of the federal aid highway system in 1921, all of this mileage is included in the system.

The system now has an aggregate length of 182,134 miles. All this mileage has been selcted by the state and federal highway officials as essential links of a system adequate for the accommodation of interstate traffic.

The report states that improvement of several transcontinental routes is approaching completion. There is now a route extending from Washington through St. Louis, Texarkana and El Paso to San Diego which is 97 per cent improved. The route from Atlantic City, N. J., to Astoria, Ore., is seven-eighths improved and from Boston to Seattle through the northern tier of states is 73 per cent improved and 69 per cent surfaced.

Twenty-five states have continuously improved highways entirely across them in at least one direction, and sixteen of these have completed transstate arteries in two directions.

Traffic surveys to show the utilization of various highways have been made in Connecticut, Maine, Pennsylvania, Ohio, California, and Cook county, Illinois, and similar surveys are to be made in New Hampshire and Vermont. As a result valuable information is being collected as to weight and volume of traffic in all parts of the areas concerned, which, with the traffic flow maps, enables highway administrators to prepare scientific budgets and to plan properly the improvement of the highway system.

Coöperative investigations are being carried on with various universities and state highway departments. Several of these aim to develop a suitable type of cheap surface for rural highways. Others aim to determine the tractive resistance of various types of highway surface, to measure the wind resistance of automobiles, and the tire wear of various surfaces and pavements.

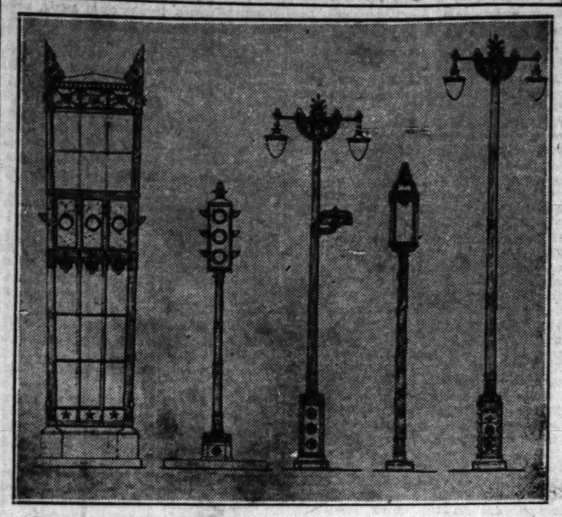
Ecuador Army Regiment Offers to Build Highways

Ecuador is showing considerable interest in highway construction, and the department of public works is contemplating an expenditure of $60,000 to purchase machinery and implements for this purpose, according to advices received by the department of commerce. A regiment of the Ecuadorian army has offered its services in building roads, and "their initiative has been wildly applauded," the report states.

Original Owner's Care Shows in Buying Used Car

In buying a used car it should be borne in mind that the care the original owner gives a machine may be of little value to the next owner. One may be careful to keep the water pump lubricated and the gas line free of sediment, only to overlook such matters as keeping the universal joints properly greased and the spring leaves free of rust. When the new owner gets down to business these matters quickly come to light.

High Lights of Prize Competition



These designs for traffic signal towers and steel lighting standards won for S. Grillo, New York architect, the $1,000 award offered in the contest initiated by the Biscayne Boulevard association of Miami, Fla. The new boulevard will be thirty-three blocks long.

1926 Makes Good Showing on Job of Paving Roads

Marked Trend Is Seen to Wider Highways.

BY WILLIAM M. KINNEY.

[General Manager, Portland Cement Assn.]

The building of paved highways continued at a normal rate during 1926, with the tendency to construct wider thoroughfares more marked than ever.

Road builders are constructing 6,000 miles yearly in the race to keep up with the mounting automobile registration. Last year contracts were awarded for the construction of about 6,153 miles of country pavements. Road builders completed 5,674 miles during the season.

Illinois in finishing up the initial bond issue of $60,000,000 contracted for only 518 miles of paved rural highways in 1926. This mileage is considerably below that of the three previous years, when contracts averaged 1,000 miles. However, under the new bond issue of $100,000,000 rural road building throughout the state will be accelerated this year, with the state highway department planning to place contracts for 875 miles. This paving will cover new routes and many time saving cross connections.

Thrpugh an increase in the street yardage, which for the first time was greater than the rural road yardage, Illinois maintained its place among the leading paved highway building states in 1926. Illinois cities contracted for about 390 miles of pavements averaging 30 feet in width. In addition contracts were let for 150 miles of alley paving.

A noteworthy feature of pavement building in 1926 was the progress made by states of small populations. North Carolina, for instance, was among the top states with awards totaling 490 miles. This will give North Carolina more than 1,500 miles of paved rural roads. Oklahoma contracted for 137 miles, which, when completed, will increase this state's mileage to 700.

Missouri, with a widely scattered rural population, is pulling itself out of the mud with extensive paving plans. When the 1926 road building season opened Missouri had 980 miles of pavement in service. During 1926 contracts were let for an additional 300 miles.

Most of the larger states went ahead with their paving programs at a fairly rapid rate during the year with much new construction and noteworthy building of cross connections. New York led all states with awards for 568 miles and completed 554 miles.

Pennsylvania crowded New York with awards for 558 miles. Michigan finished the year slightly ahead of Illinois with contracts for 526 miles, with North Carolina ranking fifth. Indiana let contracts for 369 miles, and, after Missouri, Ohio was ranked with approximately 300 miles.

In many localities the width of thoroughfares is being given as much attention as the length. In the Buffalo-Niagara Falls area a 290 mile road system will be widened to 40 or 60 feet. Counties in which Chicago, Milwaukee and Detroit are located have definite plans to make all main highways at least 40 feet wide.

Portions of the Boston post road and Albany post road now accommodate four lanes of traffic. Wider Woodward avenue at Detroit, which consists of twin strips of concrete each 44 feet wide, is practically completed. Cahuenga Pass road, Los Angeles, now serves eight lines of cars. The success of such wide roadways has been so pronounced that probably within the next few years astonishing changes will take place in providing automobile travel facilities, both in and near cities.

Cities are working harder to provide suitable streets for the influx of busses and heavy trucks. Since many cities have abandoned the street car an additional burden is thrown on the street system, making it imperative that pavements be designed to carry heavy traffic efficiently and economically. In 1926 American cities awarded contracts for about 2,500 miles of 30 foot paved streets. This is an increase of some 400 miles over the previous year.

The humble alley is also coming into its own. Motor trucking has made it desirable to pave alleys in both residence and business districts. Five hundred miles of alley paving were contracted for last year, a figure slightly above that for 1925.

U. S. AUTO DEATH TOLL CLAIMS LIFE FOR EVERY 923 CARS

Minnesota had one automobile death for every 1,450 cars registered in 1925, according to statistics compiled by the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety. Only five states, Iowa, North Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, and Colorado, had a better record. Iowa had only one death for every 2,190 cars. The average for the nation was one death for 923 cars. Florida had a death for every 597 cars and New York one for every 731 cars.

The large cities showed a higher ratio of deaths than the smaller cities and rural districts. This accounts in part for the higher proportion of accidents in the eastern states. Minnesota's death rate, however, was lower in 1925 than in 1924, there being 14.5 for every 100,000 population in 1924 and 13.8 in 1925.

The Minnesota highway department has made safety the first consideration, both in its construction and maintenance programs, by eliminating grade crossings, sharp turns, and other hazards and marking all dangerous places. It is believed the 1926 figures when compiled will show a further reduction. Continued safety work, which includes further elimination of road hazards, better traffic laws, and more uniform enforcement, and repeated warnings to drivers and pedestrians to be cautious, are expected to bring about a further reduction in fatal accidents.

Yankee Motorists Assured 90-Day Tours in Canada

WHEN the time comes for the annual trek into Canada members of clubs affiliated with the American Automobile association will find themselves in a favored and advantageous position, it was announced yesterday.

The board of directors of the A. A. A., the announcement stated, was given the assurance at its midwinter meeting in New York a few days ago that the Canadian motor clubs had undertaken to act as sponsors for members of the A. A. A. clubs and branches who may desire to remain in Canada for more than the thirty days permitted without registering their cars in the dominion or going through the trouble of securing an official extension.

Dr. P. E. Doolittle, president of the Canadian Automobile association, and W. G. Robertson, secretary-treasurer of the Ontario Motor league, told the A. A. A. board that arrangements had practically been perfected between their clubs and Canadian authorities whereby A. A. A. motorists would be guaranteed a stay of ninety days without going through the usual cumbersome procedure where an extension of a thirty day period is desired.

"Your great association," said Dr. Doolittle, "is doing so much to promote motor touring in North America and to evolve motor vehicle legislation and regulation that we believe much can be gained by a thorough accord and coöperation between you and our Canadian motor clubs.

"Just as you make the path of our members smoother we on our side are anxious to do likewise by your members. When in the future one of them finds that the fishing is too good to leave or that the larder is too full of cheer, he need not hurry back or go through the roundabout way of getting an extension of his visit. All he or she need do is to present the A. A. A. card at one of our motor clubs and the permit is automatically extended. If the fishing, as I said, continues good, the visit can continue until the end of the ninety day limit. Of course, we want as many of your best tourists as possible. Those, however, who are not fortunate enough to have A. A. A. cards must go through the usual channels for extension of their visits. This will involve the time and the trouble of securing the necessary guarantees and testimonials from their home officials."

New York Gives Procession Right of Way in Traffic

A procession in New York has the right of way for five minutes, and it is unlawful for a vehicle or street surface car to drive through it except with the permission or by order of a police officer. If it requires more than five minutes to pass, it will be opened up or broken and traffic allowed to go through.

Traffic Growth Opens Field for Road Engineers

University of Illinois Offers New Course.

BY JOHN S. CRANDELL.

[Professor Highway Engineering, University of Illinois.]

The more cars that people buy and operate the more pavements must be laid to accommodate them. The more pavements that are laid the more good road builders are needed. The more road builders we have the more highway engineers we require to supervise the design and construction of the roads.

And we need highway engineers to think up new safety devices and to install them; we need engineers to route our traffic so that we may arrive quickly, comfortably, and over the shortest distance. Where are these engineers coming from? Men must be trained to take their places in the world as highway engineers.

Long before people built homes they constructed trails and crude roads to communicate with other people. The desire to travel and see things is in every normal human being. So important did the Romans consider the art of road building that the Roman emperors had the title of "Curator Viarum," or, as we should say today, "highway commissioner."

Road building is the oldest of the arts and sciences, yet it really did not come into its own until the motor car arrived. Now every one who owns a car wants good roads. But you cannot build good roads unless you know how. What used to be considered a good road twenty-five years ago, today isn't even a third class road. Traffic that was undreamed of ten years ago now operates daily over our highways. And what the future has in store we cannot even guess. We build a superhighway and almost before it is finished it is out of date.

A glance at the program of a meeting of highway engineers gives us an insight into what now confronts that fraternity. Here we find discussions of traffic laws, finance, traffic information, maps, purchasing of materials, railroad grade crossings, roadside beautification, grading, gravel roads, concrete roads, bituminous roads, maintenance methods, bridges, snow removal, traffic department, marking highways, state police, traffic surveys, highway design, super-highways, pavement widths, guard rails, department organizations, shop methods, equipment, testing of materials, research work, and a dozen and one other items. The field of the highway engineer is tremendous.

When the motor car started activity in highway construction there were few men competent to design and build good roads. The colleges had specialized in railroad engineering, and had given the student a little highway work on the side. As a result, many of the older men now practicing highway engineering have been recruited from the railroads. Little by little the colleges increased their courses in highways until today there are a few universities that have complete courses adequately covering the requirements.

There are so many things that we should know to build better roads. What are we going to do with all the millions of miles of dirt roads? There isn't money enough to pave them, and yet they should be put in such shape that they may be used the year around. Some one is going to find out how to solve this problem.

Who is going to say what is the best pavement for a given situation? Who is going to design the highways of the future? Who is going to build them? Who is going to be the traffic expert who will be asked to keep the traffic moving over them? It is the present day student of highway engineering.

In 1926 the University of Illinois created the chair of highway engineering. The university has always had a good course in the subject, but now with a larger staff, increased laboratory facilities, and an optional course in highway engineering for those who wish to specialize in it, the student will be better prepared to make it his life work.

Up to date laboratories are as necessary to the student of highway engineering as they are to the chemist. Earths, gravel, sand, stone, cement, tar, asphalt, and a number of other materials must be tested, and the student must become familiar with the characteristics of them all.

No hit or miss methods are allowable for in building modern roads the "rule of thumb" is obsolete. Machines for testing the strength of concrete, the ductility of bitumens, the wearing qualities of stone and brick, and many other physical characteristics of road building materials are installed in the laboratories.

The students learn to make all of the tests that are required in the laboratories of the bureau of public roads at Washington, D. C.

Who will build our future highways? The boys of today who are wise enough to study highway engineering.

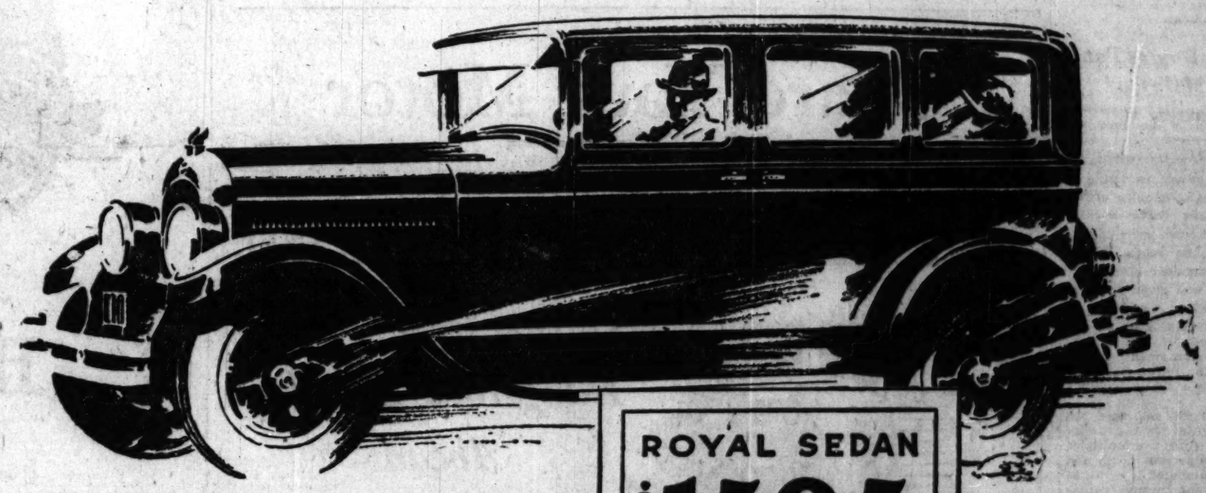
Tomorrow's Trend

Just as the first Chrysler initiated today's vogue



ROYAL SEDAN

$1595

F. O. B. DETROIT

IN the light of past Chrysler achievements it is easy to appreciate the full significance of the finer Chrysler "70".

It is easy to understand how its distinctive style and smartness forecast a fresh vogue in motoring.

Three years ago the first Chrysler with its previously unknown measures of performance, and a host of refinements and improvements new to the industry at its price, created a new school of design, which others promptly emulated.

And now, this finer "70" with its more exquisitely graceful bodies, its greater luxury, its smaller wheels and its more attractive color blendings—and its new low prices—further widens the gap between itself and the conventional and commonplace.

Joined to Chrysler's characteristic speed and pick-up, unvarying dependability and enduring long life, proved by hundreds of thousands of owners, this new eye-compelling beauty and alluring luxury and comfort, leave today's trend as far behind as the original Chrysler "70" advanced beyond the styles of three years ago.

Phaeton $1395; Sport Phaeton $1495; Two-passenger Roadster (with Rumble Seat) $1495; Brougham $1525; Two-passenger Coupe (with Rumble Seat) $1545; Royal Sedan $1595; Two-passenger Convertible Cabriolet (with Rumble Seat) $1745; Crown Sedan $1795. All prices f. o. b. Detroit, subject to current Federal excise tax.

MOTORDOM

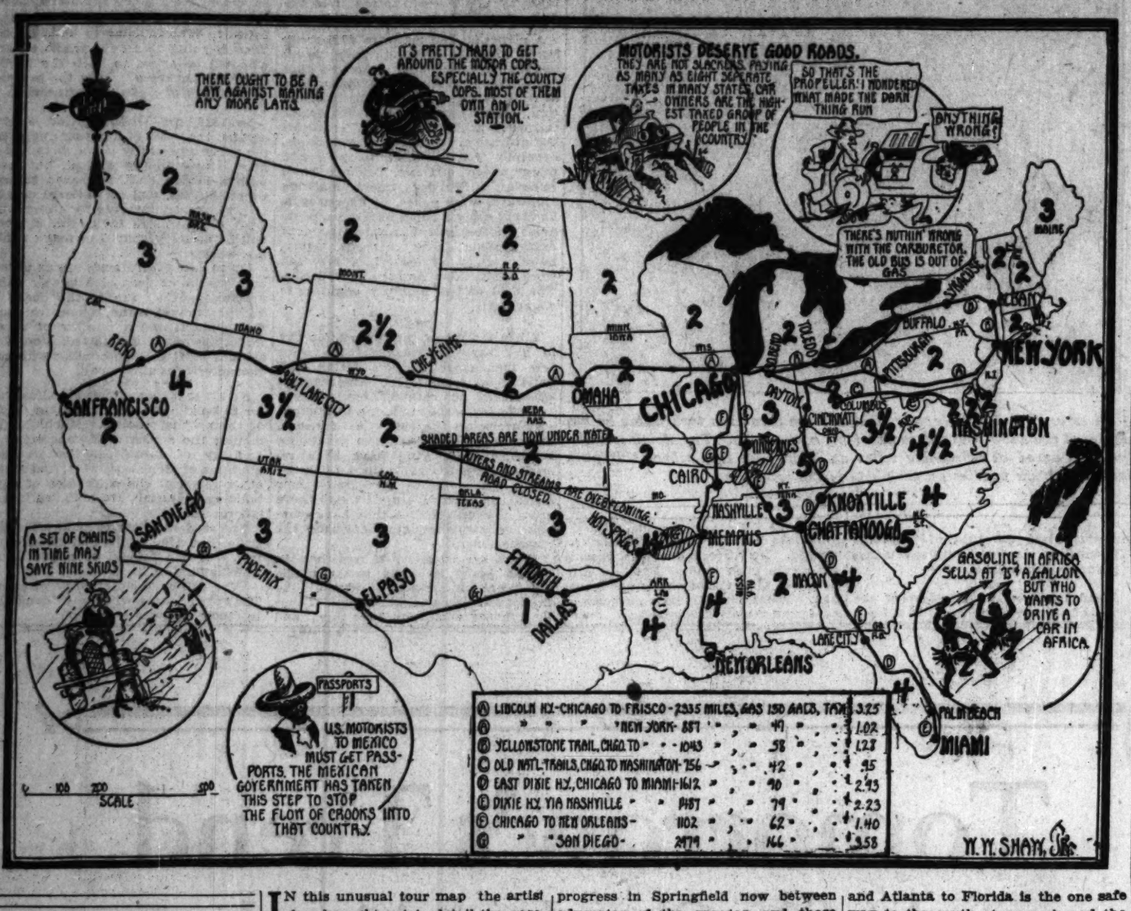
XLV.—NATIONAL TOU RING COSTS



IN this unusual tour map the artist has brought out in detail the gasoline levies placed on motorists by various states on the main transcontinental trails of the country. Only four states in the Union are now free from this extra drain on automobile pocketbooks, and a lively battle is in progress in Springfield now between advocates of the gas tax and those who want to keep Illinois in the diminishing list of states where motor fuel sells at the market price.

On the roads shown, the East Dixie highway leading south and east from Chicago via Lexington, Ky., Knoxville and Atlanta to Florida is the one safe way to the south at present, and the National Old trail is the best route to the Pacific coast. You can estimate the fuel costs on your transcontinental trip accurately from this map, which completed the series of TRIBUNE tours for the fall and winter season.

Uncle Sam Names Complete System of Federal Roads

FINAL location of the United States system of highways consisting of approximately 80,000 miles of the most important roads in the country was made known yesterday by the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture. The system was given final approval by the American Association of State Highway Officials at its annual meeting at Pinehurst, N. C., on Nov. 11 but public announcement of the exact location of the routes has been withheld until maps could be prepared for distribution.

The systems elected embraces ten main transcontinental routes designated by numbers which are multiples of ten while the important north and south routes are numbered 1, 11, 21, 31 etc. These important through routes have many variants and crossovers to the other routes, reaching practically all of the larger cities and serving every section of the country.

The work of selection has been so completely done that it will be practically impossible to designate additional through routes without making them coincident to a considerable extent with already existing routes. This will not be done, as it would defeat the purpose of a uniform system of highway designation, the announcement declares.

The route-numbering system which has been decided upon will be of great assistance to tourists in following through routes. All east and west routes bear even numbers while north and south routes have odd numbers. Frequently three digit numbers are used to indicate branches of through routes. For example Route 40 is a direct road from Atlantic City to San Francisco. A tourist in Washington desiring to go to San Francisco might take Route 240 to its junction with Route 40 at Frederick, Maryland.

There will be no difficulty in following any selected route since a standard sign showing the route number has been adopted and also standard danger, caution and directional signs. These standard signs will add greatly to the safety and convenience of travel as there will be no change in their character in passing from one state to another. Twenty-two states already report their United States highways completely marked, fourteen report the work partially complete and six which have not yet started anticipate that it will be completed next season.

Work on the designation of a system of United States highways began in February, 1925, when on the recommendation of the American Association of State Highway Officials, the secretary of agriculture appointed the joint board on interstate highways consisting of state and federal highway officials. Suggested systems, submitted by all of the states were harmonized by the board and a report was made to the secretary of agriculture. This report was approved and transmitted to the Association of State Highway Officials and the application of the plan was left to that body. With a few minor changes by them the present map has been adopted as final.

The system in its final form has the approval of each of the state highway departments and work on the unimproved sections is to be pushed rapidly.

GARAGES NEEDED.

Because of the huge automobile production which continues in this country, it is estimated that 200,000 home garages will be built this year. This estimate does not include cooperative or public garages.

Big Auto Shows Fail to Stampede Car Manufacturers

Giant Industry Expects a Normal Business in 1927.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—The three major automobile shows—those of New York, Detroit, and Chicago—have come and gone. Manufacturers have shown their 1927 models, better mechanically and lower in price than ever before, and are now awaiting the expected "buying epidemic" by the public.

But in spite of the public enthusiasm shown at the automobile shows, manufacturers in Detroit and other automobile producing cities are, individually and collectively, moving along with every caution. They are watching their step as never before and have no intention of starting production to any extent in excess of the demand. This means that every car that is now being turned out from every great automobile plant, not only in Michigan, but in other states as well, has been ordered by a dealer, who in turn, has a signed contract for the car. In this way both manufacturer and dealer is playing safe.

Reports from concerns who furnish automobile parts and accessories indicate that while the usual spring boom may yet develop, thus far demands from automobile producers are not great, and do not in any way parallel the demands made for the corresponding periods of the last three years. One month has gone with but little resembling the anticipated more than normal business. If a big, healthy spring trade is to be had, production must soon be gotten under way, but just at present manufacturers refuse to make definite plans, specifications, or schedules of any kind.

Present indications are that the first quarter of the year will be well below the corresponding period of 1926, from a production and sales viewpoint. Should this be true, it can be fairly assumed that a pickup will come along about mid-summer. Production experienced a sharp cut last November and December, and unless the country as a whole is to lose some of its prosperity, a few months of low production in the motor industry will probably pave the way for a resumption of heavy buying.

But there are exceptions, although few in number, to the general condition, and in these cases the manufacturers announce a stepping up of production in excess of expectation which keeps them working overtime in an effort to supply the demand. Unofficial reports, along with existing conditions around the Ford plants in Highland Park and River Rouge, are that those industries are not stepping up production to any noticeable extent. Employés are getting nothing better than four days' work with no overtime of course. This condition leads to the belief in certain circles that Mr. Ford has a program that, when announced, will create a real sensation in the automotive industry. Three years ago Ford said he would never become a builder of airplanes, but he did when a plane that was practical was developed and could be produced on a commercial basis, and was a commercial success.

Employment in the various automobile plants and accessories shops of Detroit continues to increase gradually. This is indicated by reports of the Employers' association. The increase last week was 2,451, making the present total 214,733. This compares with a total of 261,602 for the corresponding week of 1926, a decrease of 46,869.

With a serious price war looming in each automobile class, and many companies introducing low priced cars, in an effort to stimulate buying, belief is expressed that 1927 will be the most highly competitive period in the industry's history. In 1926 several manufacturers cheapened their lines, and made drastic price changes. If this practice continues, it is argued, the industry will be endangered and put many of the concerns in a battle for their lives.

It is conceded that the trend is decidedly toward compact economical automobiles, such as the small Jordan, Erskine, Marmon, of the European types.

There is more or less general conviction among the leading motor car manufacturers that, while 1927 will be a prosperous period for a majority of automobile producers, that total production will fall below that of 1926. This conviction is reflected in present operations throughout the industry. While the record breaking attendance at the big shows are taken as a favorable sign of public interest, the majority of the manufacturers are awaiting actual sales before stepping up production to capacity. The general attitude is one of cautious watching.

Senate Kills Bill for U. S. Refund of Motor Taxes

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—By a practically unanimous vote today the house refused to accept a senate amendment to the deficiency appropriation bill which would allow automobile dealers throughout the country to pocket approximately $29,000,000 in taxes erroneously collected from the purchasers of motor accessories.

The house provision authorizing an appropriation of $175,000,000 to pay for refunds of all kinds authorized by the treasury department carried with it a requirement that automobile and accessory dealers who claimed refunds should file bonds in all cases to guarantee that the refunds would be made to the actual purchaser who paid the tax or that the money would be returned to the treasury.

The bond requirement was stricken from the bill by the senate and an attempt of Representative McLeod [Rep., Mich.] to have the house concur was downed by a vote of 187 to 1—McLeod being the only affirmative vote cast.

Guard Your Motor with PINES Automatic WINTERFRONT

During these Three Dangerous Months Ahead

FEBRUARY : MARCH : APRIL

THERE are three dangerous months ahead for your motor — months that will bring you needless repair bills unless you heed the warning of automotive experts.

The "choke" habit causes greatest damage

Guard against the ravages of cold! 50 to 75% of all premature motor wear comes in the fall, winter and spring months. Damage begins when temperatures drop below 60 degrees. A cold motor — authorities agree — is the biggest cause of excessive crankcase dilution, fouled spark plugs, condensation, extreme carbonization, corrosion, rapid cylinder wear and high gasoline consumption.

The "choke"—a cold-weather menace

Don't drive with the "choke" out! The damage done to motors in cold weather, authorities have proved, is due largely to the "choke" habit. Flooding your motor with raw gasoline is a costly "warming-up" process. Glass-like surfaces are washed clean of the oil film of protection. Vital motor parts are laid bare to grinding friction. Costly repair bills are bound to follow.

Pines Automatic Winterfront eliminates this danger

With your car Winterfront equipped—the "warming-up" period is cut to seconds. You form the habit of using the "choke" as it should be used—for starting only. Your motor is kept always at the correct temperature for highest operating efficiency. You experience a new degree of gasoline economy—increased warmth inside your car — summer-time smoothness and flexibility in your motor.

3 dangerous months ahead
Doubly dangerous for new motors

If you buy a new car during these three dangerous months — insist on getting automatic Winterfront protection with it. Don't make the mistake of subjecting a new, stiff motor to the ravages of cold. And be sure you get automatic Winterfront protection. Pines Winterfront is the only automatic radiator shutter on the market. It's the only shutter you can put on and forget.

Drive it today — we'll give your car this vital protection in ten minutes.

How to read Percentages

Were Dodge Brothers to sell 100 motor cars one year and 200 motor cars the next, they could truthfully announce that their sales had increased 100% in a single year. Yet they would only have sold 300 motor cars in all.

In other words, PERCENTAGE of annual gain is not conclusive. The NUMBER of cars sold is the true test.

That Dodge Brothers sales in 1926 showed an increase of 27.6% over 1925 is not the MAJOR fact to consider — striking as it is.

But that Dodge Brothers sold 259,967 cars in 1925, and then in 1926 sold 331,764 — a gain of 71,797 sales in twelve months — tells a story of growth that stands out like a tower on the skyline of the industry.

Three hundred and thirty-one thousand buyers LAST year! Many more vital improvements added THIS year! No increase in price! Three powerful arguments for earnestly investigating this smart and sturdy product before deciding what to buy!

WHEAT ERRATIC; MAY DECLINES; SEPTEMBER RISES

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Delayed deliveries of wheat continue to the upgrade with a new high on the crop for the September, which sold at $1.32½, but the May, after showing strength early, reacted and closed about the bottom with a net loss of ¼c. New crop months gained ⅝@⅞c. May finished at $1.42¾@1.42½; July, $1.35¼@1.35⅝, and September, $1.32½.

Local professionals were active on the buying side of corn, and caused a bulge of around 1c over Friday's finish with the close at net gains of ½@⅝c with May, 81⅜@81½c; July, 85½@85¾c, and September, 87¼@87½c. Oats gained ⅛c with May, 47½c, and July, 47⅝@47¾c, while rye was ⅛@⅜c lower with May, $1.48½; July, $1.04¾ and September, 99½c.

Wheat Higher for Week.

Outside interest in the grain markets showed a slight increase the last week, and with sentiment more bullish higher prices were made with wheat ½@3½c higher at the last as compared with the previous week. September leading. Corn gained ⅝@⅞c for the week, while oats were unchanged to ⅝c lower, and rye ⅝ higher to ⅛c lower. Lard was off 10@15c; ribs, 35@45½c, and bellies, 15c for the week.

Eastern Trade Buys Wheat.

Houses with eastern connections were aggressive on the buying side of the deferred deliveries of wheat, and found offerings relatively light at times, with the finish well toward the top. Selling against offers was a factor in checking the bulge in all months. May was for sale around $1.43 for May on resting orders, and reacted quickly, despite reports of an advance of 1c in the Gulf spot basis. Liverpool was off ½@¾d due to the clearance of 480,000 bu wheat from northern Russia, and expectations of world's shipments of around 21,000,000 bu, compared with 13,544,000 bu the previous week.

Mild weather is expected to continue over the wheat belt the greater part of the week, and there were fears of damage to the new crop from freezing and thawing. Less was heard regarding prospective farm relief legislation, and attention was called to the fact that American prices were now well above a world's parity based on the present level at Chicago compared with May in Liverpool. Winnipeg was ⅝c lower to ¼c higher with the pool reported to have bought wheat at Fort William for all rail shipment to St. Johns. Buenos Ayres closed ½@1c lower with March, $1.37¼, and May, $1.29.

Local Bulls Buy Corn.

Buying of corn futures by local professionals was largely responsible for the sharp upturn in prices, and sellers of offers were forced to protect themselves as the way up. Prospects that the corn borer quarantine would be extended to cover Illinois had considerable influence, although there existing quarantines do not prevent the movement of shelled corn from infected territory. Weather conditions were decidedly unfavorable for the harvest, and country roads are in bad condition. Shipping demand continues slow.

May oats sold at the same price as July early, due to scattered buying, which found offerings light, but reacted later and closed ⅛@¼c under the deferred future. Commission houses sold on the upturns.

Closing of spreads between wheat and rye, the latter being sold more than offset a good class of buying, and prices averaged lower. There was a moderate export demand at the seaboard, but sales were not reported.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

There were a few scattered loads of wheat and rye sold for export at the seaboard, but bids generally were below a working basis. No. 2 hard at the gulf was 8¾c over May, with some continental bids received late that figured about 8¾c over.

Chicago handlers sold 18,000 bu wheat, including 5,000 bu chicken feed, 29,000 bu corn, 71,000 bu oats, and 6,000 bu barley to the domestic trade, and it was said that 50,000 bu No. 3 white oats had been ordered loaded from store for shipment east.

Spot wheat basis here was little changed, although an easier undertone was in evidence in low grades. No. 2 red was 4½@6c under, and No. 3 red 2@10c under May, with No. 2 hard May to 2c over, and No. 3 hard 3@10c under the future. Basis at Kansas City, St. Louis, and Omaha was little changed.

Offerings of cash corn was fair, with the spot basis unchanged to ½c lower. No. 3 grades were 8@10c under; No. 4 grades, 11@13c under; No. 5 grades, 13½@16c under, and No. 6 grades, 16½@18½c under the future. Outside markets were ½c higher to ½c lower.

Cash oats demand was only fair, with the basis steady to ½c lower. No. 2 white brought May price to 1½c over, and No. 3 white, ½@5½c under.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 23 cars; corn, 307 cars; oats, 57 cars; rye, 4 cars; barley, 15 cars.

DRY GOODS MARKET.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Cotton goods closed steady for the week. Finished cottons continued in wide demand, although small lots were wanted. Yarns were steady. Burlaps showed a little change for the day. Raw silk was virtually unchanged in the local markets. Finished silks are improving slowly, retailers and cutters showing more interest. Wool goods were steady, but quiet. Dress flannels for spring were in active demand.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

An uneasy feeling exists in the grain trade, as few understand what effect the passage of the McNary-Haugen bill actually means. Should it become a law, the chances are that it would be taken into the courts and possibly tied up for an extended time. Traders generally are disposed to wait for future developments before taking a decided stand on either side of the market. At the same time there is a disposition on the part of many traders to buy on all sharp breaks and take profits on bulges.

It is said the short interest on all grains has been materially reduced in the last few days by a number of the large shorts covering and there has been more disposition to take the buying side on breaks, which has been specially noticeable in July wheat and corn, and they have advanced to new high levels on the present upturn, with September establishing the season's high for the time being.

Expectations are that the visible supply of wheat will show a moderate reduction and corn a good increase for the week. World's shipments of wheat for the week were the largest in many weeks, 20,700,000 bu, compared with 12,755,000 bu last year. The big increase is dne to the free movement from the southern hemisphere.

Premiums on No. 2 hard winter wheat at the gulf have advanced 1c from the low point of the week, and at the close 8¾c over Chicago May was reported bid, with 9c over asked. The upturn in the face of the comparatively liberal movement at this season in the southwest attracted some attention. Messages from Omaha indicated that some wheat might be shipped from there to Chicago in order to provide storage room for corn. No. 2 hard at Omaha is quoted at 7@8c under Chicago May, or close to a shipping difference.

A little improvement is reported in the flour demand in the southwest, with fair shipping instructions on old orders. Output of Kansas City mills the last week was 87 per cent of capacity, compared with 82 per cent the previous week, and 65 per cent last year.

Government weekly weather forecast indicated a period of comparatively mild weather, with some precipitation over the entire grain belt. It is felt that this will result in a material curtailment in the interior movement of all grains, due to poor roads. In Illinois corn

The week end session in the hog market witnessed the most erratic trading in several weeks, with the breach between light and heavy widest in about three months, the latter selling to a disadvantage at the close yesterday.

Top and average were 55c apart, at $12.75@12.20, respectively, against 25c the previous Saturday and 5c two weeks ago. Common rough "packers" and top light light are nearly $2.00 apart. Brink call for 120@160 lb averages hoisted these at $12.75, highest top price since early November. Sales were steady to 15c higher, average moving up 5c at $12.20, highest since Friday of the preceding week.

Hog Receipts Smaller.

Decreases in hog receipts became more noticeable as the week progressed, arrivals after midweek falling off abruptly, with the week's total smallest since last November, at 155,100, barring two holiday periods. Lighter weights comprised a bigger percentage and the week's estimate average weight fell 4 lbs, at 221 lbs, against 239 lbs a year ago and 222 lbs two years ago. The week's general average price lowered 15c at $12.65, the same as two weeks ago; but 75c below a year ago and $1.45 above two years ago.

Appearance of $13.00 beef steers last week added tone to the trade and strengthened traders' hopes of additional upturns on better grades in the near future, providing supplies are held down to present figures. Prime 1,491 lb beeves for New York kosher trade reached the peak, about 200 averaging 1,249@1,614 lbs, selling at $12.50 and above. Yearlings were scarce and lacking in quality, only one lot selling above $12.00. Best averaged 1,609 lbs at $12.35. The week's cattle receipts at 53,000 were smallest since the first week in last August, barring two holiday periods. Weighty beef steers closed 50c above the week's low point, with yearlings 15@25c higher.

Sheep Sell High.

An unusually narrow "spread" between matured sheep and lambs was an outstanding feature last week, handy aged ewes selling within $4.65 of extreme top lambs, against a $6.50 "spread" a month ago and nearly $3.00 early in fall. Aged sheep finished at the highest level in nine months, while lambs are less than $1.00 above the lowest point since 1922. Top lambs brought $13.40; feeders, $12.25; aged wethers, $9.50, and old ewes, $8.75. Fresh shorn lambs at $12.00.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 22,000 cattle, 53,000 hogs, and 22,000 sheep, against 23,054 cattle, 53,651 hogs, and 23,201 sheep, a week ago, and 18,144 cattle, 53,374 hogs, and 15,971 sheep, the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 57,000 cattle, 175,000 hogs, and 83,000 sheep, against 55,332 cattle, 174,361 hogs, and 89,155 sheep a year ago.

Credit Manager

growing financial house has a pective vacancy in its staff offers an unusual opportu for a credit man of real ty. He should be 28 to 35 old with at least three years' tical credit work where siz lines are involved. Prefer he should have had banking ell as mercantile experience. must be able and willing to lle personally a large volume tail beside directing a de ment. The starting salary will oderate, but satisfactory per ance will qualify within one for junior official position. e man selected will have a analytical mind combined imagination enough safely to eer new fields, a pleasing per lity, good education and an tite for hard work. A knowl of the particular business is important if you know credits are teachable.

our letter presenting your ifications will determine in first instance your claim to ture and to distribution by pools and large financial institutions. Trading was unusually heavy for a half holiday ses sion, total sales running close to 1,270,000 shares.

Merger Rails Are Irregular.

Wheeling and Lake Erie common, which has been the feature of recent markets, quieted down considerably, with the closing price of 84 representing a net loss of 4 points. The unusually high premium of $3.50 a share was charged for borrowing the stock over the week-end. Directors of the road meet Monday to consider plans for the issuance of additional common into which the preferred and prior lien stocks may be converted.

Western Maryland common changed hands in enormous volume despite the denial of reports that the Baltimore and Ohio railroad was buying stock in the open market. It moved up over 5 points to a new high record at 38¾, closing within a point of the top.

Other Rail Issues Advance.

Gulf, Mobile and Northern rose 5 points higher at 52¾ after touching a new record top at 54. Wabash common and preferred, New Haven, Erie first preferred, Pittsburgh and West Virginia, Missouri Pacific, and Bangor and Aroostook also reached new high ground.

Bullish demonstrations also were resumed in the oil group, but most of the early gains were substantially reduced or wiped out. Houston was again the leader, moving up 4½ points to 91½ and then easing to 90. It was followed into new high ground by Barnsdall "A" and "B" and Phillips Petroleum. A. M. Byers, R. H. Macy, General Railway Signal, Jewel Tea, company, and Remington Typewriter also exceeded their previous peak prices.

Standard Industrials Decline.

Selling pressure was apparent throughout most of the session in such recent leaders as Baldwin Locomotive, General Motors, United States Steel common, American Smelting, Pan-American "B," and International Harvester, all of which closed 1 to 3½ points lower.

The demand for listed bonds today was rather quiet. Profit taking spread through the market, although firmness was exhibited by railway issues of the secondary class. An advance of a point to 81, a new high, was recorded by Erie convertible 4s, series "A," while other Erie bonds subsided slightly. The convertible 4s, "D," touched a new peak soon after the opening, but lost the gain.

Selling pressure continued against foreign obligations, although recessions were of a fractional nature. French, Belgian, German, and Italian securities dropped off, although some firmness was shown by some of the European industrial liens. United States government issues were firm.

New York Bank Loans Drop.

Loans, discounts, and investments of the New York clearing house banks decreased $57,118,000 this week, according to the weekly statement issued today. Excess reserve increased $19,337,220, wiping out a deficit of $15,947,250 and creating a surplus of $3,389,970. Net demand deposits were down $25,429,000 and time deposits dropped $2,173,000. Aggregate reserve was $594,645,000.

Except for brisk recoveries in the Spanish and Norwegian rates, there were few changes of interest in the foreign exchange market. Demand sterling held fairly steady around $4.84½ and French francs around 3.93 cents.

Buy Your Motor Car This Way—

Ask us for a car to drive . . . Make your own tests and comparisons . . . Let the car sell itself If it does not meet your requirements better than any other car, you will not be asked to buy.

Two Vital Questions:

1—What is the greatest change in the automobile industry today?

2—What car best meets this change?

Verify These Answers:

The change that is having the greatest influence in affecting the trend of the entire automobile industry today, is not IN the industry—IT IS IN THE PUBLIC.

The tables are turned.

For years engineers and manufacturers TOLD the public "what was what". If one engineer had a pet theory he said IT was the best. Another manufacturer said HIS was the best. The public has tried them all, and learned one thing—it is not what the manufacturer says but WHAT THE CAR SAYS in service that counts. This, that and the other "feature" is meaningless unless the RESULTS are there. People no longer buy "motors", or "parts" or "specifications". They buy what THE WHOLE CAR DOES—how WELL it does it—and how LONG it does it.

Today the PUBLIC says "WHATS WHAT."

Buyers are doing THEIR OWN THINKING. The average car owner has paid several thousands of dollars for his experience. He now knows what he wants a CAR TO DO and HOW he wants it to do it. He can JUDGE FOR HIMSELF whether the car does it. He needs no salesman to tell him what he wants.

And, knowing what he wants, he is on the search for the car THAT BEST MEETS HIS REQUIREMENTS.

Auburn was at least TWO YEARS AHEAD of the entire automobile industry in sensing this inevitable change. Auburn was FIRST to build a motor car so well that IT WOULD SELL ITSELF. This radical change demanded cars be BETTER BUILT than ever before.

Auburn's policy instantly won public confidence. People investigated the cars. Auburn's sales increase is phenomenal. If some one of the new Auburn cars does not meet your requirements IN EVERY WAY better than any other car, you will not be asked to buy.

PART 3 | REAL ESTATE HOME BUILDERS

FEBRUARY 6, 1927.

GOOD OLD DAYS GIVE OUR TIMES AN IDEAL HOUSE

Of Colonial Design; Has Five Rooms.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

An ideal interpretation is found here of the much beloved one story colonial home. Only five rooms, with one bath, it is designed for a thirty foot lot and is a revealing instance of what can be achieved in small home perfection.

LOUISE BARGELT. [Chambers Photo.]

It is one of the ten prize winning designs in the five room division of THE TRIBUNE'S homes competition. The architect's name and and the prize awarded this design will be announced on this page on Feb. 27, together with the names of architects whose prize designs will appear anonymously for the next two Sundays.

Makes Strong Appeal.

Repeating the requests made previously, keep this and the next two anonymous designs. Compare all six houses which will have been published and write THE TRIBUNE a letter telling which design you prefer and giving the reasons for your choice. For the three best letters received prizes of $25, $15, and $10 will be given.

A well rendered Colonial design invariably makes a strong appeal. Modern contractors have found it hard to excel the work of the old colonial builders, and neither have their designs and their planning of either exterior or interior been surpassed in popularity.

Many among these who desire to own a home and through necessity or preference prefer that it be a small one will rejoice in the recent country wide tendency towards simplification.

In this case an example of extreme artistic simplicity is shown. Lacking the formality of the larger Colonial dwellings, it retains at the same time much of their reserve. Lacking the purposely unsymmetrical lines of the English cottages, it still suggests much of their sense of intimacy.

Green and Purple Roof.

Brick, water struck, is one of dark shades laid in Dutch hond and buff colored mortar, and there are weathered, hand hewn lintels over the windows. The wood trim is white, the shutters are blue green Colonial shading, and the roof is of mottled green and purple shingles.

The brick wall, irregularly laid, approaches a curved porch with colonial entrance.

A coat closet is opposite the corridor, and at the right is a square living room with exposure on three sides and porch and terrace at the back. This living room has the colonial touch in its white or cream woodwork, its simple wood cornice, its fireplace and hearth of brick and colonial mantel.

Its walls, like those of the rest of the house, the kitchen and bath excepted, are to be papered in colonial designs. These should not be difficult to secure, as there are a wealth of colonial designed wall papers on the market today.

Its floor, like that of the dining room, hall and bedrooms, is of straight grained white oak, stained dark and waxed.

The dining room is reached through the living room, and has in one corner a built-in colonial china closet. The room is not large, but is well lighted, with windows opening on to the living room porch and terrace, as well as on to the other side of the lot.

A small hall commands the entrance into the two bedrooms and bath. The master bedroom occupies a prominent position, with abundant provision for light and air and closet space. The second bedroom is smaller, and, while not so favored with windows, can obtain a cross ventilation in summer time through the hall and master room.

About the Bath.

The kitchen is large for a house of this cubic content. Its suggested floor is white pine, linoleum covered. The sink is of enameled iron with drawers below the drainboard on each side and a cubboard with glass doors above. Also the cabinet and refrigeration are placed conveniently, and there is a rear entry, leading down into the basement and out onto a service porch.

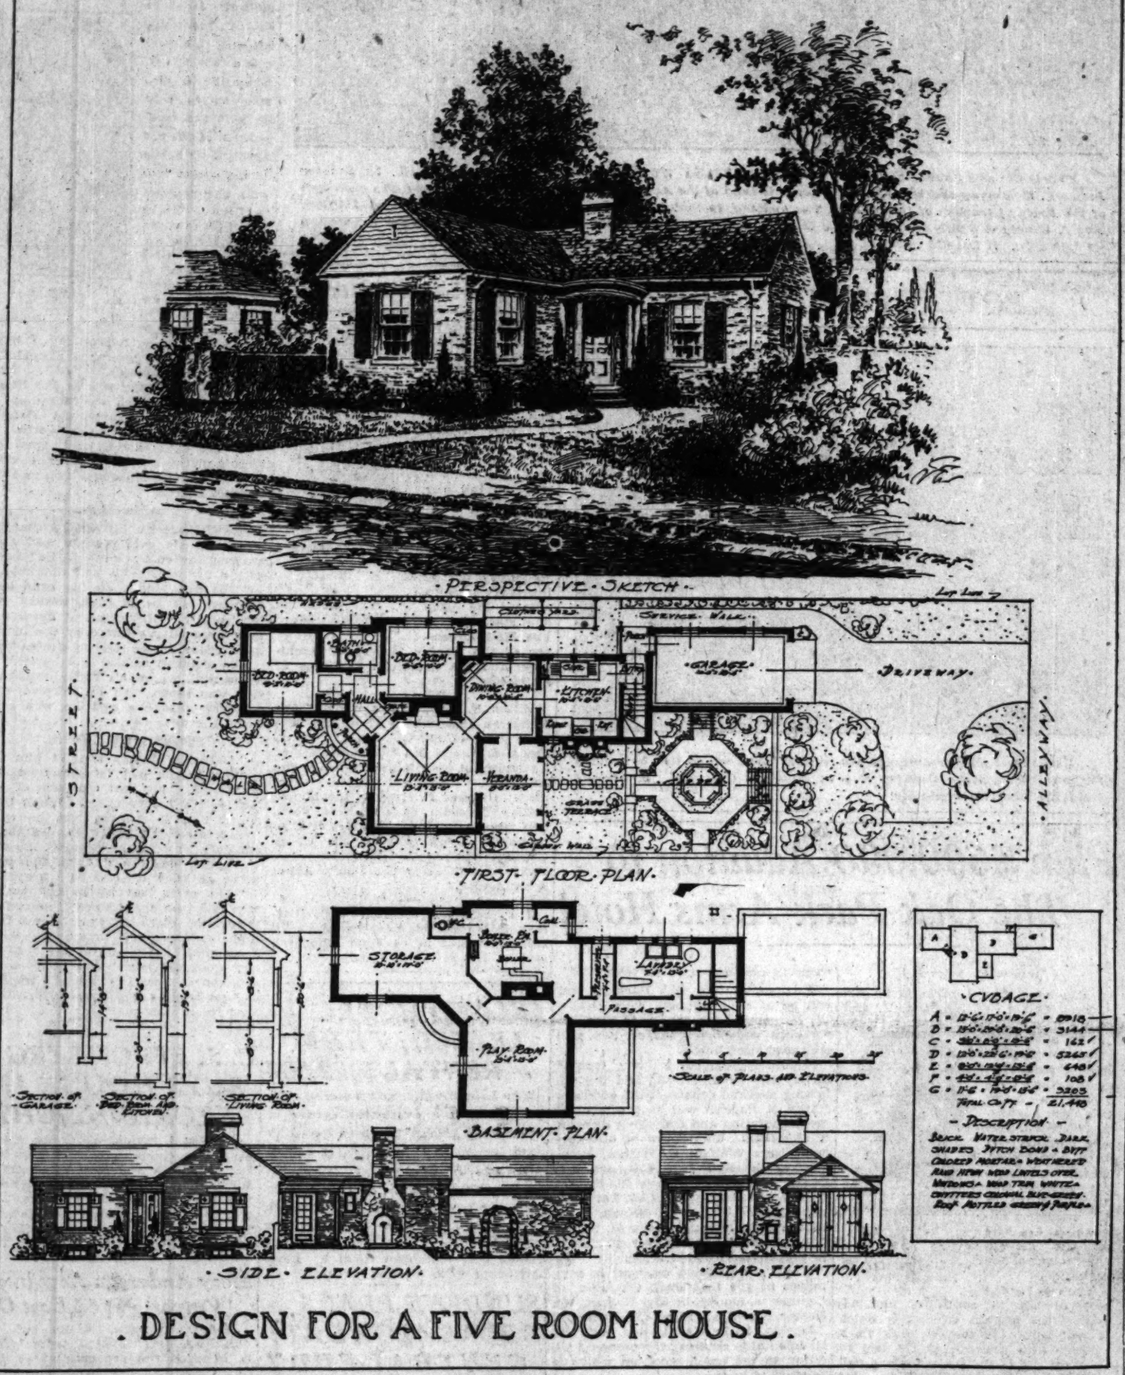
Observe the bath, it has a generous outside window, tile floor, and 6 foot tile base. Its walls are painted the same as the kitchen walls, with a gloss coat to be selected according to individual taste.

Throughout the house the hardware is of a bright colonial brass finish, simple in design. Pressed glass knobs are at the doors of the main rooms. Electric fixtures are left to the owner's selection, but show a characteristically colonial touch.

In the basement the partitions are of wood sheathing and no painting is called for. The ceiling over the boiler and in the garage is to be plastered, with the cellar floor concrete. The garage is placed close to the house, a position which cannot help but be a comfortable one in cold or stormy weather.

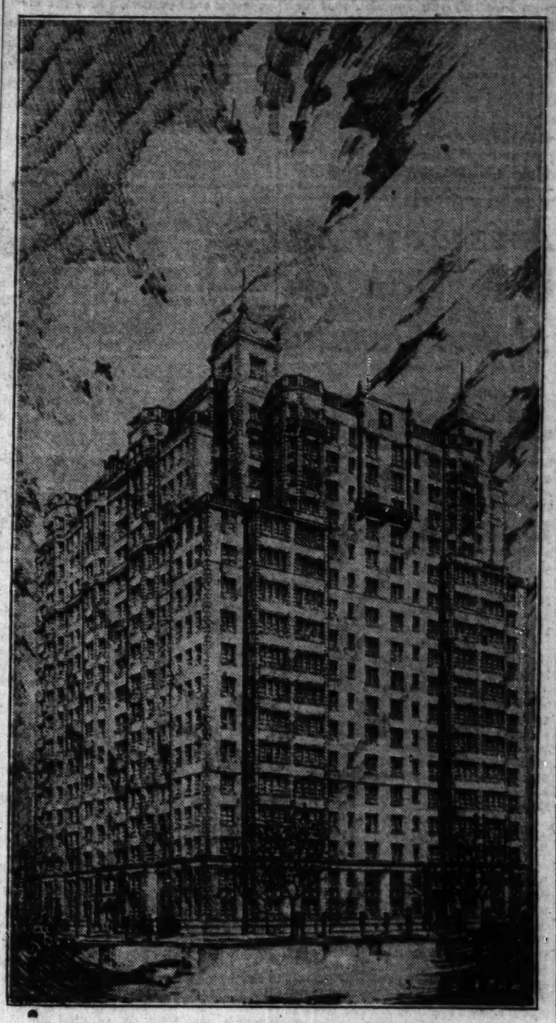
A playroom is included in the basement for the children, together with laundry, storage, and boiler room. Steam heat is planned for the house, with adequate radiation in every room.

NO. 4—A PRIZE WINNING DESIGN FOR A FIVE ROOM HOUSE



An ideally planned and charmingly executed design for a five room home, this is another one of the ten prize winning houses in the five room division of The Tribune's Homes Competition. Conceived in the beloved colonial spirit, its exterior is of dark brick, water struck, with shutters of colonial blue-green and roof of mottled green and purple shaded shingles. Its interior continues to develop the type with its white woodwork, papered colonial walls, and floors of straight grained white oak, stained dark and waxed. As previously announced, the name of the architect and the place this design won in the prize list will appear on this page Feb. 27. Don't fail to save these designs until two more have appeared. Then write The Tribune your preference—and why! Three prizes of $25, $15, and $10 will be given for the best letters received.

FOR THE "NINETY AND NINE"



W. C. Bannerman & Co. are erecting the above seventeen story 100 per cent coöperative apartments at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Wellington avenue, as told in detail in a neighboring column. Robert S. DeGolyer & Co. are architects, with Hooper & Janusch associated. Leonard C. Smith made the above rendering.

ON THE EDGE OF THE LOOP

Above is the seventeen story City State Bank building, at the southwest corner of Randolph and Wells and the proposed twenty-three story annex, told about in the real estate section of The Tribune yesterday. D. H. Burnham & Co. are the architects. P. W. Chapman & Co. have underwritten a $2,500,000 bond issue on the entire project.

BUILDING TO BE AT CORNER OF WELLINGTON

Gymnasium for the Tenant-Owners.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Dr. Norton should write this lead paragraph, for it's about a seventeen story apartment building with homes for "ninety and nine." But since our religious editor is out at lunch as we're writing this, we'll have to stick to the real estate and building facts. So, to continue, work has started on what is claimed is to be a $3,000,000 investment in land and building at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Wellington avenue. This bears out a prediction made in this section on Jan. 14 that a tall structure might be built on this site.

This tall home for the "ninety and nine" is to be a 100 per cent co-operative affair, erected by W. C. Bannerman & Co. from plans by Robert S. DeGolyer & Co., with Hooper & Janusch associated architects.

Roof Atrocities Hidden.

The usual group of unsightly penthouses which so many Chicago architects like to scatter about on the roof are to be hidden in a set-back story on the top of the building. There'll be other set-backs at the corners, so that the "3000 Sheridan road" building, as we presume it'll be christened [this being the present mode in flat naming], will be a bit different from the usual old-fashioned box type of apartments.

The usual tank atrocities will be concealed in two towers overlooking Sheridan road. The building will not be a "shirt front" structure—it'll be of face brick on all sides, with trim of Bedford stone.

There'll be a large gymnasium for the tenant-owners in the basement. The first floor will have two entrances, the main one being on Wellington. It'll also have four apartments, a janitor's flat, extra maids' rooms, children's play room, a large directors' room, etc.

May Have Roof Bungalow.

From the second to the thirteenth, inclusive, there'll be six suites to a floor, varying from four to seven rooms each. From the fourteenth to the sixteenth, inclusive, the six apartments on each floor will be specially arranged; the sizes will be four to six rooms each.

The seventeenth floor also will have specially arranged apartments and on the roof an eight room deluxe bungalow will be built providing some one evidences an inclination to buy it.

The living rooms of the apartments will average 14x25 and the other rooms are said to be in proportion. The living rooms will have fireplaces and the kitchens mechanically iced refrigerators.

Of English Design.

The design of the new coöp apartment building is in the early English rennaissance with the interior carried out in the same period. The general plan is "L" shaped with a frontage of 166 feet on Sheridan road and a depth of 140 feet on Wellington avenue.

The George M. Foreman company has underwritten a $1,700,000 bond issue on the project and W. C. Bannerman has contracted with the Kirkham Hayes corporation for sales and management. Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson were attorneys.

SUBURBAN HOSTELRY WITH NEW ANNEX

This is how the Oak Park Arms hotel will look when the proposed addition fronting on Oak Park avenue is completed. William G. Kreig, J. T. and M. D. Hetherington are architects and Fridstein & Co. are the general contractors. More is told in another column of this section.

W. K. FELLOWS AND JOHN L. HAMILTON HEAD NEW FIRM

William K. Fellows, John L. Hamilton, Laurance E. Wilkinson, and James F. Gerrity have formed a new partnership for the practice of architecture, as successors to the old established firm of Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton, under the name of Hamilton, Fellows & Wilkinson. Mr. Wilkinson and Mr. Gerrity both have been on the staff of Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton for more than fifteen years. The business of the new firm will be conducted in their office building at 514 Tower court. As announced two weeks ago, Mr. Perkins is now one of the architectural firm of Perkins, Chatten & Hammond.

PLAN TO ERECT 25 BUNGALOWS IN MIDLOTHIAN

The Midlothian Real Estate Improvement corporation has secured 120 fifty foot lots in the subdivision known as the Heart of Midlothian, extending from Crawford to 45th avenue and from 147th to 151st streets, on which it will erect twenty-five five room bungalows. All the lots will front fifty feet and they will be landscaped and planted with shrubbery. The homes will all be insulated to help in keeping the homes warm in winter and cool in summer. William T. Braun is the architect. The firm has a number of other residences under construction in the vicinity.

SYNDICATE PLANS 100 BUNGALOWS ON SOUTH SIDE

A syndicate plans to erect 100 brick bungalows on Blackstone, Harper, Dante and Woodlawn avenues, between 91st and 94th streets. The syndicate has just purchased 135 lots in the district. Work on the first unit of ten will start Feb. 1. The construction contract has been awarded to L. R. Hudson & Co. Pauly, Loeb & Hammel represented the syndicate in the purchase of the lots and McGarry & Humpfer the sellers. G. K. Schwartz handled the legal details.

$300,000 FLAT BUILDING FOR KEDZIE AVENUE

An important project is announced for the Palmer Square district, where Nathan Zaritsky and Samuel Packer will erect a building to contain fifty-one two and three room furnished apartments, at 2108-10 North Kedzie avenue. This thoroughfare is slated to be a boulevard. The site, 50x250 feet, was purchased from F. C. Johnson. Koenigsberg & Weisfeld are the architects and N. S. Wallach is contractor. Niels Juul Jr. was broker. The project will represent an investment of $300,000, it is stated. Completion is set for July 1.

APARTMENT INN IS GOING UP ON KIMBARK AVENUE

Fred M. Lorish and C. A. East leased to Charles H. Pierson the Eastmere, a thirty-five two, three, and four room apartment building now under construction at 6610 Kimbark avenue. Mr. Pierson will operate the building as an apartment hotel. His lease is for ten years and the aggregate term rental is $200,000.

The site, 50x165 feet, was purchased from the estate of Edwin M. Ashcraft for a reported consideration of $37,500. The Cody Trust company is underwriting a bond issue of $125,000 on the project.

BUYS BLOCK IN BEVERLY HILLS FOR 30 HOMES

O. W. Billson has taken the title for a syndicate, of which he is the head, to the block bounded by 95th, 96th, Irving, and Oakley, in Beverly Hills, and will erect thirty bungalows to cost a reported $430,000. Max Vogel was seller of the block, and the price is said to have been $50,000.

36 APARTMENTS AT WILSON AND KEDZIE ARE SOLD

The Sheridan Trust & Savings bank has taken title from Samuel Hayden, Sam and Philip Slavin to the thirty-six flat building being built at the northeast corner of Kedzie and Wilson.

PAYS $4,000 A FRONT FOOT ON ROOSEVELT ROAD

The Liberty Trust and Savings bank has bought twenty-five feet of frontage at 3150 Roosevelt road, improved with a two story building, for a reported $100,000, or at the rate of $4,000 a front foot. John F. Diffenderffer & Co. were brokers.

Ralph Starrett Retires from Construction Firm

Ralph Starrett has retired as director and vice president of the Starrett-Dilks company, builders, and the firm hereafter will be known as the Dilks Construction company. The firm was the builder of the Pure Oil building, the Burnham building, and the 100 West Monroe building, and at present is engaged in the construction of the forty-one story Bankers building.

PAY $1,000,000 FOR 63 ACRES ON LINCOLN AVENUE

A price of $1,000,000 is reported to have been paid for sixty-three acres on Lincoln avenue between Devon and Pratt which Dail Goodson and Wilmer S. Wilson bought from Noble & Thumm. The property will be subdivided immediately by Goodson & Wilson, Inc. It is stated underground improvements will be installed this spring. Daniel Cliffero represented the sellers and Burke, Jackson & Burke the buyers.

HOME BUILDERS' DEPARTMENT

MODERN STYLE OF BASEMENT ADDS TO JOYS OF HOME

Room for Play as Well as for the Utilitarian.

BY HOMER GRANT.

The modern basement is one which is receiving considerable thought and attention when a new house is built. The architect draws up a careful plan in which he shows how the basement space may not only be utilized in the most efficient fashion but made attractive as well.

The prospective owner considers how many of the modern appliances for lightening the effort of home upkeep he can afford, considers where he wants his workshop, his children's playroom, the boys' billiard room or the room for recreational purposes.

For the basement in the house has outlived its era of "utility only." It is no longer merely a necessary evil to keep one from freezing to death, or to provide a place for laundry and storage purposes. It is rapidly becoming identified as an attractive part of the living quarters of the house, its possible value recognized in a number of very definite ways.

The greatly increased cost of building has been one of the chief causes of this demand for basement conversion. A moderately salaried man does not usually contemplate including in his house a plan a play room for the children, a billiard room for the boys, dance space for his friends, a sewing room for his wife, or a "den" for himself. All this today means too much initial expense to build and is far too costly to heat, decorate, furnish, and clean.

Use of Oil a Help.

While necessity has created the demand, it is the growing use of oil and gas fueled heating plants which is largely responsible for making possible the new basement.

Now a basement, without undue effort on the part of the mistress of the house, can be as spotless as any other part of the interior. Without coal being shoveled in or ashes taken out, and with the coal bins empty, the basement takes on a new air. The leopard may not change his spots, but the basement certainly has changed its character since it has offered to architect, decorator, and owner its abundant floor space, properly lighted, well ventilated, dustless, clean.

Consider the utility side of the basement first. Up to date plans contain, of course, suitable space for washing machine and ironer. If a man is building a new house it is wise to make provision for these appliances even though he may not be intending to have them immediately upon occupying it.

In Case Coal Is Used.

There can be a laundry stove, a laundry drier, an automatic storage water heater, a garbage incincrator, and an automatic ice machine besides the heating plant.

It is by no means impossible to have a basement of the newer and more carefully planned sort even though one burns coal. In this case, however, care must be taken to have the heating plant, the coal room and the ash hoist entirely removed and shut off from the rest of the basement. Many people who prefer to burn coal are having their basements so planned that they can use the remaining space to the same advantage.

Many of the new basement plans contain all of the mechanical appliances in one room, the heating plant in a second room, the storage and fruit provision space in the rear of the basement, and then reserve the large central space, or whatever other space is left, for amusement and recreational rooms.

For Cleanliness.

Frequently a toilet, a lavatory and a bath with small dressing room are suggested. These are a big convenience where there are growing children and they save much dirt from being tracked through the upper floors.

Naturally, since a basement is not as warm as the upper part of the house, nor should it be, if the heating plant is properly installed, extra provision usually is made for some supplementary heat. The usefulness of a gas radiant fire heater is apparent here. It is attractive in appearance, and besides this throws a very appreciable amount of heat. Often in an area reserved exclusively for dancing, extra heat is not needed. But unless a house is very large, the dance space is used for other purposes, too. It may provide a billiard room in the evening and a play room for the children in the daytime. And in any basement division which serves as a "den" or sewing room or children's room, the need of some sort of supplementary heat is unquestioned, in the severe months of winter at least.

Basement stairways are also receiving their share of attention, a pleasing balustrade adding to the attractiveness of the basement descent. Cross light and ample ventilation in the new basements are not neglected, and the fruit cellar is given outside windows.

In the case of the man whose house is already built and who wishes to convert his basement into enjoyable quarters as well as useful ones, the carpenter may be called in.

Assuming that an oil heater or gas heater has been installed, there remains the coal bin first to be transformed into something contributing to the general liveableness of the home.

It can be the "den" or the "retreat," with cupboards built in for sporting paraphernalia. A work table can be installed on which games may be played, lessons studied and cards dealt.

Flat shelves can occupy the space under the stairs where once an ash barrel reigned supreme. And since there is no dust or dirt to be fought against, the basement, once cleaned, can remain so as long as any other part of the house.

PLANS SUBMITTED IN HOME COMPETITION TO BE RETURNED LATER

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: I am one of the contestants in your prize competition, and I have not yet received my drawing. AN ANXIOUS ARCHITECT.

Answer—If you will reread our program carefully you will find that THE TRIBUNE reserves the right to keep all submitted plans until publication. We intend publishing many of these plans, both in THE TRIBUNE and in book form, and trust you do not mind our keeping your plan until we decide just what use we are to make of it.

After publication it will be returned to you immediately.

Answers to Questions on Home Owning

Against a Trick House.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: My wife and I both have an idea for a house, and we would like very much to build it, but the plan of this house is unusual and our friends advise us against spending money for this sort of home. Don't you think it's a wise idea to go ahead and build the kind of a house you want yourself rather than to build a house which is exactly like every one else's? E. K.

Answer—A house which is too entirely different from other houses is known as a "trick house," and in the building of this sort of a home one thing must be taken into consideration—that is, the resale value is not good. Naturally if you are convinced that you will always like the house and will always want to live in it, you can confidently enough go ahead and build. But the chances are that you might tire of it yourself or for some other reason want to sell, and if you had to sacrifice it for a low price because of its odd design or plan you would naturally be disappointed.

Costs of Masonry Homes.

Dear Miss Bargelt: One hears so much about masonry construction of houses. Isn't masonry much more expensive than frame? R. D.

Answer.—No, there is an ever narrowing margin between the cost of masonry and frame construction. In some localities a masonry house is even cheaper, in many cities the cost is about the same, in other cities masonry homes are only a little more expensive than frame ones. Not very long ago it was only the wealthy man who could afford masonry construction, but today this is no longer so.

POORLY PAINTED HOUSE CAUSES LOSS TO OWNER

It is poor policy to economize on your painting job, for the paint of your house, its quality and kind, adds inestimably to its appearance.

The average person can tell much more about paint than he could ten years ago. He knows whether it has been well done or poorly done.

A painter, to do a creditable piece of work, needs plenty of time. He should not be hurried, or have a couple of days cut off from his scheduled time.

Both paint and varnish, to wear well, should have plenty of opportunity to dry, and there is no lasting economy in failing to put a sufficient number of coat of paint on your house.

Furthermore, if you are building with a view to selling at a profit in a short time, good paint on your house is even more important from a dollars and cents standpoint.

A prospective buyer is always looking out for signs which point to "more upkeep" and when he sees these danger points, sees perhaps another painting job coming soon, because the last one was poor, he is apt to "look farther" in the hope of "faring better."

EVER CONSIDER STORAGE CLOSET FOR BACK PORCH?

Ever consider a closet on your back porch? Or one built in, under the back porch providing a cool, comfortable place for the storing of many needed articles for outdoor use. Such closets may be placed on porches already built and may be located across the end, or against the wall of the house. Almost any good serviceable color will be satisfactory for the exterior, but it should be in keeping with the house. You will probably want to enamel in white or ivory for the sake of cleanliness. If you desire to decorate the front or visible portions, simply outline the door panels or other portions in a contrasting color or a lighter tint of the ground color.

DOUBLE GARAGE OFTEN IS WISE AS INVESTMENT

A double garage is a good financial investment. By renting one side of it the owner should be able to make his expenses for heating it during the cold season and also eventually pay for its cost.

Sometimes a family building a new house will put up a two car garage, even if it does not contemplate a car for several years. Eventually the garage pays for itself, and sometimes it later continues to provide a small but steady investment.

A heated garage saves a car from much of the admitted abuse which makes repair bills high and tends to quick automobile depreciation.

Window Through Chimney Helps Brighten Up Attic

By placing a window through the chimney on an attic third floor, just the needed light can be contributed to the servants quarters, the children's playroom, the boys' den or whatever this space is used for.

From Renter to Owner Is Worth Effort

The Tribune will print experiences of home owners—letters telling how the home was financed, how the initial payment was gathered, how the mortgages were paid off, how the upkeep was handled. For each letter printed The Tribune will pay $10. Letters should not exceed 300 words. Address them to Small Homes Department, Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

Determination Did It.

CHICAGO.—We, of course, always dreamed of our own home, yard, and that happiness that accompanies the pride of possession.

Though we saved and were economical in the purchase of all luxuries, we did not accumulate much wealth. My wife and I decided we would get extra work and hasten the time when we might invest in a portion of the earth.

She did addressing on cards and envelopes. I plugged for subscriptions for some popular magazines. The former was monotonous, arduous, and ill paid, while the latter was only good for a short time. Then my enthusiasm died. But with the money we had saved before we now had $172.50.

Then fortune smiled at our industry. A wealthy woman had seen my wife's beautiful handwriting framed on an honor scroll of a school whose graduates had given their lives in the world war.

This woman's daughter was to be married and she thought of having the invitations written by my wife. She paid well, and this was only the beginning of orders that still pour in—debuts, bridge parties, dinner and engagement invitations, etc.

In less than a year we bought a vacant lot for $1,250. The real estate man of whom we bought it agreed to build our home to our specifications for $5,800, this to be paid on time, $100 per month and 6 per cent interest, payable monthly, on the balance remaining due from time to time.

This all happened exactly six and one-sixth years ago, and now it's ours, but the memory of and the glory in the struggle and determination to own "our own" will be ever our greatest treasure. M. C. P.

Credit Due to Wife.

CHICAGO.—This story should really be written by my wife, for to her managing genius is due our success in buying a home.

Coming to Chicago in 1906, we had always rented, not being able, as we thought, to buy a home. We belonged to that timid class who think they cannot make it go.

In 1916 we rented a cottage in which we lived as renters for five years, paying at first $20 and, finally, $30 per month.

The owner, wishing to sell, ordered us to vacate, giving us first chance to buy. But we thought we would not be able to do it. When time to vacate arrived we were unable to find a place to move, so we were just about forced to find a way to buy.

The price was $4,000, with $1,000 down. We induced the owner to come down to $800 on the initial payment and give us a contract to pay the balance at the rate of $50 per month, including interest. We assumed a $1,200 mortgage.

My wife sold some stock of her own for $400, and I scurried around and borrowed $400 from friends, using some more of friend wife's stock as collateral.

An old house on the rear of the lot, made into a garage, brought us $20 per month.

That $20 from the garage made the deal a success. We finished our payments two years ago, but still carry the mortgage. Counting interest, taxes, and upkeep, we are paying about $15 per month for the same cottage for which we paid $30 back in 1921, not to mention the value of the property, which we now own. M. J. M.

CHIMNEY MUST BE CONSIDERED IN HOUSE PLANS

Whether the chimney of your new home is of stone, hollow tile, brick or concrete blocks, it should be firelined. Where a chimney wall is only one brick in thickness and the inside of the flue plastered with mortar, it may remain tight for a time, but after a few months the constant heat causes the mortar to dry or fall out of place and an uneven flue is produced. Where firelining is omitted an extra thickness of firebrick may be used on the inside.

A fire clay lining in a chimney, whether that chimney is of brick, concrete blocks, stone or hollow tile, secures a straight flue of uniform dimensions. This same inner surface prevents the lodging of soot in the chimney rests on floor joists, but flue and avoids the possibility of a chimney fire.

It is well to remember that when you apply for fire insurance on your house one of the questions asked you will be: Which does your chimney rest on, floor joists, frame wall or solid foundation? Some companies will not insure your house if the many houses have a chimney which is sustained by a wood bracket projecting from the frame studded wall.

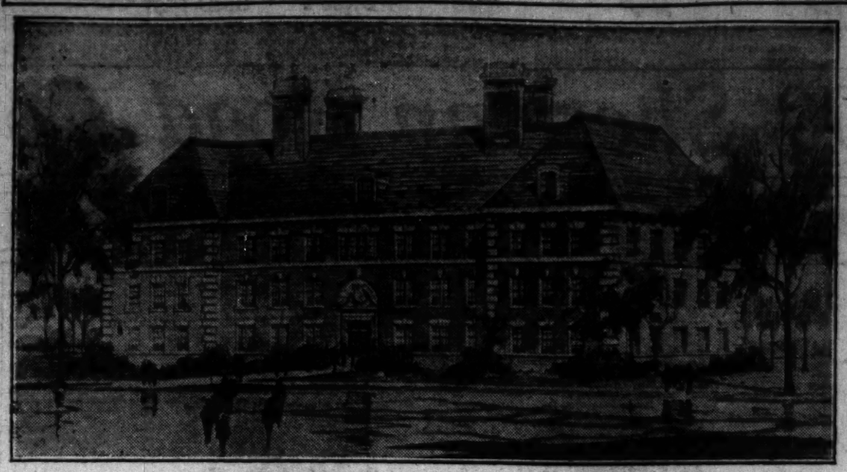
USE OF COPPER IS GROWING IN SMALL HOMES

The use of copper in small homes is tremendously on the increase, according to an address made before the American Mining Congress in Washington, D. C., in December of this last year.

Copper consumption in the last five years in the building industry shows a big gain over that used prior to 1921.

In the small house field the use of copper shingles on the roof, copper gutters, leaders and roof flashings has been widespread. The efficiency of copper lightning rods as a protection against the damage done by electrical storm has been proven, and this manufacture is a steadily growing one. Brass pipe installations are also on the increase, as are brass and bronze fixtures for use in homes wired for electricity and larger halls and public buildings.

SCIENCE HALL AT ILLINOIS WOMAN'S COLLEGE



This is the new Science hall being built for the Illinois Woman's college, at Jacksonville, Ill., by Senator James E. McMurray and his wife. The donor is head of the Acme Steel company of Chicago, and also chairman of the board of trustees of the college. The building, to contain the usual laboratories, etc., will cost $250,000. Royer, Danely & Smith of Urbana are the architects. The college is a Methodist institution and is celebrating its 80th year. It has 640 students.

POTTAWATOMIE CLUB

Plan $600,000 Addition to The Oak Park Arms Hotel

Plans have been completed by Architects William G. Kreig, J. T. and M. D. Hetaerington for a $600,000 annex to the Oak Park Arms hotel, at Washington boulevard and Oak Park avenue, in Oak Park. The new addition will have 127 rooms, which will give the suburban hostelry a total of 331 rooms. Fridstein & Co. will be the general contractors of the annex.

WILLIAM C. HAIGES [Birdsall Photo.]

The site for the new section is south of and adjoining the present five story hotel. It will front 100 feet on Oak Park avenue, with a depth of 178 feet to an alley. It is understood plans call for a large assembly hall or banquet room to accommodate at least 1,000.

This means that Oak Park at last will be able to compete with Evanston for suburban conventions, etc. The northern suburb, of course, has several good sized hotels.

A new corporation is being formed to buy the present hotel and the adjoining site and construct the addition. Harry A. Parrish will be president of the corporation and managing director of the hotel. The board of directors comprise: William C. Haiges, president of the Oak Park Cleaners and Dyers, chairman; Warren T. Easter, former president of the Oak Park real estate board; Dr. N. M. Maxon, G. R. Brinkerhoff, druggist; John H. McAuliffe, attorney, and Meyer Fridstein, president of Fridstein & Co.

The new business promotion committee of the Oak Park Chamber of Commerce, headed by Mr. Haiges, Mr. Easter, Frank S. Collins, and Robert E. Nicholas, it is stated, has been instrumental in securing the proposed addition to the hotel, work on which is to start at once.

20 MINUTES IN CHI AND NEW YORKER IS TAXIED INTO GUTTER

Listen to what a New York real estate writer says about Chicago in the Real Estate Magazine of New York. It's an excerpt from an article called "Chicago Through the Eyes of a New Yorker," by William J. Brede, and, despite the taxi wallop, it contains few unmerited harsh comments about our gentle mannered, crimeless village.

"And, in conclusion, a word about Chicago's traffic regulations," writes Mr. Brede. "It seems to be a step ahead of New York in that respect, as traffic is controlled chiefly by signal system, with police regulation only at principal crossings.

"Its taxi drivers are even more reckless than ours. They dash through the streets at a terrific rate of speed and make no attempt to dodge pedestrians if the signals favor the latter.

"The writer, who had lived thirty-eight years in New York and always succeeded in dodging every form of moving vehicle, had scarcely been in Chicago twenty minutes when a taxi bowled him into the gutter."

BUYS MENOMINEE-SEDGWICK CORNER. Peter Nelchipor bought the southeast corner of Menominee and Sedgwick, 54x125, from J. C. William Stein for a reported $35,250. There are two stores, four flats and a twelve car garage. Bruno Marten was broker and Anderson & Anderson attorneys.

News of the Architects

Walter A. McDougall, for the last nineteen years with Marshall & Fox, anneounces the opening of offices for the practice of architecture and engineering at 350 North Clark street. His phone is Superior 6937. Mr. McDougall entered the office of George W. Maher, architect, in 1899. In 1901 he became associated with Holabird & Roche. Six years later he entered the office of Marshall & Fox. He is a member of the Illinois Society of Architects and the American Institute of Architects.

A. and the Illinois Society of Architects at their joint meeting at the Architects' club next Tuesday evening. Richard F. Bach of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, will speak on "Industrial Art." H. A. Symonds, formerly with the U. S. Gypsum company, will discuss "A Plan for Educating the Public About Architecture."

J. J. Schwarz, formerly with Rissman & Hirschfeld, has opened architectural offices at 64 West Randolph street. His phone is Central 4315.

LELAND HOTEL LEASED; TERM RENTAL $922,500

The Leland hotel, now nearing completion at the southwest corner of Racine and Leland, has been leased by Sam Isenstein, E. Samuels, S. Silverman and A. Smith to J. N. Miller, Harry Carson and N. A. Miller. The term is fifteen years and the aggregate rental is a reported $922,500. The Leland is six stories high, has 205 rooms and will open April 1. Levit & Rovner were the only brokers.

SUNDENE PLANS 8 BUNGALOWS AT CENTRAL-EDDY

Andrew Sundene, contractor and builder, plans to erect eight bungalows on eight lots which he recently purchased from Patrick Doherty at Central avenue and Eddy street. He paid a reported $8,500 for the property. S. E. Holden of the Soper Realty company was broker.

FLORIDA HOTEL RATES STARTLE LOCAL REALTOR

But Golf Drive Gives Him Bigger Shock.

Florida's boom may have blown up, but its hotel rates in certain billionaire districts fail to show it, according to Earle G. Krumrine of E. G. Krumrine & Co., who writes that he paid the modest sum of $30 per twenty-four hours on his recent trip with the realtors to Dixie. This was bad enough, sighed Mr. Krumrine, but the meals were extra, and no matter whether one ordered ham 'nd eggs or a steak from a prize steer, followed by sixteen other courses, it averaged about $18 daily for nourishment.

This, by the way, was at the Palm Beach hostelry which was tacked on to the rear of the famous old Flagler residence, overlooking Lake Worth.

On the other hand, west coast of Florida prices, according to Mr. Krumrine, are about the same as those of Chicago hotels.

Two Smashes.

The Chicago realtor reports that he broke all his golf records and also nearly smashed a colored caddie's head with a 212 yard drive at Palm Beach.

"The ball landed on his bean and bounded 143 yards back toward the tee," said Mr. Krumrine. "These figures were later attested by the insurance adjuster, so they're authentic."

The stricken caddie was hustled to a hospital, where an X-ray examination was made. All he suffered was a slight headache and he was sent home the next day.

Spoiled a Good Drive.

"Naturally I was sore at him for getting in the way," commented Mr. Krumrine, "for that was one of the best drives I ever made. When they asked him if it hurt him he said: 'Well, ah didn't feel nothin' atall; it got dark so quick ah thought the sun had gone down and then the next thing ah knew ah was in a hospital.'

"The news traveled so fast that I was told that there were seventy-four telegraph orders left Palm Beach that night ordering golf insurance. After I hit that caddie and before I found out what the result was going to be you couldn't have bought my interest in that insurance policy for $5,000, although it only cost me $3.34 for a three year term."

C. J. STROMBERG BUYS HOUSE IN SKOKIE HEIGHTS

Charles J. Stromberg of the Stromberg-Allen company bought from Mrs. Ida M. Howe and Mrs. Charlotte H. Rieman the colonial brick residence at 1070 Bluff road, Skokie Heights, Glencoe, for an undisclosed consideration. The sellers are moving to California. McGuire & Orr were brokers.

Mary Anderson Acquires Property at 55 East Oak

Mary Anderson, editor of the "Drake-A-Day," bought from Ernest L. Mitchell the property at 55 East Oak street, lot 26x106, for an undisclosed price, but subject to $33,000. The improvements contain three apartments, a studio, and a five car garage. Louis C. Sudler of McMenemy & Martin was the only broker.

How property values have increased in Roseland is illustrated in the recent purchase of the southeast corner of 110th and Michigan, improved with a two story building, by William J. Gregson for a reported $190,000. The property, fronting ninety-six feet on Michigan, was sold in 1906, vacant, by Fred Farr for $6,000. In 1914 he sold it for $27,000. Four years later John A. Kelly bought it for $31,000, then erected the present building and in 1920 sold it to Mrs. Mamie Rossetter for $70,000. A year later she disposed of it to David L. Fraizer for $90,000. He held title for six years and has now sold it to Mr. Gregson for $190,000, which shows a gain of more than 100 per cent in twenty-one years. S. Kann and J. C. Callahan of the Hagstrom-Matson-Venning company were brokers in the last sale for the seller. Thomas Inga Bros. & Co. represented the buyer.

ANOTHER LARGE BEACH PROJECT FOR DUNELAND

Chicago's playground along its southern shore of Lake Michigan is to have another interesting development. The latest is Pottawattomie Country club, a combination country club and residential park at Michigan City, Ind., covering 210 acres.

There are to be golf courses, tennis courts, a bridle path, bathing beaches, etc. And there will be a hotel site laid out for those wishing to build their own homes on the property. David Saul Klafter has designed the clubhouses. The main building will be in the colonial style and will have 100 sleeping rooms as well as the regular club provisions. The other buildings will be of Spanish design, with a verandah on all sides, and will be located near the beach.

The American Park Builders, landscape engineers, will lay out the entire project, which, it is stated, will represent an investment of $1,250,000 upon completion. W. Vere Rife of the Reliance Realty company was broker for all parties in the buying of the property.

DOCTOR'S BILL TO BE UNKNOWN IN NEW HOTEL

Novel Idea for Uptown Apartments.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Here's some news for tenants who don't take an extra piece of pie for fear of having a tummyache, who don't dance for fear of spraining their ankles, and who don't drink grape juice for fear of cutting their fingers while opening the bottle—the said fears being occasioned by an antipathy toward doctor's bills.

DR. S. M. ROBIN.

This news concerns an eight story apartment hotel building where there will be no doctor's bills should any of the dire circumstances just named arise. The reason for this is that Dr. S. M. Robin, who will erect the building, announces that should any of his tenants be taken ill there won't be any doctor's bill, for he will treat them without cost.

"I'll want all my tenants to be well and happy and I'll do my best to keep them that way," explained the doctor, who will have an apartment on one of the upper floors of his structure. Incidentally, the doctor has been connected with the city health department for about sixteen years and during the war he was a captain in the medical corps, serving with the 331st artillery.

To Be Called Cavalier.

But about this doctor's bill-less apartment building. It's to be called the Cavalier and will be located at 6022 Winthrop avenue. There are to be 110 one-room kitchenette flats which will have the latest equipment. And again it won't be necessary to listen for the gentle voice of the iceman calling his wares, for there will be mechanical refrigeration.

The Cavalier gets its name from the romantic days of old Spain, when gentlemen did their cavaliering in silks and plumes. So the architecture of the structure, designed by Harry Dalsey, will be in the Spanish. The interior likewise will call to mind that sunny land across the seas.

A Fountain Will Play.

There's to be a handsome lobby done in black and gold, with Italian walnut trim. A sculptured Italian marble fountain will play. Then Dr. Robin is to do his best to keep his tenants cheerful by providing all sorts of playthings. There will be a room for the children and billiard, card, and dancing rooms for the grownups.

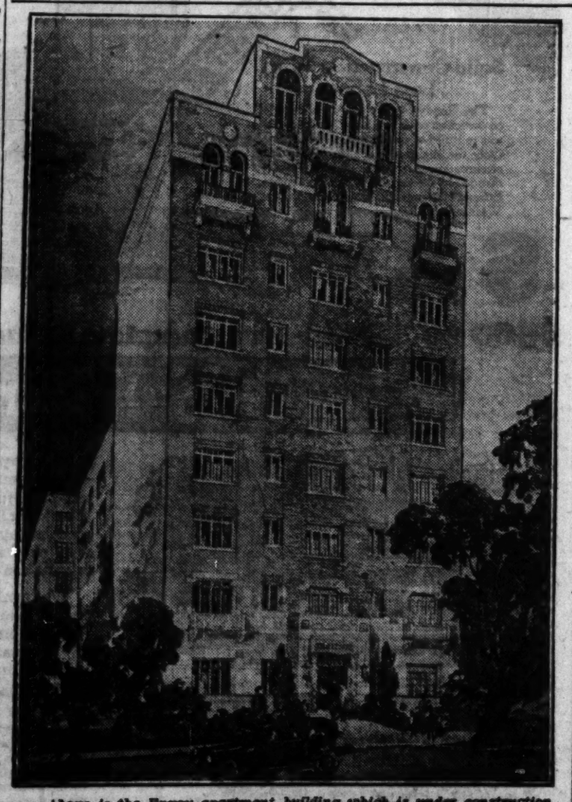
The exterior is to be of gray face brick with cut stone trim. There may be a bungalow placed on the roof, but this has not yet been definitely decided.

Work is to start on the Cavalier, which will measure 50x125 feet, in about three weeks, with completion expected in time for the fall renting season. The cost of the project, it is stated, will be about $500,000.

THE CAVALIER

Above is the Cavalier apartment hotel which is to be erected at 6022 Winthrop avenue. A feature will be a free medical service to tenants which will be provided by the owner, Dr. S. M. Robin. Harry Dalsey is the architect and the design is Spanish. S. Chester Denforth made the above rendering.

FOR EDGEWATER



Above is the Envoy apartment building which is under construction at 5631-33 Kenmore avenue, to Edgewater. It was designed by Hall, Lawrence, Rippel and Ratcliffe and will represent an investment of $500,000 it is stated. The Garard Trust company is underwriting a bond issue on the project. Charles Morgan made the above rendering.

JOHN L. O'GARA DISPOSES OF 3 FLAT BUILDINGS

John L. O'Gara has sold to Clara M. Irvin the eighteen apartment building at the southwest corner of 60th and Albany, the sixteen apartment building at the northeast corner of 64th and Troy and the ten flat building at the northeast corner of 65th and Fairfield.

Mr. O'Gara took in part payment 91½ feet at the northwest corner of Marquette road and Troy and $60 feet of residential property in Chicago Lawn. The valuation placed on the Marquette road property is reported at $50 a foot. Mr. O'Gara proposes a building to contain five stores and seventy-one one and two rooms on the Marquette corner.

Fritz A. Sedemke and Howard R. Wiener of Howard E. Walter & Co. represented Mr. O'Gara as broker. The attorneys were McCartney and Duff and Theodore Stone.

Chicago Metal Firm Plans New Factory in Indiana

The Royal Metal Manufacturing company, now at 2218 South Western avenue, has bought five acres in Ridgeland subdivision, Michigan City, Ind., and has started work on a one story plant designed by Henry L. Newhouse and F. M. Bernham. The Cushman Bond & Mortgage company of Michigan City has underwritten a bond issue. M. A. Cushman handled all details.

Cadillac Company Leases Building on Irving Park

The Cadillac Motor Car company has leased from Eisenstein & Troshinsky and Samuel Wenig the building at 4114-20 Irving Park boulevard for use as a salesroom and service station. The lease is for ten years at a term rental of $125,000. Howe, Fordham & Kraemer and Walter Becker represented the Cadillac company and Shaffer & Foster the lessors.

ST. GEORGE CATHOLIC HIGH SCHOOL FOR EVANSTON

Work is now under way on the above $600,000 St. George High school, designed by Joe W. McCarthy, at 350 Sherman avenue, Evanston, just east of St. Francis hospital. It'll be of red brick, with Bedford stone trimmings, of Colonial design, and will accommodate 1,000 boys. There'll be twenty-eight classrooms, cafeteria, library, science laboratories, gymnasium and running track, swimming pool and showers. It will be conducted by the Brothers of the Christian Schools, with the Rev. Elzear in charge. The W. J. Lynch Co. is contractor. Completion is set for September.

BUNGALOW WILL TOP BUILDING ON KENMORE AVENUE

The Envoy to Have 75 Apartments.

The Envoy is the name of a nine story apartment building which is being erected at 5631-33 Kenmore avenue, between Bryn Mawr and Hollywood avenues, for the Envoy Building corporation.

The structure is to contain seventy-five apartments of one, two, and five rooms and will have the latest in equipment, including mechanical refrigeration and ventilation. It occupies a lot 50x150 feet.

Designed by Hall, Lawrence, Rippel & Ratcliffe, the architecture is a modern adaptation of the Italian renaissance. The roof line on the front elevation is broken by a large bungalow that will occupy the ninth floor. The bungalow will serve the double purpose of providing living quarters and hiding the penthouses.

Beware of Mencken!

And it's just as well these penthouse monstrosities are being hidden in our new buildings, because it seems that the esteemed Mr. Mencken includes these roof appendages in the somewhat lengthy list of things he doesn't like. Who knows but what he may come here some time to look over our architecture? If he does there will probably be about as many building owners leaving this vale of tears as are students at the present moment, for Mr. Mencken certainly knows his adjectives. And who would want to stay around after receiving a torrent of his choicest?

Returning to the Envoy, it's to be faced with variegated red brick with flush cut white mortar points. Ornamentation will be provide through a generous use of Bedford stone. A number of balconies on the upper floors will relieve the monotony of a flat surface.

An Attractive Lobby.

The first floor is to have an attractive lobby, and it will also contain the general office, manager's office, janitor's apartment, store room, service hall, linen room, and boiler room.

It's stated that the property will have a valuation upon completion of about $500,000. Occupancy is expected around the first of May. The owning corporation includes Fred O. Rippel, Carl E. Erickson, and Charles L. Wallace. The Garard Trust company is underwriting a bond issue on the project.

Syndicate Plans Business Block on 103d, Near Racine

William E. Divine, representing an undisclosed syndicate, has taken title from Pauly, Loeb & Hammel to 100 feet of frontage on the south side of 103d street, between Racine and Morgan. The price was not disclosed. The syndicate plans to erect a business block on the site.

Hoyt King Buys 71 Acres on Half Day Rd.; $152,000

Hoyt King bought from Plotke & Grosby seventy-one acres on the south side of Half Day road, about a mile east of Waukegan road, for a reported $152,000, or approximately $2,141 an acre. The property later is to be subdivided and sold in large lots. Murray & Terry were the only brokers.

Racine and Sunnyside Flat Building Is Sold

The eighteen flat building at the southwest corner of Racine and Sunnyside has been sold by Leo Greenberg to Eleanore Perbohner for an undisclosed consideration, subject to an incumbrance of $126,000. Rueckberg & Burr were attorneys for both parties.

PLACE TO PLANT PENNIES

Dad Dearborn's baby among the banks is the Cheltenham State, which is to build a $100,000 home at the southwest corner of 79th and Escanaba. The bank is now in process of organization. M. D. Hetherington is the architect.

ROCK OF RELIGION

Leichenko and Esser designed the $150,000 synagogue and community house which the congregation of B'Nai Israel of Austin will erect at 5433-37 West Jackson boulevard. L. B. Bugerman made the above rendering.

"A Complete Building Service"

11 So. La Salle St. Central 8157

START SOON ON NEW SYNAGOGUE FOR WEST SIDE

Will Be Erected in West Jackson.

Work will start shortly on a synagogue and community center at 5433-37 West Jackson boulevard for the Congregation of B'Nai Israel of Austin. Designed by Leichenko and Esser, the new development is to be in the Byzantine style of architecture.

The two units will be contained in one building which is to measure 75x125 feet. The front elevation will be of Bedford stone, while all the other walls will be of face brick with cut stone trim.

The auditorium of the temple proper, together with a balcony at the rear, will seat 1,000 persons. The meeting place will be elaborately finished, ornamental plastered ceilings, walnut trim and stained glass windows being features.

The community unit will be two stories high and will contain a large prayer room, which may also be used for social purposes, several lecture rooms and offices. In the basement there will be lounge and check rooms and a kitchen.

The project is expected to cost about $150,000.

BERRY FIRM PUTS MOUNT PROSPECT TRACT ON MARKET

Maplewood Heights is the name of a subdivision which the H. Roy Berry company is opening at Mount Prospect, a suburb on the Northwestern. The property comprises about 100 acres, divided into 310 lots. It was purchased from the Busse family and will be sold with cement sidewalks and sewer and water mains included.

WESTWOOD OIL LEASES CHANGE.

The Westwood Oil company has leased the northeast corner of 73d and State, 100x160, from Ester Siegel, for a filling station. Fred H. Wolf was the only broker. Rosenberg & Burr and Leo Wolf were attorneys.

NEW BANK WILL BUILD AT 79TH AND ESCANABA

Banks, at any rate new ones, have made themselves conspicuous by their absence from these columns for some weeks. But the South Shore district comes forward today to relieve the situation by announcing one for its section of the city. The bank in question is to be called the Cheltenham State and it's now in process of organization.

It will be located at the southwest corner of 79th street and Escanaba avenue, a block west of the 79th street station of the Illinois Central.

M. D. Hetherington is drawing plans for the bank's home, which is to be of conventional design. The front part of the building will be two stories high, while the main banking floor will probably extend the full height of the structure. The officers' quarters will be placed on the second floor.

The exterior will be of dark red face brick with a generous use of cut stone for trim. The interior will be mainly in mahogany and marble. The safety deposit vault will be located in the basement. It is stated that the building will cost about $100,000. It will occupy a site 50x100 feet.

Among the organizers are Ray P. Roberts, formerly president of the Auburn Park Trust and Savings bank, and Milledge Mickelberry, formerly secretary and sales manager of Mickelberry's Food Products company. It is planned to have the bank open for business April 1, 1927, with a capital of $200,000.

FARM AND GARDEN

Scientific Men and Farmers Send Out Call for Help

Solution of Corn Borer Problem Urgently Needed.

Wanted: Some man or woman, in or out of the scientific field, to concoct a remedy for the European corn borer.

Approximately 200 different species and varieties of plants are attacked by the pest.

Field crops, vegetables, flowers, and weeds furnish feed and homes for the corn borer.

There are two schools of thought on the European corn borer question: First, kill the borer. Second, learn to live with it.

Methods used in fighting peach tree borer, Hessian fly, San José scale, Japanese beetle serve as examples in searching for corn borer solution.

Woodpecker, eligible for citation, may wear Croix de Guerre in borer war.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

NEW discoveries of the European corn borer have started thousands of men in the scientific, agricultural and business field to figuring out ways and means of crushing this devastating pest that has been found on approximately 200 different species and varieties of plants. Laws, machinery, parasites, birds, insects, and chemicals are to be used to curb the most destructive crop plague ever brought to America.

Most of the talk about the European corn borer has emphasized the destructive work it does in corn, but it is a serious menace to a variety of other field crops, vegetables, flowers, and grasses, and it lives among the weeds which are associated with these crops. Corn growers have reason to be the most deeply concerned of any, but borers take heavy tolls in both vegetable and flower gardens wherever the infestation becomes heavy as it has in Canada and some of the eastern states.

While the pest passes through four stages, as do many other insects—egg, larvae or borer, pupa and adult—it is the borer that injures crops. While the corn borer has been in this country nearly seventeen years, first reported and identified about ten years ago, no wholesale eradication method has yet been discovered.

Two Schools of Thought.

There are two schools of thought concerning the European corn borer. One group believes there is to be found a chemical, parasite or other agent that will destroy the pest and keep it under control, while the other group thinks the pest is here to stay and that American farmers must learn how to live with it, how to grow crops in their fields and gardens despite the borer.

Dr. G. I. Christie of the International European corn borer committee is one of the school who believes there is yet a method to be discovered that will keep the borer effectively under control. He points out that the peach tree borer, while not eradicated, was brought under control by the use of paradichlorobenzine. This chemical gives off heavy gas that settles down among the roots of trees and kills the pest harbored under the bark.

"The Hessian fly, which caused great destruction to the wheat crop of this country, has been brought under control through late seeding. The San Jose scale, a destructive fruit pest, is kept under control in middle west orchards by spraying, while in California the insect is controlled by the lady bird which feeds upon the scale. Californians do not depend upon the spray, but develop the birds to kill the scales. In the middle west the lady bird does not seem to multiply in large enough numbers to offer sufficient control," says Dr. Christie.

Various Methods Needed.

"Various methods may have to be used in different sections to control the borer just as is done with other pests," added Dr. Christie. "It may be possible to use an insecticide or a gas in the fields at the time the corn borer moths lay their eggs. Varieties of corn may be developed that will resist the borer. We may be able to attract the moths with chemicals so that they can be destroyed in a wholesale way. In fighting the Japanese beetle in New Jersey orchards geranium oil is used to attract them. The odor from the oil attracts the pests for a half to three-fourths of a mile."

Birds, beetles and ants are becoming great soldiers in the insect war. Carrier pigeons were in the limelight during the world war but the woodpecker is the bird that will probably wear the croix de guerre in the European corn borer war.

Downy woodpeckers are especially valuable in killing borers. They climb up and down the cornstalks, cock their heads to one side as they listen for the borer, drill a hole into the stalk and pull out a plump worm. Red-headed woodpeckers, golden shaft flickers [yellow hammers], blue jays, and grackles may take an active part in the borer flight. Nuthatches will go after the borers, and crows, starlings [imported birds] and robins have already shown that they like the pest, observers say.

Growers Handicapped.

The borer is complicating and seriously interfering with the marketing of agricultural products from the infested zones. Since it attacks so many different kinds of crops, stringent quarantine regulations had to be put into effect to protect the borer free territory. Growers in infested regions are seriously handicapped in the shipment of cut flowers, vegetables, corn, and broom corn.

Federal government authorities name below some of the more important plants attacked by the borer. The economic plants frequently attacked by the European corn borer are: Asters, barley, beans, beets, broom corn, celery, chrysanthemums, cotton, cow peas, dahlias, gladioli, grain sorghums, hemp, hops, millet, peppers, potatoes, rhubarb, sunflowers, Swiss chard, sweet sorghum.

Among the economic plants occasionally attacked by the borer are: Artichoke, buckwheat, calendulas, cannas, cosmos, geraniums, golden glow, hollyhocks, Johnson grass, marigolds, mignonette, oats, okra, parsnips, salvia, soy beans, spinach, sudan grass, sweet clover, timothy, tobacco, tomatoes, and zinnias.

BORER RIDDLED FIELD.

WORK OF A WORM ONE INCH LONG—Dr. G. I. Christie of the international European corn borer committee is shown here in the foreground inspecting a cornfield almost totally destroyed last season in the badly infested region of Ontario, Canada. The borers had eaten the insides out of practically all of the stalks in this field. The pests are so thick here in the heart of the dominion's corn belt where this picture was taken that comparatively little corn will be planted this year. In the background are entomologists, agronomists, and representatives of both the metropolitan and farm press, learning how the

BORER'S CALENDAR.

PESTS' COSTUMES IN SEASON—All stages of the European corn borer are shown here—the egg which hatches into larvae or borer, the pupa or winter stage, and the moth that flies over the fields in summer. This calendar shows how important it is for farmers to destroy corn stubble, where the pest lives most of the time. The calendar was prepared by Michigan State college to show the development of the European corn borer by months.

Eastern States Visited by Dreaded Insect Pest

EUROPEAN CORN borers have been found in new eastern territory. The United States department of agriculture announces that the pest has been found recently in Connecticut and New Jersey.

The department's announcement of the new invasion of the insect says that it appears necessary to consider the advisability of including Connecticut, Illinois, and New Jersey under the quarantine on account of this pest and of restricting or prohibiting the movement from these states, or from any infested districts determined therein, of corn and broom-corn (including all parts of the stalk), all sorghums and sudan grass, and, in addition, from the state of Connecticut, celery, green beans in the pod, beets with tops, rhubarb, oat and rye straw, as such, or when used as packing; cut flowers or entire plants of chrysanthemum, aster, cosmos, zinnia, hollyhock, and cut flowers or entire plants of gladiolus and dahlia.

Of Interest to Farmers.

Illinois' anti-corn borer committee's chairman has called another meeting of this business-farmer group in order to keep pace with the rapid developments connected with the various movements launched in the United States to control the European pest which threatens the prosperity of the live stock and grain industry. The meeting will be held in the Illinois Agricultural association's office Feb. 8. Keen interest has been shown, especially among business concerns of Chicago and other Illinois cities and towns, since a specimen of the insect was found at Kankakee, Ill., recently.

Cook County May Be Next Jump for Ever Busy Insect

TRUCKERS and home gardeners in one of the world's greatest vegetable and flower growing centers bordering the Chicago suburbs are becoming nervous over the European corn borer, which may bob up any day in their aster beds, tomato plots, or roasting ear patches. When midwest corn fields have been chewed up by the foreign pest then flower and vegetable gardens will furnish ideal dessert for the insects.

Entomologists name nearly a dozen vegetables and a similar number of valuable flowers grown in the Chicago district which are attacked by the borer. Beans, beets, celery, potatoes, rhubarb, and peppers are all frequently attacked by the borer, which also occasionally feeds on okra, tomatoes, spinach, and parsnips.

Farm Adviser Makes Study.

O. G. Barrett, Cook county's new farm adviser at Arlington Heights, Ill., is already making a careful study of the corn borer in an effort to find out what damage the pest will do to this section. He is wondering if Lake Michigan will be especially attractive to the European corn borer.

"If it is true, as has been suggested, and as a study of the infested area in the United States indicates that the infestation and distribution of the pest confines itself to fields and gardens near large bodies of water, then we may anticipate the maximum damage to the vegetables and flowers, as well as corn, in Cook county and adjacent communities," said Mr. Barrett.

He points out that a heavy infestation in this region would mean a heavy loss not only to growers in the trucking sections near Chicago but also to the city's and suburbs' business. Cook county alone, according to Mr. Barrett, produces annually approximately $2,500,000 worth of corn, $3,500,000 worth of vegetables, $20,000,000 worth of greenhouse products, and $3,500,000 worth of dairy products.

Within Flying Distance of Chicago.

D. A. Niedfeldt, president of the Cook County Farm bureau, is urging every gardener and business man to study the borer with the aim of being ready to deal with the pest when it invades the county.

It is already in the truck and fruit growing area of Michigan. It is within a few miles of the extreme southwest corner of the state and within easy flying distance of Chicago. It is within a few miles of the south end of Lake Michigan. There is only one county now separating Cook county's vegetable and flower gardens from the dreaded plague.

August Geweke, president of the Cook County Truck Gardeners' and Farmers' association, Des Plaines, Ill., thinks the borer will spread in this county.

"Sweet corn grown in Cook county and marketed and consumed in Chicago amounts to from 9,000 to 10,000 acres annually. Farmers get about $1,000,000 and the consumers of Chicago pay a sweet corn bill of over $5,000,000," added Mr. Geweke.

"I believe we will be in a better position to handle the European corn borer than the farmers in the main part of the corn belt, because here in Cook county few of the corn stalks are left in the fields over winter. But we cannot let the corn borer have its way and destroy the sweet corn business in this section. We should coöperate and make use of all available means to keep the corn borer out of Cook county," he said.

Insect Is Starred in Federal Film

"Remarkable pictures" is what midwesterners are saying about the two new European corn borer moving pictures which have just been released by the United States department of agriculture at Washington, D. C. Chicagoans saw the pictures at the capital recently when they were attending hearings dealing with the $10,000,000 appropriation wanted for use in fighting the pest which was recently found within a short jump of the corn belt's heart. The picture entertains and educates.

These new educational pictures of the insect which are to be shown soon in the central west, where the borer threatens the corn crop, are known as "The Corn Borer and What to Do About It" and "Corn and the Borer," designed to teach farmers how to distinguish the European corn borer from other similar pests, the borer's habits, and to instruct growers in the latest methods and means now used in holding the pest in check.

Copies of the films are ready for general distribution, announce officials of the federal agricultural department. They will be sent free for short loans by writing to the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

GROCERY STORE FIRM WILL BUILD NEW WAREHOUSE

Feature Will Be Model Food Sale Shop.

Groceries are responsible for the three story building which the Royal Blue Stores, Inc., is erecting at 2542-54 Ogden avnue, along the right of way of the Pennsylvania railway. The structure is to be one of the most modern grocery distributing warehouses in the city.

A feature will be a model store, with plate glass display windows and all the other properties of the up to the minute food dispensing shop. But it will lack the beauteous and otherwise fellow who do the buying. However, as the model is just intended to show prospective store owners the ideal merchandising layout this lack won't be noticed.

Enclosed Loading Space.

The model shop will be located on the first floor which will also contain besides warehouse space an enclosed platform capable of accommodating twelve motor trucks. The second floor will have an enclosed platform at which four freight cars may unload. And the general offices, all sumptuously furnished, will also be on the second floor.

The third floor will have storage space and when we all begin to eat more, requiring still more storage space, three more floors will be added to help in the appeasement for our appetites.

The boiler rooms and a five ton refrigerator will be located in the basement as well as two cork insulated merchandise coolers. The building was designed by A. Epstein. The cost is estimated at $430,000. When the additional floors are added this will be $750,000.

J. S. Pohn is President.

The Royal Blue Stores, Inc., now operate at 120 North Peoria street. Jacob S. Pohn is president and treasurer and William L. Pohn is vice president and secretary.

All legal work in connection with the purchase of the site and the construction was handled by Harry G. Herdeman. Dembo, Getz & Co. and Louis J. Bardfeld represented the store company in the purchase of the site.

B. H. LAUDERMILK OPENS NEW TRACT AT MT. PROSPECT

The Bert H. Laudermilk Organization has opened its second subdivision at Mount Prospect. The latest is called Meadowdale Gardens and is located on the Northwest highway between the Busse property and the Mount Prospect station. The property was purchased from Walter Krause Jr. for a reported price of $104,000. It's stated that it will be improved with paved streets, sewers, and sidewalks during the year.

FRED J. WALSH IS ELECTED HEAD OF JOLIET REALTORS

The Joliet real estate board elected the following officers for the coming year at a recent meeting: Fred J. Walsh, president; Daniel E. Morrison, secretary and treasurer, and Dana Munroe, vice president. The last two named were reelected.

PAYS $105,000 FOR WEST SIDE FLAT BUILDING

A reported $105,000, subject to $80,000, was paid by Kezia Leppla to Martin J. Callahan for the nineteen flats at 3030 West Quincy. Mae E. Smith and Ben H. Drollinger of G. W. Drollinger & Sons were brokers.

Thomas Arado Buys Dolan Residence in River Forest

Thomas C. Arado, retired capitalist, bought the home of Thomas C. and Elizabeth B. Dolan at 414 William street, River Forest, for a reported $45,000. After extensive repairs Mr. Arado and his family will move into the house. Jack V. Kaynor was broker and the legal details were handled by Harry F. Sinden and Charles Melcher.

Warehouse on South State Street Sold for $125,000

Robert S. Fulsang has bought the six story warehouse at 5931 South State, 50x136, from Frank K. Bull of Racine for a reported $125,000. William Clinton was attorney for the seller.

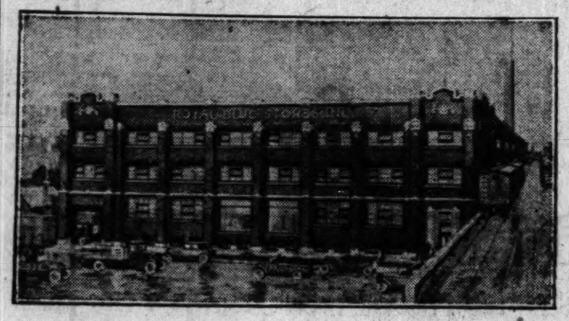
NEW SOUTH SIDE BAKERY

The above $300,000 building is being erected on a 300x100 ft. lot on the west side of Grove avenue, between 57th place and 57th street, back to New York Central tracks, by James H. Hodgkinson, who has leased it to the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company at a reported $22,500 annually. It will be used as a bakery. It was designed by A. Epstein. The George L. Arquette company is contractor. E. H. Ottmen & Co. have underwritten a $160,000 bond issue. Thomas A. Munro of the Munro Bond and Mortgage company represented all parties.

WHEN DO WE EAT?



A. Epstein designed this warehouse for the Royal Blue Stores, Inc., a grocery firm which helps to answer the question asked above by many Chicagoans. It's to be at 2542-54 Ogden avenue, along the right of way of the Pennsylvania railway. The cost is estimated at $450,000, though this will mount to $750,000 when three floors are added later. The size of the building is 150x165 feet.

Brokers' Notes

MRS. MAE ZIMANZL KOEHLER.

Mrs. Mae Zimanzl Koehler will be in charge of the woman's department of the newly opened branch office of Arthur T. McIntosh & Co., at 5011 West 22d street, Cicero. R. C. Koehler, for many years one of the assistant managers at the downtown McIntosh office, will be in charge of the new suburban office. The telephone is Cicero 519.

John D. Austin, formerly with the Glencoe office of McGuire & Orr, announces the opening of his own office under the name of John D. Austin & Co., at 899 Linden avenue, Hubbard Woods. Their phone is Winnetka 185.

Edward Paulson, with George G. Newbury & Co. for fifteen years, and Wilber L. Melvin and Samuel S. Schwartz of Melvin & Schwartz, have formed the new real estate firm of Paulson, Melvin & Schwartz and will open offices tomorrow in the City Hall Square building, suite 1507. Their phones will be Central 5591-92. H. E. Wolfe, J. Kippen, William Hart, and J. [illegible] Hughes will be associated.

The Petrzilek Realty and Mortgage company announces the opening of a new south side office at 6305 South Western avenue. The firm, comprising Henry B., Victor S., and Charles M. Petrzilek, was established more than two decades ago.

Herbert Davies, for several years in the automobile business, has formed the Herbert Davies Realty company. He is president and S. J. Miller and Joseph C. deVarona are vice presidents. The new concern has bought fifty-seven acres at Church and Waukegan road and is subdividing under the name of Golf View gardens.

The Bert H. Laudermilk Realty association is enlarging its offices in the Pure Oil building to double their present size.

Mrs. Sadie A. Skinner, formerly with Krenn & Dato, has opened a brokerage office at 18 East Elm street and will feature near north side property. Her phone is Superior 4740.

A. Stanley Tuck has been made assistant director of sales and Norman Rose, J. V. Alexandes and Joseph Tantillo made sales managers for N. O. Shively.

James Clark & Co. of 1334 East 79th have opened a branch at 34 West 5th avenue, Gary.

P. J. Bassett & Co. have moved their offices at 215 East 75th street.

George K. Papazoglidis, doing business as Georges Realty company, has moved his office from 10 South La Salle street to 4621 Lincoln avenue, phone Edgewater 7546.

HORACE BRAND.

Horace Brand, editor of the Staats-Zeitung, bought from Mrs. Sarah A. Spring of Waukegan the property at 1446-48 Wabash avenue, lot 60x170 feet. The sale is interesting because the property has been in the Giles and Edward Spring family for about seventy-five years and is the last lot held by family in the Giles H. Spring Wabash avenue subdivision. It is a part of a tract of 10.8 acres purchased by the Springs in 1841 for $1,039. It was subdivided in 1854.

Harry A. Hubbard sold to J. A. Bidderman a tract of twenty acres within the limits of Lake Forest, comprising a part of the old Ferry Field tract. It is on Edgewood road, formerly Sheridan road, and, while the consideration is withheld, the price is said to have been around $3,500 an acre.

MARSHALL FIELD III. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

W. G. Beale purchased the residence of the late Marshall Field II. at 1919 Prairie avenue from Mrs. Albertina Field as guardian of Marshall Field III., Henry Field, and Gwendolyn Field. Altogether Mr. Beale is said to have paid about $50,000 for the property.

Bernard Baumgarden leased to Aaron J. Jones, Adolph Linick, and Peter J. Schaefer the premises at 174-176 State street, which, with 178 feet leased some time ago from Joseph Beifield, are to become the home of a new theater to be known as the Orpheum.

The Right Rev. Charles Anderson, Protestant Episcopal bishop of Chicago, bought the Calvary Baptist church property at the southwest corner of Wabash avenue and 38th street for $20,000. The lot is 40x170 feet. Draper & Kramer were brokers.

To Feb. 6, 1897; 30 Years Ago Today

J. E. O. PRIDMORE. [Chambers Photo.]

Pridmore & Stanhope have designed for B. F. McCleland two private residences to be erected on his fifty foot lot on Kimbark avenue, between 63d and 64th streets. This vacant property was secured for Mr. McCleland to avoid the erection of flats on it, his residence being in the immediate vicinity. These residences will cost $11,000.

R. A. Wiesboldt will build a three story apartment house at 1304-08 Belmont avenue, to cost $32,000. It will front 97 feet and will have a depth of 100 feet. It will be of pressed brick and stone construction, with the interior finished in hard wood.

Keebler & Co. have closed a lease for Ralph N. Isham to a large local retail house for the four story building at 246-48 State street, for a term rental of $75,000. The lease runs for five years from May 1.

Will Erect $95,000 Flats at Cornell Ave. and 77th

Anna V. Barrett has taken title to the southwest corner of Cornell and 77th, 59x116, from John B. Sweeney for a reported $18,000, and Barrett Bros., brokers in the deal, are to erect a thirteen flat building to cost $95,000, it is reported. Kocher & Larson will be the architects.

Indian Refining Company Sells Plant on Western

The Indian Refining company has sold its $300,000 plant at 3200 South Western avenue to the Apex Motor Fuel company. Isaac Keim of W. K. Young & Bro. represented all parties as broker. D'Ancona & Pflaum were attorneys for the buyers.

Trio Buys Store Building in Evanston for $63,500

Charles S. Wallace, Charles H. Reynolds, and Edward H. Payne bought the two story and office building at 912 Chicago avenue, Evanston, from the Garibaldi trust for a reported $63,500. Irwin Grossman was attorney. Edward H. Payne & Co., C. Fred Stewart, and D. C. Malin were brokers.

THE seat of a Chicago Faucet is a little Monel metal cap that fits over the end of the valve sleeve. You can replace it in a few minutes. It costs a few cents. Just like replacing a washer.

The seat of an ordinary faucet is a ridge of metal machined on the main body casting. When it becomes worn or water-cut, the only thing to do is to replace the entire fixture. A long job and costly one.

Buildings equipped with Chicago Faucets throughout have no junk pile of worn-out fixtures—no constant load of repair bills. No troublesome interruptions of service.

With our standardized, renewable working unit, a leak can be repaired in about the same time it takes to change a burned-out electric bulb. Anybody can do it. The one unit fits all fixtures.

If you want faucets that will outlast the building, equip or replace with Chicago Faucets. Any of the plumbers listed below can supply you immediately with Chicago Faucet fixtures for every purpose. If there is not one near you, call, write or telephone

THE CHICAGO FAUCET CO.
2700-22 N. Crawford Ave. Tel. Belmont 0301

Standardized, Removable Working Unit

All wearing parts in Chicago Faucets are confined to a standardized, removable working unit. Minor repairs, such as a washer change, can be made in a few minutes. Seat and washer are both renewable—for a few cents. There is no wear on the main body casting, and this means Chicago Faucets will outlast the building.

Now! PANELIZED TIMBER

for INSULATION

Timber—hardy, Northern Timber—converted into panels that are easy to handle, easy to saw, easy to apply and nearly a quarter-inch thick! This is Cornell Panelized Timber—the improved vermin-proof, crack-proof insulating material developed by a pioneer in the industry. When applied to walls or ceilings Cornell Panelized Timber is a fortress against the bitterest of cold—a barrier that heat can scarcely penetrate. Investigate this perfected new product now. Ask your lumber dealer about Cornell Panelized Timber and write to us for literature and free samples.

for BEAUTY

Do not confuse Cornell Panelized Timber with ordinary wall and insulating materials. Cornell Panelized Timber has the color of clean new lumber—a surface as smooth a. polished wood. Decoration may be applied directly to it. Plastering is not necessary. Artistic frieze or border designs are easily stenciled on it. Modern paneling effects are easily applied to it. Write for free booklet showing the remarkable decorative possibilities of Cornell Panelized Timber.

for ECONOMY

Ask your lumber dealer to show you how, in Cornell Panelized Timber, insulation and beauty are now combined with economy. Cornell Panelized Timber costs substantially less than other types of wall materials. It costs less to apply Cornell Panelized Timber. Add to this the saving in decorating costs and you have genuine economy—savings that justify your thorough investigation of Cornell Panelized Timber before you invest in any insulating or wall material.

SYNOPSIS.

RICHARD MORTIMER and his friend John Smith are army officers graduated from West Point. Aaron Rath, also a West Pointer, is in the same regiment. The latter is at daggers' points with Richard, their enmity being of long standing. Years before Richard had thrashed Rath for a brutal assault on a chauffeur, Tony Amazzi.

Later Rath finds himself the rejected suitor of Patricia Marsden, to whom Richard becomes engaged after they have been kept apart through a misunderstanding brought about by Rath.

America enters the world war. Richard is severely wounded in an act of treason and is nursed back to health by Patricia, a Red Cross volunteer. John is reported "Missing, believed killed."

The scene is now laid behind the German lines, where Richard has gone in an attempt to blow up the bridge at Conflans. Under cover of darkness Richard has succeeded in gaining admission to a sand bag covered hut where explosives are kept.

INSTALLMENT XIV.

A MISSION ACCOMPLISHED.

THE entry of the German officer was unexpected, and Richard, who had risen to his feet, could not crouch again behind the boxes. Instinctively he flattened himself against the wall. He scarcely dared to breathe lest the movement should betray him. The officer passed right by him, near enough for Richard to have touched him with outstretched hand. The officer stopped for a few moments, turning over a sheaf of papers in a steel box, to which he carried the key. Then, apparently, he found what he sought. Examining a paper, he compared it with the one in his hand. Obviously relieved, he placed the papers in his pocket and turned to depart.

As he did so the beam from his flashlight fell on the tense form of Richard. There was a pause, during which the German stared at him, evidently unable to trust his senses. But the cry he was about to utter never left his lips, for Richard had sprung at him in that interval, stifling him with a headlock crossed over his mouth. Silently, the two men fought. They fought in darkness, for the flashlight lay on the floor, where it shed its useless triangle of light.

The German was a powerful man, and he had the advantage of being able to use both hands, for Richard dared not release his hold lest the other should call for help. Richard, in consequence, found himself gradually forced to give way, step by step. He contested every inch, but the other bore him backwards. Richard tripped over a box and fell against a work bench in the corner of the hut, pulling his adversary with him. The sharp edged planking dug painfully into Richard's back. It was only by superhuman effort that he managed to stifle a cry of pain.

In sheer desperation Richard ceased actively to resist. He twisted slightly always to avert the pressure. Clinging desperately to his hold with one arm, he groped with the other hand for a weapon. His fingers closed on a monkey wrench. The next moment the German lay limp at his feet.

Richard wiped the perspiration from his brow. Then he stole to the door, to see if the scuffle had attracted attention. All was quiet. The sentry still lounged about the inclosure. Returning, he began to strip the officer of his coat, boots, and his cap.

Richard searched through the pockets of the German and found the papers that seemed so important.

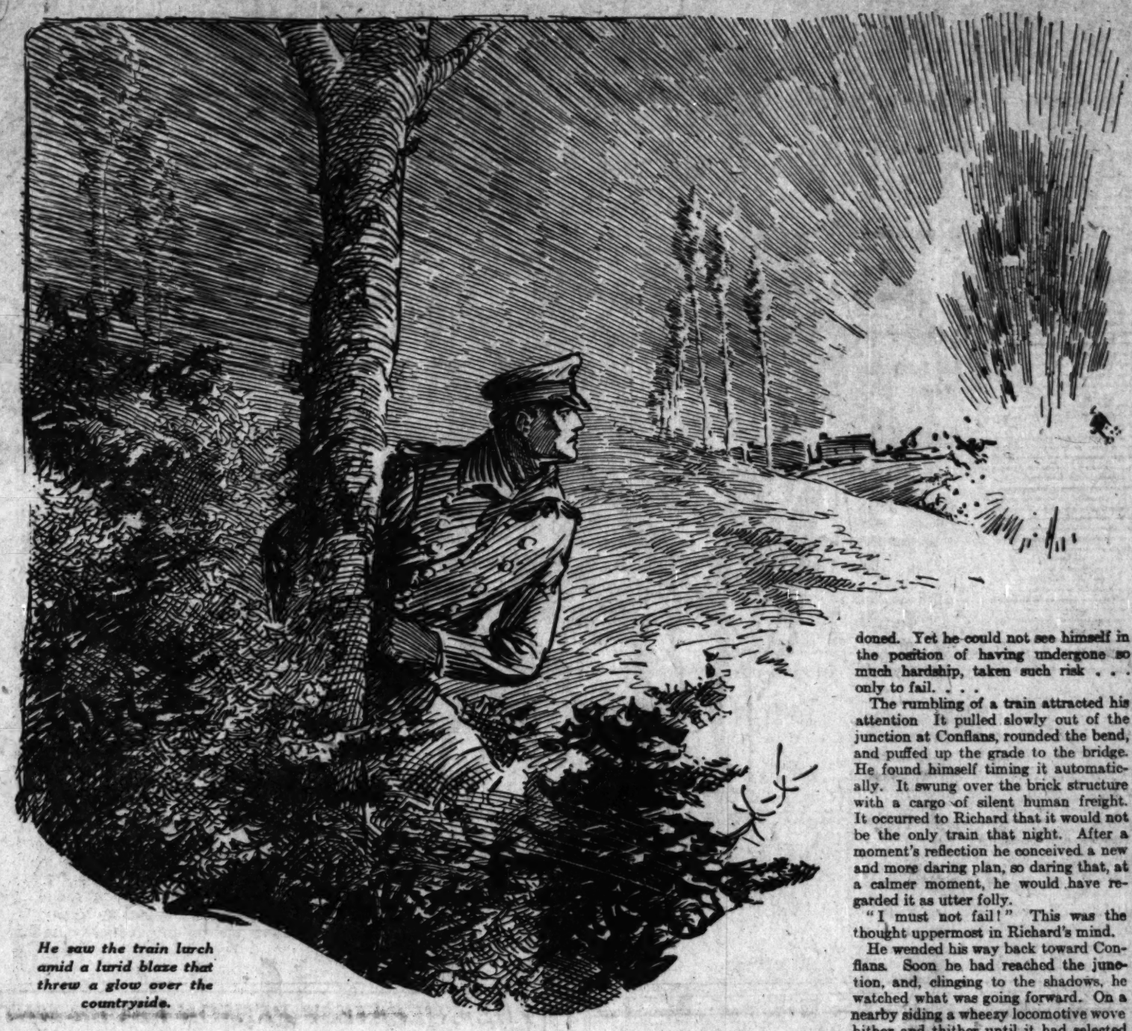
"I'll take these, too, if you don't mind," he said to the prostrate feet. Then Richard looked about and secured a length of rope.

"Sorry to inconvenience you, but I'll have to tie you up. I can't risk an alarm before morning." So saying, he trussed the other up in such a fashion that he would be unable to extricate himself or cry out.

Donning the officer's coat, cap, and boots, he passed by the unsuspecting sentry, returning the salute of the latter, who little thought of the weight of explosives that coat concealed. Out of sight, Richard glanced at his watch.

"Ten o'clock," he muttered. "That gives me about seven hours."

Outside the town, he reconnoitered his position. Carefully he made his way toward the bridge. On one side of the structure a wooden stage had been erected, just wide enough for a man to pass. At intervals the sentries at either end would patrol the staging until they met in the center. Here they would converse for a minute and return to their respective banks. To Richard the scene was disconcerting. He had not counted that the structure would have been so closely guarded.



He saw the train lurch amid a lurid blaze that threw a glow over the countryside.

Cautiously, he worked his way up to the side of the bridge and examined the brick work. He looked closely for some crack in the mortar, anything that would serve as a point from which to break the brickwork loose. But here again he found difficulties. He could not obtain a foothold. His hands were torn and bleeding from clinging to the coping. There was no room in which he could work with any freedom or certainty.

He felt baffled and disappointed. The project would have to be abandoned. Yet he could not see himself in the position of having undergone so much hardship, taken such risk . . . only to fail. . . .

The rumbling of a train attracted his attention It pulled slowly out of the junction at Conflans, rounded the bend, and puffed up the grade to the bridge. He found himself timing it automatically. It swung over the brick structure with a cargo of silent human freight. It occurred to Richard that it would not be the only train that night. After a moment's reflection he conceived a new and more daring plan, so daring that, at a calmer moment, he would have regarded it as utter folly.

"I must not fail!" This was the thought uppermost in Richard's mind.

He wended his way back toward Conflans. Soon he had reached the junction, and, clinging to the shadows, he watched what was going forward. On a nearby siding a wheezy locomotive wove hither and thither until it had selected some half dozen empty box cars. It drew the cars into the junction, which later became the scene of feverish activity. Men began to load the train with boxes—small boxes, long boxes. Some of these boxes had rope handles that took two men to carry. Others were more unwieldy and of great weight. Other cars, on which heavy guns were loaded, were coupled to the train.

Richard watched these operations with a deepening interest. He knew just what was in those boxes. The long, heavy ones contained large caliber shells. The smaller ones contained shells of lesser size. Each kind was sorted out and placed in its own car. But what held Richard's fascinated gaze the most was the disposition of the square boxes. In them he could envisage neat piles of brass cylinders.

"Detonators," he thought. "Enough to blow up a dozen bridges."

He wondered how long it would take the Germans to finish loading the train. He cursed them for their slowness. Other trains rumbled in and out of the station.

Down the track a short distance was a tank where each engine stopped for water. From this point to the bridge Richard timed a half dozen trains. "They travel pretty slow," he commented, "but the difference is almost negligible."

The loading had proceeded apace. Richard saw officers lock the doors of the box cars and place a seal on them. The station once more resumed its quiet aspect.

In a clump of bushes opposite the water tank Richard waited, expectantly, nervously, for the signal that would set the ammunition train in motion. But an hour passed with no sign of further activity. Richard looked at his watch.

"Four o'clock," he muttered. "Damn 'em! Won't they ever get started?"

However, the hour of waiting had given Richard sufficient time to prepare his explosive charge of dynamite and guncotton. To the cutting of the fuse he gave particular attention. It must be timed just right. Again and again he measured it, fearful lest he should make a miscalculation.

"As near as I can figure," he thought, "it'll take fifteen seconds for the train to reach the bridge from the bend in the track."

The stentorious puffing of two locomotives was the signal which Richard had awaited. Slowly out of the junction the train rolled up the sidetrack toward the water tank. Richard watched, every muscle taut, every nerve afire with suppressed excitement. At the switch the train stopped.

He knew that at most the time he had at his disposal was the length of time it would take to switch the train on to the main track. If he were to gain admittance to the car he would have to work fast. Along the side of the train he ran to the car in which he had seen the square boxes stored. It was but the work of a moment to snap the wire that fastened the seal. The forcing of the padlock needed precious seconds for its accomplishment. The handspike which Richard brought from the hut proved invaluable here. He tugged and pulled at the door until it opened enough to enable him to squeeze inside. Once within the car, he closed the door, and was nearly jolted off his feet as the engines jerked the train forward on to the other track.

Before the train was well under way Richard had accomplished his work. The placing of the charge required no further effort than to lay it beside the boxes containing the high explosives.

He opened the door again and peered out. His eyes had become accustomed to the pitchy blackness inside the car. By comparison the night seemed quite clear. As he waited, with unlighted matches held in one hand and in his other the free end of the fuse, he wondered why he had not been seen.

"Luck!" he thought, "sheer luck!"

The cracking of wheels at last announced that the engines were rounding the bend. Then he coolly lit the fuse and jumped down into the darkness. He heard a shout from a lookout on the train, but, without stopping, he ran for dear life. He halted in the shelter of a copse, and from this vantage point watched the result of his labors. A bewildered lookout man had started to walk along the roof of the train as it swung on to the bridge.

Then a veritable roar went up, a noise that almost deafened Richard. He saw the train lurch amid a lurid blaze that threw a glow over the countryside. He had a fleeting glimpse of flying masonry, of a gun toppling over the edge of the ruined bridge. Then the blaze settled down to a steady glow as the cars that had not fallen into the stream burned steadily to ashes. It had all gone forward without a break.

The first streaks of dawn appeared in the sky, and Richard turned his eyes westward. He saw the red flares ascending and descending in curving arcs. From the distance came the thunder of concentrated artillery.

"The flares won't do 'em any good," thought Richard. "It'll be hours before they get that bridge fixed up enough to carry reenforcements. And by that time it'll be too late."

And his face glowed with the satisfaction of having completed a useful day's work.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS by Sara Moore

LOVE'S LABOR——

Because I love you, Dub, more than myself,
Up to divorce, and then, perhaps, beyond—
I strive each day to keep you for my own
And bind you closer with a new found bond
And since a gentleman prefers the monde,
For this day's fancy, with a coif of gold
I'll glitter, too. Nor hesitate to change
To other colors when to this you're cold.
When I am bleached, perhaps, a while, you'll scold.
But research shows how easily you're conned.
I have been brown-haired, black, and Titian, too,
And now—so-help-me-bob, I'll be a blonde.
Stop Press. Extra.
Alas! Alack! An hour too late I find
That you, for whom I dyed, are color blind.

PRELUDE.

Wobble your hips and fling high your knees,
Pound for drinks when the waiters tarry,
Rouge the soft lips that a kiss would freeze.
All too soon does a flapper marry.

Cooking, and washing, and having kids,
Fate's decree can no woman parry,
Drowning in jazz as you hit the skids.
All too soon does a flapper marry.

Girls must be girls—what's an oat or two?
Each in her turn Life's load must carry.
"Better or worse" and you know—you're through.
All too soon does a flapper marry.

"AREN'T WE—ALL?"

["The long-haired, blue-nosed reformers who go about shouting, 'I thank God I am not as other men,' have narrow, one track minds, and I defy you or any one else to make them admit they are wrong about anything."—From a letter in Vox Pop.]

To one who knocks about the map
This notion comes as quaint,
That narrow-mindedness should be
Peculiar to the saint.

Hast watched a sinner with a thirst
Set out his need to slack?
Would you not say his was a mind
Upon a single track?

And, as a sign of stubbornness,
The "blue-nose" must give way
Before the piquant powdered one
Described as retroussé.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

EVERY woman will include in her spring wardrobe several of these smart two piece frocks, and pattern No. 647 is one of the latest designs. If she is straight and slight they are especially becoming and are suitable for one of the silk crepes, the fine wool jersey, tricot poplin, or kasha. The blouse and skirt may be made of the same material and color, or two may be combined with excellent effect. Brown and beige, two shades of green or blue, or a plain color for the blouse and one of the small checks for the skirt are all of them good.

The plain skirt is made with a deep inverted plait in the center front. This gives the necessary fullness, and yet the straight effect is not tampered with.

The long overblouse is good looking with the slight side fullness that gives the bloused effect and the slashed opening at the neck buttoned to meet the high standing collar. The sleeves are full length, close fitting, and finished at the wrists with shaped cuffs.

After the slashes have been cut in the blouse front and back, gather the lower edge of each piece, beginning with a quarter inch wide seam at the outer edge, and tanning it off to as narrow a seam as possible at the other end. Pull the gathers up and "lay" them carefully, then baste in a right side seam to the upper slashed edge. After this has been stitched take a piece of the material or silk bias binding of the same shade and cut it enough longer than the seam to turn in at both ends. Then baste it over the seam on the wrong side and stitch close to the edge all around. Fasten your threads and take out the bastings, then use a piece of the dress material on the right side and stitch over the seam just as you did on the wrong. Narrow tie strings or sashes made of the dress material are attached and tied in bows on each side of the blouse.

The slashed opening in the front at the neck may have the edges bound or narrow faced and extension hems may be set on—and this last mentioned manner of finishing will be the better way.

Young girls never look sweeter than when dressed in some one of the lovely wash materials; and a dress made by pattern No. 648, choosing gingham, cotton broadcloth, or one of the mercerized cotton poplins, will be just the thing for school wear. The square cut at the neck proclaims this one of the newest designs, and this dress combines two materials with good effect.

Gingham and white linen are the materials used in the dress shown, and an unusual feature is shown in the panel, which is left entirely free. The narrow belt being joined to each side of the panel holds it in place, and at the same time confines the fullness properly at the sides and across the back. There is a slashed opening in the panel through which a tie is slipped. This may be of velvet or satin ribbon, matching one of the colors in the plaid.

If a warmer dress is needed for some of the cold days yet in store, why not choose one of the fine French flannels with a striped design?

Pattern No. 649 is for one of those becoming one piece dresses that every woman likes. Crêpe de chine, satin back crêpe, or any desired material will make up attractively, and any woman who sews can make it easily. The directions with the pattern show exactly how each piece is to be joined. But always verify the length measure; also the length of the sleeve. The front of the dress is cut in a deep U, and filled in with a vestee that gives the effect of a square neck. The long sleeves are gathered into fitted bands and broad satin ribbon is used for the crushed sash or belt, although the dress material can be used, if preferred.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Result of Boasting.

Hubby—I'm earning enough to support two like you.

Wife—Very well, then. Mother will come to live with us. F. H. K.

A Flat Failure.

Just after we were married my husband and I were living in a small apartment.

One day I said to hubby: "Jim, if we have to live in this flat any longer it'll wreck our happiness."

Hubby said: "O, didn't you know that marriage is often a flat failure?" MRS. J. P.

A Long, Long Time.

We were celebrating a couple's silver wedding when the wife said: "My, but twenty-five years is a long time to be married to the same man!"

To which the husband replied: "But not half as long as it is to live with the same woman twenty-five years!" MRS. M. C.

Pocket Picker.

Wife—John, did you mail those letters I gave you three days ago?

John—Why, I, I, guess so; I'm sure I did.

Wife—That's queer, for I found them all in your room this morning.

John—In which pocket were they? MRS. H. L. M.

Efficiency.

We were at a friend's for dinner and during the conversation the friend spoke several times about the efficiency of wives, when John remarked, "My wife is very efficient in keeping my pockets in order." MRS. H. L. M.

The Reason for Dad's Consent.

He—If I'd known you were so extravagant I would never have married you.

She—If I hadn't been, father would never have let you. D. E. B.

Changes.

My husband and I had been quarreling and just about all the mutual shortcomings had been brought to light. I was reduced to the weeping stage, but hubby still maintained his granite exterior.

Said I, sniffing: "You never get home early any more, and you used to be crazy to come home."

"Yeh," said he, "and now I'd be crazy if I did come home!" MRS. G. S.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Using a Nearby Phone.

A number of years ago when I was in the grocery business in a city in northern Indiana, a man who was running a small tailor shop adjoining my store came into my place one day, picked up one of my sales slips, folded it up, and put it into his pocket, and went out.

A few days afterwards I chanced to be in his place of business and noticed a stock of business cards he had just gotten from the printer. I picked one of them up and observed my telephone number under his name. Then I recalled how he had said to me a short time previously: "If any one should ask for me on your phone please let me know at once." H. F. L.

Returning the Shoe Laces.

I am a retail shoe merchant. About a year ago a well to do farmer came into my store and bought a pair of shoe laces. A few days ago he came in again with the same laces and placed them on the counter, saying, "I bought these here some time ago and have never used them. I am leaving the farm and I won't have use for them and want to know if you'll take them back and give me my money."

I thought, "Well, this is sure worth a dime," so I said "Certainly," and I returned his dime.

Guess that's going some. A. H. A.

Imposing on Her Kindness.

When I was first married we had a house much larger than our needs, so we rented three rooms to a man, his wife and 3 year old boy. The wife was always having company or visiting some one. I felt sorry for the youngster and offered to keep him on one or two occasions. This spoiled her. After that when she went visiting she would open my door, set the little fellow in, shut the door, and go on her way. Sometimes it would be 10 o'clock at night when she called for him.

This grew tiresome, so one morning when she was having company and brought him over I took the child home, shut the door, and walked away.

She told every one who would listen to her what a mean neighbor I was. MRS. M. M.

It Would Be 10 Cents.

The cheekiest person I have ever met is a neighbor whose daughter used to drive her car to work at the same time my sister went to work. The daughter habitually waved as she rode past my sister walking or waiting for the street car.

One day our neighbor suggested to my sister that her daughter could just as well take sister to work every day in her auto. My sister replied that it might be too much trouble.

"O, no," was the answer, "it would be no trouble at all. And you could pay her the 10 cents you pay for street car fare."

Needless to say, my sister did not accept the offer. N. S.

Holding Out for a Penny.

Our neighbors across the street own a business in which coins of small amounts are needed to make change for customers. Knowing that our little boy has a bank in which he saves pennies, the woman came over and asked if we would give her fifty pennies for a fifty cent piece. After counting the pennies we found there were only forty-nine, so we searched the house for one but were unable to find it.

Our neighbor took her fifty cent piece and left, saying, "Isn't it too bad you can't find one more penny?" A. B.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply, please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Wise Young Woman.

"Dear Doris Blake: How many times a week should an engaged couple see each other? I am engaged and I am perfectly content to see my fiancé on Wednesday and Saturday, but he thinks that is not often enough. But I believe there is such a thing as seeing too much of a person [even though engaged] and eventually becoming bored. Kindly advise. M. R."

Compromise and make it three times a week, M. R. You're right in feeling you can see too much of each other. By keeping up with your chums and having other interests you'll be more entertaining. When always together you have no experiences to relate and little to talk about.

He's a Stranger.

"My dear Miss Blake: For the last two months I have occasionally seen a charming young woman on the train and am anxious to meet her. As an introduction is impossible, I wish you could advise me how I could form an acquaintance with her without offending her. ANKSHUS."

You are a stranger and any attempt to force an acquaintance would be resented by her, Ankshus. Unfortunate for you, but, nevertheless, true.

Tell Him Why.

"Dear Doris Blake: I am in love with a boy who is always asking me to go out with him. I have to say no, because I am not allowed out with the boys. He says I am always throwing him down. What can I do? "LONESOME."

Tell him frankly you're not permitted to accept invitations from boys, otherwise you'd be glad to accept, Lonesome.

A Friend in Need

By Sally Joy Brown.

I want to be the medium through which a friend in need and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has outgrown its usefulness that will cause some less fortunate one happy and grateful gladly give it if you know how and about it. Write to me and I shall glad to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper. This information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. CONCERTED ACTION CAN WORK WONDERS.

A SHORT time ago we heard of an expectant mother whose husband had just met with an accident and had been taken to a hospital. Illness was certain to eat up what they had laid aside to prepare the new baby; the husband's earnings were cut off, and they didn't know which way to turn. Worst of all, the accumulation of trouble was sure to keep them from reducing the expenses through furnishing a home of their own and getting out of their furnished rooms.

That was a month ago. A few days ago we received the following letter, telling from a new three room home, of showing what a little thoughtfulness can do to banish hardship and Both my husband and our new daughter are home now, and our expectant and wonder are calmed down, and I can write and tell what splendid things happened to us. Soon after I wrote to you three women gave me enough to furnish a nice bedroom. Now we got everything for baby, and stove and kitchen table, and I hardly knew what to do I was so happy.

I found a three room place at nearly half what we were paying and got moved in beautifully before the baby came. Then I got more things, and my husband could hardly believe his eyes when he got home and saw all that had happened. We are writing now to thank everybody, but I like to let you know how much it gave us, and how we know we are going to get along splendidly and are being helped through our time of need.

Now you see what we can do by ourselves a little when it's needed. It was all a case of one friend helping the family. One person gave one thing, another gave something else, and thereby showed them what a difference it could have made in the lives of this family. Wasn't that result worth while? And haven't you something you could give, that will help us do the same for other families next week? Look over the needs below—think over what you can give—and then won't you let me know what you can do?

Ambitious.

"I am trying to get 'Van Sant's Shorthand Manual' for a young married woman who would like to study but can't afford to attend college.

"MRS. N. B."

"If you've mastered the system, you might give this ambitious woman an opportunity to do likewise by giving her your textbook. I know she'd appreciate it.

If You Live in the Country.

"I have a chicken brooder and would like to give to someone living in the country. If you have any calls please let me know. MRS. G."

These articles should be of great use to some farmer or any one interested in raising chickens. If you can make use of them, write to us immediately.

Offers Portieres.

"I have a pair of heavy portières which a housewife may be able to make use of. They may be had by calling at my home. MRS. C. H."

These may be used for decorative screens or to cover drafty doorways. Some one should be able to make good use of them.

Have You a Trunk to Give?

"Mrs. F. is an elderly woman living with her invalid daughter. They have no means of support and until they have been staying with friends. Now they must move and have nothing to put their few belongings in. Do you think one of your readers would have a trunk to give them? They also need clothing, size 38. L. W."

It is really a small request to make and I know there are any number of you who could fill it. Isn't there a trunk in your storeroom for Mrs. F.?

Can't Afford Party Dress.

"I have been invited to a formal party, but I can't afford to buy a dress. We have no father and I work to support my mother and four little ones. I would greatly appreciate a party dress, size 16 or 18. F. W."

Now you an evening dress you no longer care for which this young lady may have? You could make the girl happy for her

Radio Would Be a Godsend.

"The three K. children are eager to own a victrola or a radio. Their mother and mother are both in poor health and we are supporting the family. The children live in a neighborhood where it is not safe for them to be out of the house often. A phonograph or radio would give them many happy hours. F. N."

Are you getting a new radio or victrola? Why don't you give the one to this family? The children would enjoy it so much.

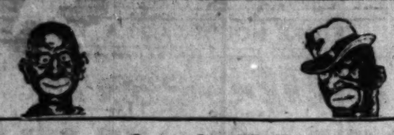
SAM 'N' HENRY By Correll & Gosden



Sam 'n' Henry

Since the two friends—cautious, captious Henry and gullible Sam—wandered up from Birmingham last year, millions of radio fans have enjoyed listening to these colored boys broadcast from The Chicago Tribune radio station W-G-N.

This section will contain an article every Sunday by these famous entertainers. Start the first one here!

The two boys are working as day laborers on a building now under construction in the Chicago loop district.

Noon whistle blows.

Sam—Henry, de minute dey blow dat whistle you drop jus' what you got hold of, no mattah what you'h carryin'. Don' drop dat boa'd down like dat when I got hol' of it. Lay de boa'd down easy—you goin' break my hand off heah.

Henry—Don' ahgue wid me—let's go down on de sidewalk and staht eatin'.

Henry—Where you goin' now—where you goin' now?

Sam (starting down)—I'se goin' down heah—I done lef' mah dinner pail down at dat little house.

Henry—You de crazeest boy I evah seed. If you find yo' dinnah pail down dere, you is goin' some.

Sam—Heah 'tis—right in dis little house heah. Come heah, go to de door wid me. Jes' inside dis door heah, to de lef'.

Henry—Where'bouts yo' mean?

Sam—Lord, Henry, dat thing done gone! (To man standing near)—Mistah, is you seen my lunch pail?

Man—Well, don't tell me your troubles—tell it to the marines.

Sam—who is de marines?

Man—Get out of here!

Sam—Look heah, Henry—I done lost my money, too.

Henry—Now, cahm yo'self—cahm yo'self—what is de trouble?

Sam—Look heah, Henry—I done tore my pocket open. You know when I caught myself on de nail dis mornin'? I done lost my money, Henry.

Henry—Now, wait a minute—wait a minute—you losin' ev'ything you got. You bettah count yo' fingahs on both han's an' see if you got all yo' fingahs.

Sam—What I goin' do, Henry?

Henry (as he starts eating his lunch)—Don' worry me now, while I'se eatin' dese heah ham san'wiches. You know, I ain't got but a short time to eat dese.

Sam—I gotta git sompin' to eat heah. I'se hungry. Henry, dere's a pawnshop 'cross de street dere—come on, go over dere wid me. I gonna put my watch in hock—I gotta have some money.

Henry—What kin' o' watch is dat you got?

Sam—Dis is a railroad watch.

Henry—Well, come on—let's go over dere, den. (They start across the street.) Come on—hurry up.

Sam (opening door)—Come in heah wid me, den, Henry—come on in dis heah door.

Henry (as they enter)—Take off yo' hat now when you talk to de gent'man—take off yo' hat.

"Heah 'tis, Mistah. Dat's a good watch, too."

Pawnbroker—Vat iss it?

Sam—Mistah, my name is Sam Smith. I wanna pawn dis heah watch. How much yo' gimme on dis heah watch till Sat'day?

Pawnbroker—Vat kind of watch iss it?

Sam—Dis is a gold watch.

Pawnbroker—Vell—let me see it.

Henry—Take de watch off dat rope—take de watch off dat rope—untie de watch.

Pawnbroker (examining watch)—A-a-ah, dat watch iss in very bad condition. I can only giff you a dollar on it.

Pawnbroker—Vell—I'll tell you vat I'll do. You look like a goot boy—I'll give you two dollars.

Sam—Mistah, can't I git mo' dan two dollahs?

Henry—Don' ahgue wit de gent'man—don' ahgue wid de gent'man.

Sam—Thank yo', sah, Mistah.

SAM (as they leave)—Let's go over dere now and see how much time we got. I wantta go up to de cornah dere and git myself some san'wiches.

Henry (as they arrive at the building where they are working)—Ask dat gent'man dere how much mo' time we got.

Sam (to man)—Mistah, how much mo' time we got fo' lunch?

Man—O, ten or fifteen minutes—something like that.

Sam—Thank yo', sah. (To Henry) Henry, come on—walk up to de cornah wid me to git some san'wiches.

"Give de man de two dollahs."

(As they start away an insurance agent approaches them. This agent is of the street faker type.)

Agent—Just a minute—just a minute—what's your name?

Sam—You talkin' to me, Mistah? My name is Sam Smith.

Agent—You're just the fellow I'm looking for—you're working on this building, aren't you?

Sam—Yassah, I'se workin' on de buildin'.

Agent—You're the fellow, all right. Now—the Indefinite Life Insurance company sent me here to see you.

Sam—Who sent you heah?

Agent—The Indefinite Life Insurance company of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Sam—What dey want, Mistah—what dey want?

Agent—Well, here's the proposition. You are one of the few men in Chicago who are not protected, and, according to the laws of the United States, every workman in district 75 should be protected against injury. Do you realize what it would mean if one of those beams should fall through the building here and hit you? Do you realize what it would mean if you should step on a nail and run it through your foot and blood poison set in? Do you realize what it would mean if somebody should accidentally hit you in the head with a hammer? What protection do you have? You can't answer that question, can you? But I'll answer it. You have no protection. Picture yourself lying in bed with a broken head, and probably one leg off, without a dime—at the mercy of charity—your stomach hungry for food. That is the most terrible predicament any human being could be in.

Agent—Now, then—I have a policy here—in case of death we give your nearest relative $500 cash immediately upon your death. But the clause of our policy which should interest you most is this clause right here. Should you lose one eye and one leg, you get $250. Should you lose both eyes and both legs, you get $300. Should you lose both eyes, both legs, and one arm, you get $350—and, should this condition cause you to die, the nearest relatives gets the difference between the amount paid you and $500. In the United States alone, during the year of 1925, we paid out over $200,000 to men who held our policies. This is one of the most reasonable and equitable policies of its kind in existence. The premium is only ten cents a week. Now, I only have a short time and the Indefinite Life Insurance company has only a limited number of these policies. Now, I'm going to write your name on this one because I know you want it.

Agent—It's the greatest buy in America today.

Sam—Henry, what you think 'bout dis heah thing?

Henry—You got money. Go on—buy de thing.

Sam—Well, Mistah, I take one of 'em. Put my name down on it.

Agent—Ah—that's fine. Sam Smith—now, how old are you?

Sam—I'se thirty-two.

Agent (filling in policy)—Thirty-two. And what is your address?

Sam—General delivery.

Agent—All right, here you are—here's your certificate. The first premium is two dollars and after that it's ten cents a week.

Sam—Two dollahs?

Agent—That's the first premium. You understand that, of course?

Sam—Henry—do you know what dat means?

Sam—I pays you two dollahs now—is dat it, Mistah?

Agent—That's the idea. You give me two dollars now and then only ten cents a week after that.

Henry—Give de gent'man de two dollahs.

Agent (turning to Henry)—What's your name?

Henry—My name's Henry Johnson.

Henry—Nosah, Mistah, don' bothah 'bout me. I'se protected.

Agent—Do you carry insurance?

Henry—Yessah, I carries a lot o' insurance.

Sam (to agent)—Mistah, lemme ask yo' one question. Where do I collect dis heah money in case sompin' happens to me?

Agent—Why, the money is brought to you. Your labor council immediately notifies us of your accident and we rush to your bedside with the cash. (As he starts to leave) Well, boys, I'm glad to have seen you. Sam, I know you'll feel better working now, knowing that you are fully protected by the Indefinite Life Insurance company. (Leaving) so long, boys.

(Whistle on building blows.)

Sam—Henry, what's dat I heah?

Henry—You know what dat is—dat means we gotta git back to work.

Sam—Henry, I ain't had nothin' to eat.

Henry—You ain't got time to ahgue now—git up on dere and git hol' o' dem boa'ds.

Sam—Henry—I gotta have sompin' to eat—and I ain't got a cent.

Henry—An' you can read dat sign up dere on de house—"No money advances befo' Sat'day."

Sam—What mus' I do, Henry—what I goin' do—I gotta have some money?

Henry—Come on. Heah—git to work—you got a long day befo' yo'. Wid all dese heah things flyin' 'roun' yo' head, sompin' might happen to yo' befo' de day's ovah an' you kin collect from dat Indefinite Insurance company.

I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

J. I. H.: THE HAIRS WHICH come out when you brush your hair are dead hairs and should be removed. If you brush the hair regularly every night for five or ten minutes new hair will soon replace the dead ones. Brushing stimulates the roots and is cleansing.

MISS Y. R.: YOU MAY DRINK water with your meals if you do not use it to wash down the food. When it is taken while food is in the mouth the chances are the food will be improperly chewed and not sufficiently mixed with saliva, which contains ferments for the digestion of starches and sugars, resulting in indigestion.

MISS E. L.: PAINT THE BLISTered heel with collodion to protect it from the air and the friction of the shoe and stocking. To prevent blisters, paste a strip of suede or velvet inside the back of the shoe, or rub a little soap on the stocking.

MRS. F. J. K.: THE JUICE OF A lemon is excellent for removing fruit and vegetable stains from the hands. Apply it immediately after preparing them. Several times a day massage equal parts of camphor and glycerine into the hands. It softens and whitens them.

DISCOURAGED: YOUR POOR health is responsible for the condition of your hair. You need building up. Eat plenty of nourishing foods, drink milk daily, spend as much time in the open air as possible and get plenty of sleep. The hair gets its sustenance from the blood, and as the condition of your blood improves you will note the improvement in your hair. Wash it every week and do not neglect the daily brushing.

I. M. L.: FOR LIGHT FRECKLES this formula is effective: Lactic acid, 4 ounces; glycerin, 2 ounces; rosewater, 1 ounce. Treat stubborn freckles with Nunci's paste made as follows: Oxychloride of bismuth, one dram; calomel, one-sixth grain; peroxide of hydrogen, one dram; lanolin and vaseline, four ounces each. Protect your face from the sun and wind by rubbing cold cream into the skin and dusting with powder.

P. I. C.: I CANNOT COMMENT ON the article referred to as it is contrary to the rules of this department to pass comments on any products. My advice would be to have dye applied to the hair by an expert, and not attempt doing it yourself. It takes an experienced hand to give satisfactory results.

M. G. W.: APPLIANCES TO PROtect bunions relieve the irritation. Buy shoes with a straight last and have them properly fitted. A felt pad placed between the great toe and the next toe helps maintain the straight line, although care must be taken not to deform the other toes. The appliances may be obtained at a shoe store.

Home-Made, but Effective
Coughs In a Hurry
A family supply of dependable medicine. Easily made and saves about $5.
If you have a severe cough or chest cold, soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness or difficult breathing, or if your child coughs up at night with a hoarse croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses instead of sugar syrup, if you prefer. This recipe makes a pint of the most remarkable cough remedy you ever tasted, and in spite of its low cost it can be depended upon to give prompt and lasting relief.
You can feel this take hold of your cough instantly. It loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes the throat tickle, and soothes and heals the irritated membranes of the throat and bronchial tubes with splendid efficiency and promptness that is really astonishing.
Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract and palatable syrup, which is probably the best known means of overcoming coughs, throat and chest colds.
There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money will be promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.
PINEX for Coughs
COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR
Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxurious. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur Compound at home is the recipe at home though, is troublesome. A quicker way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, is known as Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur Compound and can be obtained at all drug stores for about 75 cents a bottle.
While gray faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and lustriant and you appear years younger.

MAKING THE HIP LINES GRACEFUL

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—The less helpless, the more hipless, and the less hipless, the more helpless.

Try that toast with your hip reducing exercises. There's more truth in it than appears at first glance. When women were helpless, or to be more correct, played at being helpless, a couple of heavy hips wouldn't stop a fainting fit if the scene required it. And the less weight you allow to accumulate around hip and waist line, the more independently efficient you are.

In a week I get more requests for hip reducing exercises than requests for any other local reducing help. Which is fair enough, for weight never troubles a woman until she slants or feels that "spread" around the middle of the body. I'm always glad to respond quickly with the preventive measures, for here's where a stitch in time saves the proverbial nine (pounds in this case), the stitch being the slight jarring of long unused muscles out of their fat-inviting apathy.

If the hips are quite heavily padded, diet must accompany the exercise program. But if they are just beginning to lose that lovely contour of the perfect young, uncorseted figure you can recover the lithe grace with exercise alone. I will give you a few good ones to work on, with the suggestion that those who are hip-unconscious, so to speak, adopt them for a five minute daily workout, so they never will be confronted with the job of pruning pounds from the vicinity of waist and hip.

First, I'd like to recall the fact that good posture will serve a silhouette beautifully. If the body is held as tall as possible, the hips are kept in better line, and the center of the body front, back, and sides naturally looks leaner.

First—Lie on your back on the floor, hands at sides. Stretch the body full limit from head to foot by drawing the left hand up over the head and extending the right foot at the same time and stretching each member to the fullest capacity. Then reverse, stretching the right arm and left foot simultaneously.

Second—In the same recumbent position put the hands on the hips and stretch both feet as far forward as they will go, then proceed to raise them, keeping the toes stretched to the limit. Raise them slowly, then drop them slowly, stretching during the process of returning the heels to the floor. Rest a couple of minutes before doing the next exercise.

Third—Do a bicycle movement with each leg alternately. Begin slowly and increase the speed of the bicycle turns.

Fourth—Lying on the back with the hands extended over the head, come forward and try to touch the toes with the fingertips.

Five—Now take a standing position. Stand in the doorway, or under the center dome light, or if you choose, up against the wall. Push the arms easily upward and rise on the toes as high as possible, reaching the arms up as far as you can, as if trying to get at an object from a high place. Then let the arms sink to the sides and the heels to come back to the floor after retaining, as long as possible, the sensation of extension.

Six—Stand with the feet together, hands clasped over the head. Bend from side to side as far as you can without moving the lower part of the body.

Seven—Keep the knees straight, arms extended full length, feet firmly on the ground; twist the trunk to the right five times, then to the left five times.

Eight—Raise arms over head; bend the trunk forward, and swing the arms downward between the legs, as in 8-A. Raise the trunk and bend backward, swinging the arms high up over the head again. Do this five times moderately fast. Then spread the feet apart, as in 8-B, and instead of bringing the arms down between the legs with the right hand touch the toe of the left foot five times. Then with the left hand touch the toe of the right foot five times. When you can touch the toe easily, try touching the ground on a line with the heel, which involves greater waist twisting.

Careless Washing Spoils the Hair
The simple hair styles of today make beautiful hair a necessity.
Luckily, beautiful hair is now easily obtained. It is simply a matter of shampooing.
Proper shampooing makes the hair soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and lustre, all the natural wave and color, and leaves it fresh looking, glossy and bright.
While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.
That is why discriminating women, everywhere, now use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure.
Two or three teaspoonfuls is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather which cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.
It leaves the hair soft and easy to manage and makes it fairly sparkle with new life, gloss and lustre.
You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store.
A four-ounce bottle lasts for months.

Big eyes of little folks should know this simple ripeness test
ARE your children old enough to know one color from another? If they are, they are old enough to eat bananas—and old enough to tell when this all-food fruit is thoroughly ripe and best for them to eat. Nature makes the test both easy and certain.
The signs of ripeness are all on the outside of the banana—right where great big eyes of tiny tots can see them.
There are just two things to tell your child to look for: First, nature's germ-proof seal must be a rich golden yellow from tip to tip. Then the golden skin must be generously flecked with darker brown.
Simple enough, isn't it? Yet this test is certain, and important, too. The golden, brown-flecked skin is an unmistakable sign that the banana pulp has been magically transformed in the ripening process to readily assimilated sugars. These sugars are so easy to digest that they literally melt in your mouth.
Doctors and dietitians agree that these sugars are good for children—even for infants—for they are rich, energy-producing elements. Undernourished children thrive on the health-building food of the fully ripe banana.
The bananas you buy may be green at the tips. But they will ripen as well in winter as in summer if placed in a warm room. Tell your children to watch for signs of sugar sweetness—dashes of darker brown on the golden yellow seal.

ZIP COON STORIES

BY KEMBLE

Crafty Fox Gets Caught by Judge Bear.

CRAFTY FOX came dancing down the road feeling very happy. He had on a new suit of clothes which he had stolen from old Zip Coon while he was in swimming. There was the nicest pair of white panties, a yellow vest and a nifty blue coat with big brass buttons on it. The hat he wore belonged to Brother Possum. He grabbed that while the old sleepy head was snoozing under the persimmon bush.

Brother Possum.

"Where are you going with those clothes that don't belong to you?" sang out Jimmy Jaybird.

"They belong to me now," says Crafty Fox, "because I've got them on, see? And what's on me don't come off." Then he cracked his heels together and pranced on down the road.

Jimmy Jaybird flew like the wind to Zip Coon's cabin and told him what he had just seen. My, but wasn't that old fellow mad!

"I know he took them," he sputtered. "I saw him do it. I'm going to see Judge Bear and have him arrested. They weren't my clothes. I borrowed them from Fuzzy Wildcat, and when he sees them on that old robber—say! but won't there be fun?"

And sure enough, Crafty Fox hadn't gone any distance before he ran plumb into Fuzzy himself.

"My, O my! Where did you get the swell clothes?" Fuzzy pretended to be surprised. "I had a suit just like that and I loaned it to old Zip Coon two days ago to wear to a party." Crafty Fox felt mighty foolish when he heard that.

"Well, you see—" he blurted out, "maybe they were yours, but Zip Coon sold them to me. Yes, indeed, and I gave him good money for them."

Crafty Fox Gets a Shaking Up.

JUST as he said this, who should come pounding down the road but old Judge Bear, and sitting on his back was Zip Coon. Crafty began to shake all over with fear—then he started to run.

"Hold on to him, Fuzzy!" called out Judge Bear, "don't let him get away from you." And with that Fuzzy made a grab for Crafty and they both rolled over in the road. How the dust did fly as they scratched and clawed!

When they got through Fuzzy had all the clothes peeled off of Crafty's back and was hanging on to the old sinner's tail. Just then Judge Bear came up and, making one swipe at Crafty, grabbed him by the neck and how he did shake him as he growled:

"What shall I do with him, Brother Wildcat? Just say the word."

"Make him clean them up like they were before," says Fuzzy. "I've got a washtub down at my shack and he can wash them right now."

So down to Fuzzy's place they marched, Judge Bear holding Crafty by the neck. Then they made him put on an old apron and wash those clothes until he was so tired he 'most dropped. And sitting around were all the wood animals. The bushes and trees were plumb full of birds, from Jenny Wren up to old Turkey Buzzard, and they were all whistling and calling out, "Wash Lady, Wash Lady."

"Wash Lady! Wash Lady!"

WHEN Crafty got through hanging them on the line Judge Bear gave him another shaking and told him the next time he caught him stealing he'd slam him in jail and give him nothing but raw turnips and cabbage to eat. Crafty, you know, couldn't eat either one without choking 'most to death.

When he had finished and started for home all the birds flew after him, calling as loud as they could:

"Wash Lady, Wash Lady. Can you come around next Monday and do some washing for us? If you will, we'll give you a nice dish of raw turnips and cabbage. Wash Lady! Wash Lady!"

My, O my, how old Crafty Fox did scoot!

Look at Child's Tongue if Sick, Cross, Feverish

Hurry, Mother! Give "California Fig Syrup" at once. It can't harm children and they love it

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless, "fruity laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

All recipes here have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are believed by her.

Frozen to a Finish, Instead of Frozen as a Finish, Are Some of the Most Seasonable of the Foods of February.

BY JANE EDDINGTON.

TWO hundred and twenty-five years ago a literary and learned doctor said something that has been endlessly quoted since, and often as though it were a modern saying. In substance this was that to eat what is just in season is a crime. He said this in a long poem on the "Art of Cookery," which sparkles in imitation of the Latin poet's poem on the art of poesy. This author, Dr. King, undoubtedly knew his Paris, as well as his London markets, and in that city the coming of new vegetables and fruits in winter—"Primeurs"—has for no one knows how many centuries been made much of. It is a pretty way to make life entertaining.

Mrs. Glasse, whose book is supposed to be the oldest of English cook books that is not, gives a chapter on "How to Market and the Seasons of the Year for Butcher's Meat, Poultry, Fish, Herbs, Roots, and Fruit, etc."

If we should dig into the mythology, and also into the ways of living of the people of north Europe, probably we could learn a great deal about the use of frozen foods. We already knew of one thing that they used to keep frozen for months, but it is not as exactly pleasant thing to mention when we are writing about foods fit for eating. So perhaps our frozen foods are not so new a thing in the world as they are to us, and whether they are anything to us but a passing thing it is hard to say without delving into the status of the matter. But frozen fish, winter caught, especially are among the most reasonable foods our February markets carry.

The woman who would take advantage of the economy of frozen fish should go to the most intelligent dealer she can find and be instructed. Perhaps if she can get the sort called "winter caught" she will not need as much instruction as in buying those things at the shore. There is something that appeals to the imagination in those fish caught in the lakes of the north when the temperature is forty below zero and where the fish frozen as soon as they are drawn out from under the ice. They are instantly frozen in a jacket of ice. Just what the trade situation is about them this year I have not had time to find out, but of course there is a situation.

Thawing Frozen Fish.

Though an entire fish can be put into a pail of cold water to thaw it is not the best way. They can lose flavor so, but do not lose this if left to thaw at room temperature, but if that is done they should be cooked almost or quite as soon as thawed, as they deteriorate rapidly. However, great care should be taken not to put frozen fish to cook until it has been thawed to the bone. If you want to see what this treatment is like put some lamb chops out of doors, let them freeze, and then try to cook them before they have thawed out. All the juices in them will cook out, for the cold bone will keep the temperature way down. The same thing will happen to fish, although not so observably, because the bones in fish are not as large as those of animals. Here are some of the recipes I have tested in times past:

Thawed and Baked Trout.

One small trout, two or three thin slices of lean salt pork under the fish and one or two over it, some slices of onion, and the solid part of a can of tomato, or fresh tomatoes are better. Thaw and clean the trout, wipe dry, and dress with pork and onions, placing the whole preferably in a glass baking dish. Pour a little hot melted butter over this and bake twenty minutes in a hot oven. The thin slices of pork should be cooked. A large trout may be cooked in slices.

Thawed and Boiled Haddock.

Frozen haddock boiled and flaked and served with mayonnaise makes an exceptionally dainty fish service. To boil it plunge it in boiling water to which has been added a little lemon juice.

Thawed and Baked Haddock.

This is my favorite recipe among those for frozen fish: One middle cut of a good sized haddock, and the following stuffing: One cup finely seasoned mashed potato, one stalk celery, one carrot, two tablespoons salt pork fat, two tablespoons melted butter, bread crumbs. Chop the vegetables fine and smother them in the salt pork fat, cooking them soft, without browning them. Blend the mashed potato with them along with the crisp dice of pork used in obtaining the pork fat.

Have them all in the frying pan, and if the mixture should seem a bit dry add two tablespoons of cream and cook the whole for several minutes, tasting and adding a bit of salt if necessary.

Fill the piece of haddock with this dressing and skewer it in, place whole on a buttered dish, baste with the two tablespoons of hot melted butter, and put into a genuinely hot oven—one up to 500 degrees—and bake twenty minutes with one basting.

Mackerel Baked in Cream Sauce.

Fresh May mackerel are best broiled, but the winter fish, kept frozen until they reach the kitchen, if cooked in a sauce, may yield a high grade dish. This is their possibility. The cook does the rest. Wash a mackerel that has been allowed to thaw at a room temperature, wipe dry, cut off the head and fins, split up the back and remove the back bone, which should be put into a little cold water, put on the stove, and allowed to simmer twenty minutes after it reaches the boiling point.

Make a sauce of two tablespoons of butter, two tablespoons of flour, one cup of milk and the liquid in which the fish bones were simmered, after it is strained. Put the mackerel wiped dry into a buttered baking dish—one of glass which may be brought to the table—pour the sauce over it and bake it under the broiler, or in a hot oven for twenty minutes, basting it frequently. If cooked under the broiler watch for the forming of blisters on the sauce and stir them in immediately. Fish cooked in this fashion is astonishingly white for mackerel.

Thawed and Broiled Mackerel.

Thaw frozen mackerel, wash, wipe dry, lay over it some slices of onion and pour over the whole four or five tablespoons of French dressing. Dip this dressing up over it, now and then, during an hour, when it should be all absorbed, and then broil. Mackerel seasoned and broiled in this fashion makes an excellent fish salad with mayonnaise.

Smoked Fish.

Small cured herring, etc., are much used as appetizers. The larger fish, whether smoked or otherwise cured, can be used in the same way. Since a great number of people know nothing about smoked fish, dealers in some cases have indulged in condemnable practices, just as they do with other foods. They cannot endure to see the money loss, even though the loss may be in part or wholly due to their slovenly store keeping.

Preparing any Smoked Fish.

Scalding smoked fish as an initial preparation has a good many things to recommend it. A piece of fish should be washed first, without fail, and it does no harm to wash a whole fish, wiping it dry so that the boiling water shall have the best effect. We plunge a piece of finnan haddie into boiling water and leave it in the water for five or ten minutes to soften it.

Boiled Smoked White Fish.

When a French woman boils a smoked white fish we seem to have something exceptional, if she happens to be typically up to her pretensions. In other words, smoked white fish boiled in rather especially seasoned water and served with a piquant sauce may be something exceptionally good. Or use it for a salad of a sort. For the water, put celery tops, the tops of green onions, sliced carrots and so forth into the water in which fish is to be boiled and let them cook for twenty minutes. Then drop the cleaned and dry white fish into this and cook until the flakes easily separate. It is good with plain butter and served alone with a positively green salad in which there may be green onions.

Broiled Smoked White Fish.

Clean and scald the smoked white fish and broil it five or six minutes to a side. Take up, remove the skin, take off the fillets carefully, butter them and serve with lemon juice. These may be served in a border of boiled and buttered rice, sprinkled with diced boiled egg yoke. Or the fish may be flaked and used as an appetizer.

Broiled Finnan Haddie.

Wash a piece of finnan haddie, then scald it, or perhaps you will like to prepare it thus: Soak half an hour in cold water, then pour over it and allow to stand for fifteen minutes in water which is just off the boiling point. Wipe dry before broiling. The question of skinning does not have to be settled in the case of finnan haddie fillets, so largely sold today. Grease the broiler, lay the fish on it, dot generously with butter and broil until a nice brown. The length of time for cooking depends somewhat upon the thickness of the fish. If thick, cook twenty minutes. Serve this on a hot plate, adding a little more butter and then pouring some hot cream over it. Garnish with parsley and serve with baked potatoes.

Another way of softening this fish, which does not require any soaking to freshen it, is to put it in a hot oven for a few minutes, first washing and wiping it dry. If it should be a nice moist piece with a skin, this is a good way to do when the skin is to be peeled off.

Creamed Finnan Haddie.

There are numerous ways of preparing creamed finnan haddie, and the varying quality of the fish offers even more ways to prepare it. One way is to wash it, drop into boiling water, and allow to stand for five minutes, flake, and then cook till well heated through in a white sauce. But most people will prefer to cook the flakes, somewhat, in butter before adding them to the white sauce.

Another way is to simmer the fish for twenty minutes before flaking it, with a rejection of any hard edges, then put in a sauce and heat to a blend. For a seasoned sauce proceed as follows for a pound of fish: Gently simmer without allowing them to color two tablespoons of chopped onions and two tablespoons of chopped green pepper, in two tablespoons of butter. Cover the pan and cook over a medium fire. Then add two level tablespoons of flour, blend with mixture, and add one cup of hot milk.

Stir constantly until the whole thickens, adding salt to taste and a grate or two of nutmeg. Or use a little paprika or a grain or two of cayenne. Shred the fish and put it into this sauce and let the two gently cook together for five or ten minutes. Serve on toast. It requires a sort of genius, although there may be happy accidents, to blend a sauce with some ingredients like fish or vegetables so that the whole seems like something wonderfully fine and special. It may easily seem common instead of fine, when the work is but indifferent, although the business seems like such a small matter. If it does not seem just right, a little fresh butter, or a bit of cream, or perhaps a bit of black pepper, or some onion juice, or dry and finely chopped parsley may be the crowning touch. At any rate, there are real objects to work for in making creamed dishes

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton Du Puy.

ISN'T it odd that the modest earthworm, dug up when one wants to go fishing, turns out, when you come to know him, to stand in usefulness very near the top of the list of the animals of the world?

The earthworm is useful because he makes the crops of the world grow better than they would without him. Some experts say that crops are 10 per cent better because of the earthworm and some say they are 25 per cent better. If they are five per cent better it may be true that the earthworm does more good than even the cow or the horse.

The earthworm works all the time, running tunnels here and there in the ground. He may start at the surface and drill a hole four feet deep. The ground all around may be packed hard. When it rains the water might not soak in more than a few inches. With this tunnel to follow, however, it will get into the ground and thoroughly soak the soil that otherwise would have remained dry. This soil will nourish crops much better when dry spells come.

But the earthworm does more than let in the moisture. It brings dirt from far below the surface and piles it on top. Most people have noticed those little funnel-shaped piles of dirt along the path of a summer morning. Earthworms put them there. In soils where these worm are plentiful they are constantly bringing up dirt. In twenty years they may pile up six inches of it all over a meadow. They work up the soil all the time. They are nature's plowmen.

Earthworms come to the surface at night and forage for food. They eat green stuff. They gather it and take it below ground. There they let it decay to their liking. They use it for blocking their tunnels. In dragging this vegetable matter below ground the worms are helping the richness of the soil. Farmers often grow green crops and plow them under to enrich the soil. The earthworm accomplishes the same thing when he takes leaves and grass blades into his hole. Millions of him working all the time have a great influence on soil richness all around the world.

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

Lucy, my 5 year old daughter, brought her first drawing home—a landscape of green grass and trees, with little black dots in the trees indicating birds' nests.

When she showed it to daddy, he said, "Where are the birds, dear?"

She thought a minute, then exclaimed, "Don't you know, they all flewed south to keep warm!"

What Mrs. E. Smith, E. 70th St., says:

I'm not surprised that so many women are talking about Rinso. Before I tried it I used any soap that happened to be on sale at a bargain price. But not now! I wouldn't think of using anything but Rinso since I found out what a big work saver it is! The safe Rinso suds get my clothes so beautifully white and clean—and without a bit of hard rubbing. Naturally they wear longer, now. Besides, it makes our water so sudsy that I never bother with softeners any more. And for the dishes, windows, woodwork, etc., Rinso is just wonderful!

MRS. ELLSWORTH SMITH
2307 E. 70th St. - - Chicago, Ill.

Just think! This snowy wash never touched a washboard

—it was just soaked whiter!

AND this is only one wash. Millions of washes all over the country are now being soaked whiter every washday.

Women everywhere are giving up old-fashioned washday habits. Why scrub and boil when this way soaks clothes whiter and brighter than ever! Whiter and brighter than ever!

It's the Rinso suds that do it. Here are suds that loosen dirt and stains—not just soap bubbles. Rinso makes the hottest water soapy all through.

Easy on clothes and hands

It's such fun to rinse off the creamy Rinso suds and find the wash whiter—without one bit of hard rubbing! Hands stay young, clothes wear longer, when the wash is done this gentle way.

Now you don't even need to boil the wash. Rinso whitens and sterilizes without boiling. And it's so safe. Contains no acids, bleaches or harmful chemicals.

See for yourself, next washday, how a tubful of rich Rinso suds soaks your wash spotless. It's all you need—no bar soaps, chips or powders.

Get Rinso from your grocer. For economy and best results follow the easy directions on the package.

In washing machines, too

Rinso is great for washers. The makers of 30 leading machines recommend it for safety, and for a whiter, brighter wash.—Lever Bros. Co.

The Granulated Soap that Soaks Clothes Whiter

The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla de Campi Stephenson

A City Apartment May Take on All the Aspects of an Old Home at Buzzard's Bay or Martha's Vineyard.

COLONIAL furniture is ever dear to the heart of the American homemaker. In spite of temporary spasms of foreign influence, she returns unerringly to this type of furnishings. The early colonists, it is true, copied old English and Dutch pieces rather crudely. However, it was not long before cabinet makers, trained in England, came over to the new country, producing work of a finer aspect. As a result, we find in the homes of our old American families, in our historical houses and museums, many colonial pieces of rare beauty.

Nothing is more typically suitable, for the American home than this style. Nevertheless, all of us are not so fortunate as to be able to collect many genuine colonial antiques. Present day manufacturers come to our assistance with reliable copies of authentic old pieces, and through their use many interesting effects may be achieved.

A charming city apartment has recently been completed, in the colonial style, by a well known New England decorator. It bespeaks that certain distinction and pleasing simplicity which are always associated with this type of furnishing. The entrance hall is quietly dignified. Walls are done in a quaint scenic medallion paper, in tones of French gray and ivory. Woodwork is painted black. Black and ivory squares of linoleum cover the floor. Opposite the front door is a lovely old console table with a mirror in a gilt, pillar frame hanging above it. Brass side lights have characteristic hurricane shades of frosted glass. A gold bowl filled with flowers stands on the table. At each side is a graceful Windsor chair. A narrow, arch topped window is curtained with gold silk gauze.

French doors at one end of the hall open into the living room. The walls are marked into panels by means of wood moldings and all are painted amber yellow. Windows are placed in groups of three. Amber silk gauze glass curtains are used. Across the tops are scalloped lambrequins of green flowered glazed chintz, with a drapery of the chintz hanging straight to the floor at outermost ends of each group. A long bench, fitted to the space, stands before each set of windows. Boxed cushions are done in the chintz.

At one side of the fireplace, as shown in today's illustration, is a comfortable sofa, upholstered in chintz. Seat cushions are down filled. Two round pillows are done in patchwork, while the front of a square one is made of an old sampler. A reading lamp, with an ash tray attachment, is conveniently placed. The shade is of parchment, decorated with spirals of deep blue, and edged with green.

Across from the sofa is a quaint wing chair done in the same chintz. Beside it stands an old fashioned table on which are placed a green glass lamp, current magazines, and an odd box. The lamp has an amber plaited bookcloth shade, cut in deep points at the lower edge, and gathered at the top with a tasseled green cord.

Book shelves fit the wall spaces at each side of the fireplace. Interesting and colorful pieces are placed on top of them. An old map of the family estate is paneled in above the fireplace. In one corner of the room is a handsome chest of drawers with brass hardware. Brass candlesticks placed on top of the chest hold dull green candles. A mirror in a colonial frame hangs above, and silhouettes are grouped at each side.

Accompanying a commodious secretary desk is a lovely Chippendale side chair, its seat upholstered in flowered glazed chintz. In the corner opposite the secretary is a comfortable arm chair done in soft green, raspberry and old blue stripes, with hairlines of black. An octagonal table beside it holds a lamp with a shade of accordion plaited green, amber and raspberry striped paper, a decorative cigaret box and an ash tray. Finishing the room's furnishings is a lovely colonial cabinet which houses a fine radio. It is accompanied by a Windsor arm chair. Colorful hooked rugs enliven the black floor covering.

Opening into the living room at one side is a delightful little sun room. The walls are pale cinnamon color. Green theatrical gauze is used for glass curtains at the windows. Draperies of flowered linen on a cinnamon ground hang from beneath painted wooden cornices. A love seat is upholstered in the linen. Windsor and ladderback rush bottom chairs, a maple dropleaf table, and a spinet desk finish the room. Old fashioned lamps have plaited paper shades.

Duncan Phyfe furnishing are used in the dining room. Woodwork and wainscoting are painted antique ivory and the walls are a light green. Glass curtains of ivory gauze are sill length, but the draperies reach to the floor. They are made of jade green sunfast and are topped by decorative, old brass cornices. Chair seats are upholstered in black haircloth, done in a jacquard pattern. A lovely old corner cupboard holds an unusually fine collection of antique decanters. Over the buffet a beautifully toned floral painting is hung.

The bedrooms are most pleasingly arranged. In the main bedroom the woodwork is painted a soft, French gray. Wallpaper shows pastoral scenes in tones of mauve. Sections of the paper are cut out and applied in panels on the doors. Closely flowered glazed chintz, on a mauve ground, makes the window draperies. They are edged with accordion plaited ruffles of plain rose colored glazed chintz. Glass curtains are of mauve voile of sunfast quality.

A large wing chair, placed near one of the windows, and two little, low slipper chairs (one standing at the foot of each bed) are upholstered in mauve chintz, with piping of rose. Beside the wing chair is a low drop-leaf table, which holds a glass lamp, and a quaint sewing basket. The lamp has an accordion plaited, rose colored shade made of book linen.

Covers on the twin four post beds are of deep flounced, rose colored dotted Swiss. On a little table between them are placed a lamp, with a square shade of tight stretched chintz, and an old fashioned water bottle and glass. All of the furniture is maple. Braided rugs in mauve, rose and French gray are used.

Another bedroom, furnished with maple pieces, has white walls and woodwork. Around the window frames and following the top of the wainscoting, an interesting old wallpaper border has been applied, with a most pleasingly decorative effect. Ruffled white organdie curtains are used, without over draperies, having valances and cuffs of the same material.

The cuffs are fastened to blue glass tie-backs. Characteristic pieced quilts are used as covers on the twin beds. Glass lamps in the room have white parchment shades, decorated with old floral prints. Colorful hooked rugs are used on the floor.

M. M.: The doors may be painted old ivory and the stair treads stained walnut.

FALLING IN WITH LIFE'S PLAN

By Dor Blair

Experience Seems to Prove That Happiness Is the Result of Agreeing with One's Fate Rather than Trying to Change It.

A BRILLIANT woman and a once beautiful one is now living with her memories and a few tragic knicknacks saved from the wreckage of a spoiled career in one of those pensions that dot the continent. The small allowance that permits her the necessities of life today comes from a third or fourth husband, nobody is exactly sure which.

Occasionally she dresses herself in the sad old remnants of those better days of hers and starts out to some gay little café, hoping against hope, no doubt, that she may recapture one of those high moments she used to know so well. The best she earns is a supercilious condescension from the waiter, who takes her meager tip with a guttural sound that could not be mistaken for gratitude.

I stopped for coffee one afternoon last summer at one of her favorite haunting grounds and luck favored me with a place beside her. A lorgnette hung from a frayed ribbon around her neck. She played with it a bit too coquettishly for one whose face wore unmistakable signs of a life that had tasted bitterly of tragedy. With a deep sigh she turned to me, courting a response in English: "You're an American?"

We got into conversation. She asked me where I'd been and what I'd seen and then proceeded to tell me of the thousand wonders I had missed. "An Arabian nights tale her life was as she unfolded it. Suddenly as I was holding my breath in sheer amazement at the woman's marvelous memory and her story telling skill she turned the lorgnette full upon me and delivered herself of this advice:

"Never take fate in your own hands, my dear. It crushes you if you do."

Sensing a moment of unutterable sorrow in the poor soul's heart, I could not press her for explanation. Nor was there need to, with the explanation there beside me now patting her finger tips nervously on the table, her lips twitching and her eyes suddenly dimmed with tears. I saw her several times thereafter and met with one who corroborated the story of her life.

Many times since have I thought of the tragic soul—and of that advice of hers. When women have written me asking me if it were not better that they leave their husbands for one who loved them more, and when stories have reached me of this and that woman who has taken her fate in one hand and alimony in the other, I have remembered her.

A True Story.

And again I thought of her on reading the following letter from a correspondent: "When I was 19 I was in love with a medical student of 22. He was all I could wish for, kind, gentle, refined and tall and dark. He went abroad to finish his studies. Our parting was formal, but the last half second before going, he kissed me—one of those quick, brotherly, embarrassing kisses.

"Within the next few months my aunt took charge of me socially, as I had no mother, and I met a rather mature man, renowned for his wealth. Every one thought it a wonderful match, and without thrills or heartaches the following year I was a very much married woman.

"Things ran smoothly for I expected so little. All I asked was to return yearly to the city of my girlhood. I yearned for children, but was not blessed with them. Upon one of my annual visits to my native city I met my young struggling physician, and in an off-hand way told of my sorrow over not having children.

"It so happened that two children distantly related to him were left motherless and fatherless, the boy a wonderful youngster of four, the girl a darling of two and a half. I adopted them both and took them back with me to mother and cherish.

"The war came. Our boy was ready for college. My husband was too old and not well enough to think of service. The doctor was the first to enlist. En route to Washington he spent a few days with us. I can never forget those wonderful hours—so little said but so much left unsaid. But I remained faithful and loyal to my husband and family.

Dark Days.

"My husband's health was on a steady decline and we closed our pretentious home and went to an old homestead to live. Here I saw the doctor's mother daily, either in my home or in hers. The children always were at her beck and call and that fall was a most trying one—my dear father on a rigid diet; my husband almost bedridden; servants out of the question. I stewed and baked and scrubbed. At night I was often too tired to sleep. The doctor's mother was wonderful in those trying days and that Thanksgiving day was the coldest, bleakest one in history, for on it I laid my husband to rest.

"That spring our heroes returned. The summer passed beautifully. In the fall I decided the boy must enter college, even if I must curtail some of our comforts. Here the doctor fitted in beautifully, instructing James's father does, and after James left the doctor paid his fees, call and discuss finances and talk about Lilie's education. We managed to send her to an eastern finishing school.

The Happy Ending.

"The children came home for holidays, and New Year's eve we went to the opera and afterward to the doctor's home, where his mother had planned a wonderful party. We sat around the festive board, merry and gay and when the whistles announced twelve James got up and came to me.

"The doctor said, 'Nay, nay! I shall be the first kiss in this New Year.'

"Without even so much as a proposal, spring found us a happily wedded pair. We have been blessed with a wonderful baby boy of our own.

"Sometimes I have wondered what my life would be had I obtained a divorce, come home and set the town afire with gossip. I am sure I never would have earned the respect, love and the companionship of the most wonderful man in the world.

"I may sound a little smug, but I hope not. My happiness I feel is due to that sense of duty which seems the paramount thing in us all. When I look around and see those broken lives around me I wonder if, in the long run, life and its duties weren't more philosophically would we oftener achieve that happiness we long for?"

Is that not another way of telling us to let life run its course without too much interference? My dear of the boulevard café would say it.

4 Things You Must Do for Colds

A cold calls for four helps, all at one time. And each should be the best. One must stop the cold, check the fever, open the bowels and tone the entire system. Do them all.

HILL'S combines these four effects. Each is accomplished by a modern discovery, the best men have found of its kind. One of the world's largest laboratories has embodied them all in one tablet, in a way to bring no ill results.

HILL'S is the perfect help for colds. It is so efficient, so complete that we paid $1,000,000 for it. The use has grown and grown, until millions have come to employ it.

If you have a cold, start HILL'S at once. By tomorrow you will see the results. You will never again rely on lesser help when you learn what HILL'S can do.

London Doctor Finds Real Cause of Stomach Gas

AS A RESULT of special studies made at one of London's leading hospitals, a famous English specialist asserts that most stomach and bowel trouble is due to just one cause—Intestinal Stasis. This disease which, it is said, afflicts three out of every four people, is directly caused by improper food, lack of correct exercise and other faults of modern life.

Intestinal Stasis

INTESTINAL STASIS, in everyday language, means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines. This matter, from which the body has taken all the nourishment, is not promptly passed out of the bowels, but due to intestinal weakness, it remains many hours or even days longer than it should. This waste matter then ferments, forms gas and poisons, and is the cause of sour stomach, gas bloating and indigestion.

A person may have Intestinal Stasis and yet not be noticeably constipated. The bowels may move once or even twice a day, but the movements are only partial. Enough old matter is left to form gas, hinder digestion and poison the system.

Action Needed on Both Bowels

ORDINARY laxatives or physics seldom overcome Intestinal Stasis. Nor do soda or magnesia give more than temporary relief from stomach gas. Intestinal Stasis, and the other diseases of which it is the cause, can be relieved permanently only by continued, REAL intestinal cleansing.

Dr. Carl Weschcke, in his private practice, first perfected the bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic now known as Adlerika. It is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other ingredients which expel gas and have detergent action. Adlerika, unlike other medicines, acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel.

Gas Relieved System Cleansed

ONE of Adlerika's first effects is to relieve gas on the stomach and gas bloating. Even the FIRST spoonful usually brings out a surprising amount of old poisonous waste matter which you never guessed was in your system and which may have been the hidden cause of indigestion, nervous dyspepsia, headache, sleeplessness or other trouble. Even if your bowels move daily, Adlerika frequently brings out a surprising amount of additional matter which might otherwise be poisoning your system.

Many physicians recognize Adlerika as the one dependable remedy for Gas and Intestinal Stasis or whenever REAL bowel cleansing is necessary. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you.

What Doctors Say about Adlerika

"I prescribe Adlerika with highly satisfactory results."—Dr. A. C. Curl.

Ancient gateway to Guy's Hospital, London, where important discoveries about Intestinal Stasis have been made.

"I have to congratulate you on the good effects I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it."—Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found Adlerika to be far superior in bowel and stomach trouble to my fondest anticipations."—Dr. G. Eggers.

"Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it checks and inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria and bacilli."—Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York.

Jealousy

We're all acquainted with jealousy, the green that smashes love affairs, wrecks homes, causes business quarrels, and sometimes makes havoc with us mortals. We'd like to know your most notable experience with a jealous person or persons. Or have you encountered a situation where jealousy led to a tragic or ridiculous climax, tell us about it. The Tribune will pay $1 for every story published. Address Jealous Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Buying Her Own Ring.

After Christmas vacation, one year when I was in college I returned wearing a diamond ring and the girls in the dorm were much excited over my engagement to "the man at home." Josephine, a freshman, watched the fuss over me with jealous eyes, then made a hurried trip downtown and at dinner that night was proudly displaying her solitaire and describing her fiancé.

We all congratulated her, etc., though we suspected her sincerity. And it wasn't until the cheap ring she had bought for herself turned green on her finger that she told us her "engagement" had been broken.

MRS. L. H.

Needless Tragedy.

A boy and girl were left orphans, being adopted later by different neighbors and they took the names of their adopted parents. Eventually the girl, growing to womanhood, became the sweetheart of a prosperous insurance man, but greatly to his dismay she persisted in visiting a local garage man who always kept a car for her and showed her every attention.

His persistence in visiting him so aroused her beau's jealousy that he committed suicide in such a way as to cast suspicion on his supposed rival, who was promptly arrested. He turned out to be the girl's brother.

M. C. H.

Hardly Paid.

Recently a wealthy man died leaving the bulk of his estate to his daughter. To one niece he left $15,000, to another $10,000, and to the city $20,000 with which to build a school. The niece that was to receive $10,000 was so jealous of the other niece that she in some manner destroyed the will before it was officially read, thereby cheating herself, the other niece and the city out of the inheritance, for in the absence of the will the entire estate went to the nearest relative, who was the daughter.

B. P.

A Slap in the Face.

The most jealous person I ever knew was my girl friend. One day as I was chatting with her boy friend, she passed by and saw us. She rushed up to me and gave me a slap in the face. With my face scarlet (not from the slap), I turned away. She might have now been married to her boy friend if not for that betraying act of jealousy.

W. S.

Turned Out in the Cold.

A middle aged widow rooming house keeper became so jealous of an attractive girl in her house because she was invited to attend the theater one evening by a friend from home, that the next day (Sunday) she informed the girl she must get right out—the room must be vacated immediately. It was during a cold spell in January. Her spite was gratified and she smiled contentedly as she dozed over a radiator with the icy blasts shut out.

A. H.

Ridiculous.

My sister-in-law is an ardent radio fan. One time she remarked, "I just love that fellow," mentioning one of the singers on a certain station. This made my brother so mad that he took the tubes out so she couldn't play the radio. Recently he relented and put them in again, after making my sister-in-law promise not to tune in on that station.

The joke is on my brother, because the singer has transferred to another station now, and, evidently not recognizing him, my brother has commented on what a fine voice he has.

MRS. H. F.

Cuts Them Both.

I went to see a friend of mine one evening, and while I was there her boy friend dropped in to see her. I knew him well, because we had been sweethearts in the past, and so when I got up to go home he offered to take me home in his car. This was natural, but on hearing his offer she got angry and asked him to stay a while. He told her he had his car outside and it was only right for him to take me home. Well, he did, and now my girl friend speaks neither to her boy friend nor to me.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about two ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

Druggists say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Civic Opera News Wanders West to Us

By Edward Moore.

NOT from the offices of the Civic Opera company, which has been maintaining an inscrutable silence on the subject, but from the publicity list of an eastern concert manager, comes the statement of three new members of the company for next season. They are named as Elsie Olszewska, contralto—pronunciation not guaranteed by this department—Emil Schipper, and Heinrich Schlusnus, baritones.

The publicity statement, however, has its reticences as well as its revelations. It tells that Mme. Olszewska is principal contralto of the Vienna Staatsoper; likewise that she has sung in other houses of central Europe and London, and predicts that she will be one of the most discussed singers of many seasons.

It refrains from telling that she has already been considerably discussed, although she has never been here. For Mme. Olszewska took a position in the headlines two or three years ago during a performance in Vienna wherein Jeritza was the soprano. It was said, it was even cabled, that some of the proceedings in the performance met with her disapproval, and the report went on to say that first she expressed her disapproval. It added that sally-ho parade came into the expression, though in a somewhat different manner from what baseball pitchers are in the habit of using them.

FEDOR CHALIAPIN as Don Basilio in "The Barber of Seville" this afternoon.

Information, Amusing and Otherwise.

Of Mr. Schipper there is not much detailed information. The statement calls him one of the foremost baritones of Europe, and speaks about his notable appearances last summer in the Covent Garden season at London. That is about all. As much can be said of nine-tenths of the European singers who come seeking kind adjectives and agreeable bank accounts in this country.

But when Mr. Schlusnus' name was reached, this department stopped and rubbed its eyes. There began to be a suspicion that we were being kidded by experts. Just the same, then it was, plus the information that he was of such amazing versatility that he had won success in such different fields as German and Italian opera and in recital. "On account of his personality and stage presence, he is known in Germany as 'Der Amerikaner,'" says the statement. And his name is Heinrich Schlusnus. It almost seems too much.

In the meantime the mail brings an account of how Lucia Mellus stopped the show in a performance of "Lakme" in Washington the other night, among other things, being obliged to repeat the "Bell Song." She was a member of the Civic Opera company here a year ago, though not in the season just closed. There began to be a slight sort of wonder about some of these good artists that have come—and gone—in and out of the opera, whether in the memory of some of the good singing by Mme. Mellus and others it might not have been a good plan to keep some of them instead of scouring the world over for newcomers, whether excellent singing is not at times a good set-off against a record of long distance salivation.

Kneisel Daughter Takes Up the Bow.

The musical organizations are on the horizon and due to make first Chicago visits within the next few days. The first is the Marianne Kneisel String quartet, to be followed within a few days by the English singers.

For a number of years the Kneisel quartet, headed by the late Franz Kneisel, was the most famous and just about the most important chamber music organization in America. Season after season it toured the country faithfully and industriously. Pioneering, fighting, educating by exhibiting its own fine art, it did a remarkable work in developing a widespread taste for chamber music.

Marianne Kneisel is the daughter of Franz Kneisel. As she was surrounded all her life by an atmosphere of chamber music, it seems rather natural that she should find herself leading a string quartet of her own. The other members of her organization are Elizabeth Worth, second violin; Lillian Fuchs, viola, and Phyllis Kraeuter, cello. They will appear Wednesday night at Kimball hall.

English Singers Promise Delight.

The English singers are something quite different. They are pursuing a highly specialized line, one that is not known hereabouts nearly as well as it deserves to be. But when this department was in London in 1925, the English singers gave the most vivid and delightful recollection of any music heard in Europe that summer.

They are six singers who sit around a table and sing madrigals. But no brief statement can convey any indication of how charming these madrigals are. It is music of a kind to get inside of you and fill you with joy. The output of English madrigals was one of the briefest in musical history. It was not more than forty years long, for that matter, not more than twenty-five in its greatest mass. The first published madrigals seem to have appeared in 1588 and the last in 1627. But while it lasted it was one of the greatest ever known. It put England at the head of the musical world; it left a collection never equaled in that manner before or since.

As the dates indicate, you must go back three centuries to find them. Curiously enough, the music does not sound three centuries or even one century old. On the contrary, it is as bright and fresh and sparkling as though the most avant melodists of this generation had written it. In fact, it is better, because the melodists of today are few and far apart. But it takes people like the English singers to perform it. They are a unique organization.

Chaliapin in "The Barber of Seville."

Chaliapin, the famous, and his opera company will be at the Auditorium this afternoon for a single performance of "The Barber of Seville." Those who saw him do Don Basilio in this opera with the Civic Opera company a few seasons ago will need no reminder of its Brodingnagian humor. It is as dynamic an effort applied to fun making as his Boris Godunoff is in the field of operatic tragedy.

He has Elvira Hidalgo, another former member of the Civic Opera company, with him as Rosina; Joseph Bobrovich, an excellent tenor, as Count Almaviva; Giorgio Durando as Figaro, and Giuseppe La Puma as Dr. Bartolo. Eugene Plotnikoff is the musical director, and there is word of some new and modern stage settings by Konstantin Korovin.

Wagner takes an important part in the Chicago Symphony orchestra this week, both on the Tuesday afternoon concert and the Friday and Saturday series. The Tuesday program is a Beethoven-Wagner one, with the Third "Leonore" Overture and the "Eroica" Symphony in the first part. The "Flying Dutchman" Overture, the Preludes to the first and third acts of "Lohengrin," "Dreams" in the Theodore Thomas orchestra, and the "Meistersinger" Prelude in the second.

"Siegfried" will be specialized in the programs of Friday afternoon and Saturday night. Mr. Stock's outline looks as though it contained all the peaks of the music-drama, with careful omission of most of the valleys. It includes the Introduction and Forge Scene from the first act; "Siegfried in the Forest," from the second; "Siegfried Ascending Brünnhilde's Rock," "Brünnhilde's Awakening," and the Finale from the third.

This is only half the program. The rest contains some evidences of Mr. Stock's persistent search for new music. This music has occasionally pointed out that Mr. Stock is something of an editor in the newspaper sense. He believes that there are news values in new music, and that it is part of his job to keep the public informed and abreast of the times in the matter of musical developments. Whether these

JANUARY'S SIX BEST PHOTOPLAYS.

THE GENERAL. THE KID BROTHER. THE CHEERFUL FRAUD. THE POTTERS. JOHNNY GET YOUR HAIR CUT. BEAU GESTE.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

As I write this on Wednesday—this beautiful, BEAUTIFUL Wednesday!—I'm wondering what Sunday will be like.

Shall we, singing just like larks, go a-strolling through the parks?
Or with gloomy miens and—goshes—have to haul on our galoshes,
As between a sigh and wail we prepare to breast a gale?

(Always supposing, of course, that you're like me and don't like to stay cooped up in the house all day.)

One thing about this time of year—you've always got three guesses coming. I guess it snows Sunday.

Looking over the pictures of last month is to discover that the majority of them were comedies. Well, this is the time of year we need to laugh a lot to keep up our courage and circulation.

The pictures listed above are culled from the ones I saw. Miss Nangle, you know, criticked during my vacation. Of the films SHE saw, she liked best "Hotel Imperial," with Pola Negri; "Twinkletoes," with Colleen Moore, and "New York," with Lois Wilson and Ricardo Cortez.

HAROLD LLOYD was 100 per cent funny in "The Kid Brother."

In "Hotel Imperial" Pola Negri comes back, according to Roberta, and is much the Pola of her early films. "Twinkletoes" gave Colleen Moore abundant opportunity to do the sort of thing she does best. "New York" WAS New York, Roberta says. To quote her:

"The picture boasts of expert photography and direction. The chaotic east side scenes are well done, and through it all runs the noise and the hum of feverish activity which seems to be so much a part of present day New York."

"THE GENERAL," as you know, is Buster Keaton's latest—"mirthquake"—as the film producers love to say. As is customary, Mr. Keaton never cracks a smile—and I wonder if you, like myself, are not getting the least bit bored with that everlasting frozen face? However that may be, I thought "The General" quite comical, and, besides that, it registered as a whacking good little war picture. A nice little comedy drama. Not remarkable—but NIZE.

"THE KID BROTHER" gave me more joy than I've known at a comedy for a long time. "A humdinger," I said of it, and that's JUST what it is—as a lot of you have written in to say. Let me quote some more, for there isn't any more to say of the film than was said in the original review. There the statement was made that you were "given a hotsy-totsy time by a show that hasn't a sign of smut nor a risque moment, and is as free from double meaning as a newborn baby."

Harold Lloyd, by introducing the brand of "funnies" that he brought into the film world, has done something for his country, if you ask me!

"THE CHEERFUL FRAUD" featured Reginald Denny in a gay piece that has been delighting the Denny fans. Another comedy—and another pretty clean one, featuring a man who, like Harold Lloyd, can be relied on not to sling dirt on the silver sheet. There are some situations in "The Cheerful Fraud" that are suggestive, after a fashion—but not offensively so. The hint of the past of a fat old man has nothing intriguing about it—has it? The film, summed up, was said to bellow with action, to have been well produced, and to hold the interest.

Too bad Mr. Denny's been so sick, isn't it? I was surprised to hear he was in the hospital. He certainly was a healthy looking specimen the day he came to call on me. That was several months ago, though—Well—he's better—and that's fine!

"THE POTTERS"—another comedy! This time W. C. Fields at your service. Funny ol' W. C. Fields! They say it's hard for them to get a camera man with self-control enough to photograph him, for when he turns that funny mug to be "shot," it's, well—just too much, you know, for a chap with a sense of humor! (I got that from a press agent. You should hear SOME of the things I get from press agents!)

ANYHOW, "The Potters" is mighty funny.

It's the screen adaptation, you know, of the J. P. McEvoy comedy serial that ran in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE for so long. Mr. Fields is ideal in the rôle of Pa Potter. Mary Alden as Ma isn't fat—but she doesn't have to be fat to do all the things a fat woman can do. The newspaper Ma WAS fat, you remember? Mary Alden can play ANY rôle as that rôle should be played.

"JOHNNY GET YOUR HAIR CUT" brought back our little Jackie Coogan to us. They told us he'd be a big boy in this picture, but, praise be, he isn't! Haircut hasn't done a thing to Jackie! He doesn't seem any bigger and not MUCH older than he used to be when he first delighted our souls. Take that back—of course, he IS bigger—but that baby something or other about him gives you the illusion of tiny-ness.

"Johnny Get Your Hair Cut" was adapted from Gerald Beaumont's story, "The Mud Bug," that ran in a current magazine. The original story had rather more originality and body than the adaptation, which resolves itself, after all, into just another "race track" melodrama, with all those things that go to make up a race track melodrama.

Jackie IS the picture. He had, however, a fine supporting cast, an able director, and all the kindly and capable assistance in every way that could be given him.

"BEAU GESTE"! Did you see it?

Wasn't it lovely?

After saying in the paper—as I had been told—that the picture hadn't been intended to be a spectacle, but that the People took it to their hearts and "accorded it a seat in the Halls of Mighty Movies," a Mr. Wall of Paramount called me up and said I had been misinformed. He says the producers meant it for a spectacle and knew it was a winner, and put it out as such.

Either way—what difference does it make? It is a marvelous film, beautifully done in every imaginable way. May I quote:

"The producers have been faithful to the book and the director has exactly caught the spirit and atmosphere of the story. And the tale of the three brothers of whom Beau Geste is the eldest has been screened with fire, with dignity, and with a sure understanding of the pure breeding that alone could produce boys capable of the idealism and the determination and bravery to keep that ideal a shining, unsullied star—such as were Michael, Digby, and John Geste . . . a stunning photoplay! Melodrama at its finest . . ."

And so on.

And so much for the six best films of January. Deserving of honorable mention are "Alaskan Adventures," "Stage Madness," "Bardelys, the Magnificent," and "The Auctioneer."

Here's hoping much for February! Gwine help me with my March first lead?

See you tomorrow!

The Battle Below the Potomac

By H. L. Mencken.

PASSING through the south, a few months back, to attend the autumn maneuvers of the confederate army [holden annually, in secret, ever since the event of April 9, 1865], I was greatly struck by the material advancement of that great region, and no less by its progress on the plane of the psyche. I traversed parts that were familiar to me, and parts that I had never hitherto penetrated. Everywhere I encountered new and good roads, new and handsome buildings, even whole new towns. The southern railroads, once miserable single tracks, laid directly upon the sand, are now mainly double-tracked, and most of them have excellent equipment and run their trains on time. There are new bridges, new yards, new stations. And in almost every town they reach there is a new and bustling life, in sharp contrast to the old southern sleepiness.

The pearl of the whole section is obviously Atlanta, now one of the loveliest of American cities. It has what is, in more than one way, the best hotel I have ever encountered in America, and many of the homes that are going up in the new suburbs are extraordinarily charming. The architects of the town seem to have a great deal of sense. Instead of covering the wooded hills of the vicinage with Tudor manor houses, Queen Anne cottages and Venetian palazzi, they devote themselves to confecting pleasant and sightly dwelling houses in the Georgian manner, with the native red brick and white limestone as materials. Nothing could be more comfortable, and nothing, against a background of dark trees and sunshiny lawn, could be more agreeable to the eye.

The contrast with such a town, say, as Los Angeles, is striking and highly soothing. In Los Angeles every architectural abomination ever invented runs wild. Ornament is so vastly and so unintelligently overworked that whole neighborhoods look like congeries of circus wagons. People live in houses no more suitable to their native tastes and stations in life than the monastery on Mount Athos would be suitable to a Mormon, or a jewel case to a cockroach. But in Atlanta the majority of habitations, at least of the well-heeled commercial noblesse, are dignified, appropriate and beautiful. I wish I knew the names of the unofficial Baron Haussmanns and Boss Shepherds who designed them. No doubt they had many hard tussles with their clients.

So much for the outward shell and semblance of the south. It begins to look prosperous and well barbered from the Potomac to the gulf. Even the picturesque dilapidation of New Orleans yields to the Coolidge idealism. But what is going on inside is even more interesting than what is going on outside. All over the region a new spirit breathes over the face of the ancient and stagnant waters. The civil war is at last forgotten, and eyes are turned ahead. In every state, save perhaps Mississippi, a young generation is in the saddle, and everywhere it is seeking to plug up the holes in the moth-eaten confederate kultur.

I know of no American state with a more vigorous and praiseworthy university than that of North Carolina. Certainly there is nothing comparable to it in the middle west. For it is not trying to convert itself into a gigantic rolling mill for the production of swine husbandmen, shyster lawyers and village music teachers: it is tackling the fundamental problems of southern life, and bringing to their solution a magnificent enterprise and a high order of skill. A generation ago, or even a decade ago, it was a capital offense everywhere in the south to admit formally that the south had any problems, save only those forced upon it by Yankee busybodies. But now, at Chapel Hill, the woes of the ex-confederate, urban and rural, are being studied realistically and to good effect, and no complaints are heard save from obvious idiots.

North Carolina, indeed, now leads the whole country in this department. Its leadership in the south is plain and undisputed. It has got rich in late years, and it is spending its money wisely. Some time ago it engaged a Scotchman as governor, and now benefits from the racial talents of this gentlemen. He is, like all Scotchmen, fanatically in favor of the enlightenment, and, again like all Scotchmen, he suffers an embolism every time sixpence is amputated from his hand.

So in all the other southern states, with the exception, before noted, of Mississippi. Mississippi is still plunged in the blackness that engulfed all of them down to 1900. Its state university is a joke, and its state press is dreadful. But the rest, in their separate ways, produce leaders and struggle toward the light. In every one of them obscurantism is still powerful—as it is, indeed, in all American states save a precious few—but in every one of them it is boldly challenged, and day by day it loses ground.

Here, as in other fields of human enterprise, the main thing is not the result, but the fight. The civilized southerners, I believe, will win in the long run, but they will be just as creditable to the human race if they fail. For they are fighting something that has its roots deep in the soil and is supported by an ancient and romantic tradition, and to make such a fight requires courage and pertinacity far beyond the common. That courage and pertinacity, by the divine mercy, are on tap in the south today. They show themselves superbly in such men as Julian Harris of Georgia, Potes of North Carolina, Wright of South Carolina, and Hall of Alabama. These men are not reformers, at least in the ordinary sense. They offer no sure cures for all the ills of their native states. They are simply men who are in favor of the enlightenment—and they battle for it with endless pugnacity and resourcefulness.

Such men, I believe, make admirable measuring rods of civilizations. If they are numerous and enterprising, then things are going forward. If they are few or weak, then standardization is in full swing, and everything properly describable as culture is sliding down to the level of the mob. In the United States as a whole there is a sliding down of that sort today: we have too few free spirits to meet the onslaught of Rotary, the radio, the schoolma'm, the movies, and a timorous and generally unintelligent press. But in the south they are relatively numerous, and they tend to increase.

The essential struggle down there is a kulturkampf, and in the Bismarckian sense. I see no a priori reason why Christianity and imbecility should be twins, but it is undoubtedly the case below the Potomac. Every attack upon human dignity and decency that the region has suffered in late years, from the Ku Klux attentat to the campaign of the fundamentalists, has had its origin in the evangelical churches. Their clergy, in the main, are extremely ignorant men, and view with alarm the rise of a civilized skepticism. They are the chief supporters of such political mountebanks as Peay and Heflin, and they are almost unanimously opposed to that free inquiry upon which all genuine civilization must rest.

Thus the chief problem of the more enlightened southerners is to fight off their attacks and undermine their influence. It is a business presenting serious technical difficulties, for the southern people, being still mainly rural, are easily reached and misled by their pastors. Moreover, the south is generally strongly Christian, and so has a prejudice in favor of any idea that has ecclesiastical backing. Nowhere else in America, save perhaps in the middle west and in such isolated sewers of the spirit as southern California, are the clergy more powerful in secular affairs.

But luck is running with the confederate intelligentsia. They no longer have to argue that the holy men of their section are, in the main, excessively unwise and imprudent, for the fact has begun to be obvious even to Ku Kluxers. Imbecility after imbecility issues from them. They range themselves, instantly and automatically, against every effort to dissipate the old darkness. In the long run, if properly played and encouraged, they will destroy themselves. Soon or late, in the south as in the more enlightened parts of the north, the evangelical pastor will cease to be a man of mark and become only a neighborhood nuisance, tolerated because of his impotence. When that time comes, there will dawn a genuine renaissance below the Potomac bridges.

Gentle Woman Turns Hannibal from Rome

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Jane Cowl plays a most persuasive Athenian in "The Road to Rome." The lady who, intimates Robert Emmet Sherwood, editor of Life and author of the play, stopped the conquering Hannibal at the foot of the seven hills and sent him away temporarily convinced that a peaceful conquering of his own soul was greater glory than any he could ever hope to win by sacking the ancient city.

Sherwood, who came through the world struggle with convictions as to the lamentable waste of war as firmly fixed as were those that inspired his friend Laurence Stallings to write "What Price Glory?" has managed to give them expression in this slightly satirical comedy with an ancient setting.

Hannibal has marched three thousand miles with his armies and his elephants to carry out his oath-taken determination to lay Rome waste to the glory of Carthage. Outside the walls he is camped and set for the attack when Amytis, wife of the fat-headed dictator of Rome, comes to visit him.

She comes, as Monna Vanna did, with some hope of turning the conqueror's thoughts away from his impending victories, but, unlike Monna Vanna, she comes clothed in her prettiest frock and her right mind. Being an Athenian and married to Fabius, the Roman, to please her father rather than herself, she is interested in Hannibal. Like the Sabine women, too, she is a little curious as to the arrangements that will be made about the expected ravishing.

She finds the conqueror tired out and inclined to question the lasting satisfactions of a warrior's fame and glory. He is of a mind to listen to her as she preaches the more satisfying victories of the spirit, and to delay her execution the while he investigates the claims of the personal equation she so eloquently defends. And next morning he turns the army back from the gates and marches away, while Amytis rejoins her husband, conscious of a great moral victory unhampered by any considerations of a conventional morality.

Miss Cowl is beautifully eloquent as the pleading Amytis, Philip Merivale such a Hannibal as must be allowed to live in fiction if the romance of the play is to live. The dialogue is often brilliant and the sentiment has the quality of being neither maudlin nor shamefaced.

Another "First Year."

The most promising of the recent plays and the most likeable is Maxwell Anderson's "Saturday's Children." Anderson you will remember as the New York World editorial writer who collaborated with Laurence Stallings in the writing of "What Price Glory?" and last season achieved a success d'estime with the tramp play he made from a story by Jim Tully and called "Outside Looking In."

"Saturday's Children" derives its title from that old song that begins "Monday's child is fair of face, Tuesday's child is full of grace," and includes the prophecy that "Saturday's child must work for a living." It is a pleasant, placid, sweet tempered little story of Bobby Halevy, who was desperately in love with Rims O'Neil and stood in danger of losing him when he decided to take a promotion that would send him to South America.

Coached by an older sister, Bobby brings Rims to the proposal point the night he calls to ask her advice about going. He decides that the lure of Bobby is much stronger than that of the south country that night and so they are married and go to live a little uncertainly, but ever so happily, on his $40 a week in a $60 a month apartment.

They are romantically happy for six months after that and then the squabbles begin. Rims chafes under the pressure of a budget that runs to $175 a month and the nagging advice of Bobby's relatives. Bobby can't understand why Rims is not willing to sacrifice his minor pinochle and poker pleasures for the sake of family economies. They quarrel and make up and quarrel again, snap and snarl as young married folks will, and finally split.

Bobby goes back to stenography and lunches with her attentive employer. Seeking independence, she rents a furnished room in one of those boarding houses presided over by an acidulous and prying landlady who insists that her young women roomers cannot entertain gentlemen callers in her room without leaving the door open. Rims tires quickly of his freedom and seeks a reconciliation. But Bobby is fearful. She wants a lover, not a husband.

Rims calls one night and, while he is there, Bobby's employer, just as a joke, sends her a bolt for the door to fool the landlady. But he never has a chance to use it. Rims comes back that night, climbs the fire escape, stealthily lets himself in at the window, and is fastening the bolt to the door when Bobby lifts her head from the pillow on which she is crying herself to sleep, and sees him.

Take the zest out of romance and you take the zest out of life, Playwright Anderson contends, and offers this agreeably romantic solution for the problem of the O'Neils. It is a sanely, convincingly written comedy and the first audience loved it. I have no great faith in domestic comedies, burdened with much wrangling, even though conceived in humor, unless they be as extravagantly funny as, for instance, was "The First Year." I have seen too many of them succeed in the press and fail at the box office. But there is a chance for this one. Not only because it is so skillfully written and staged, but because it is played with a beautiful and sensitive sympathy by Ruth Gordon as the Bobby and Roger Pryor as Rims. Beulah Bondi scores a minor success as the watchful landlady.

Censor Seems Certain.

In a desperate effort to stem the tide that is flowing ever so surely toward a legally appointed and political controlled censor for the theater in New York, the managers have at last taken definite action and the leaders of the play jury movement have voted themselves more power. The managers have met and elected Winthrop Ames chairman of a ways and means committee to cooperate with the Authors' guild and the Actors' Equity association, and the play jury has decided that hereafter eight in place of nine votes out of twelve will be sufficient to condemn a play.

It is the managers' hope that they will be able to control not only the bigger producers but the outlaws who are breaking into the game in greater and greater numbers. These outlaws, with everything to gain financially from a sensationally salacious play and nothing much to lose, are bold in their defiance. The day after the mayor called the managers to the carpet and warned them that either they had to clean up their plays or he would do it for them, a comedy called "New York Exchange" was boldly advertised as "The Story of a Male 'Captive,'" and "as ugly as a cage of snakes and as fascinating," another, "The Virgin Man," revealed the adventure of an unkissed student from Yale whose virginity is deliberately attacked by three vamping ladies, married and unmarried, and a third, first called "Praying Curve" and now rechristened "The Love Thief," relates a story of the harlotry in the rough that seeks to save itself by bringing about the redemption through religion of the sinning heroine.

All intelligent followers of the theater are opposed to political censorship. It is pretty sure to be ignorant, and, even were it intelligently administered it would result in nothing better than a sort of bootlegging in drama that would throw disputed plays into the courts and stay their suppression through legal entanglement. But the point has been reached when some sort of censorship, applied preferably at the source while the questionable plays are still in manu-

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

CONSISTENT readers of this column in the last fifteen months have encountered mentions of and references to "Craig's Wife," and may have taken therefrom the impression that it is a play for which I care. It is. Now-and-again, a play liked when seen in New York survives for transfer to Chicago, and, so, affords to me the opportunity to say to you of a Sunday what, in the general traffic of the theaters, would be matter for print of a Monday or a Tuesday morning. And, if I were so see "Craig's Wife" tonight for the first time, what I should say tomorrow morning would be that it is fine and it is good, and that it belongs in any right catalogue of the five best plays yet written by natives. (I'm unable to recall which of the five best I had seen down to November of 1925 was thrown out of the list to make room for "Craig's Wife"; and that doesn't matter.)

The author of "The Show-Off" has, in this later work, written something as good as "Hedda Gabler" (to which it bears no resemblance whatever), and something more live and persuasive than any "social" play of Ibsen's is today. It may be that I'm doing no favor to Mr. Kelly or to Miss Stewart, who brings out his plays as they are written, when I bring in Ibsen for purposes of comparison or illustration; but the best of the great Norwegian's plays must come to mind, if not necessarily to mention, when the thinking is about fine play-writing. I'm as eager as Miss Stewart, thinking of her receipts, or as Mr. Kelly, thinking of his art, can possibly be to avoid seeming to intimate that Ibsen is the inspiration of "Craig's Wife." My sought point is to tell you that the lesson Ibsen taught to all his contemporaries and to posterity has not been neglected by this young writer, who came out of the two-a-day, wherein he was an actor, to write "The Torch-Bearers," and within not more than two years improved on that witty and slovenly travesty to the incredible extent exemplified in "The Show-Off."

In the item of story, with the consequent episodes and incidents, "Craig's Wife" is topical and apposite to things you know about as "Cradle-Snatchers," or as "The Butter-and-Egg Man," or as "The Show-Off," itself. If you cut in on me here with the expostulation that your understanding is that "Craig's Wife" is "serious," I reply that, in its implications, "Cradle-Snatchers," also, is "serious"; I am unable to think of any other recent play that has caused so much uneasiness and provoked so much hard thinking—in the males of its audiences—as the ramish farce in the Harris. And I know of no other recent play whose dénouement has given to me—and to other males—the same quiet, serene, cleanly joy and satisfaction as the new piece in the Selwyn. The man whose heart is not the abiding-place of peace and happy song as the final curtain rolls slowly down on "Craig's Wife" is a hind, a dud, and an invertebrate, and is fit only for stratagems, spoils, and a job under Mr. Yellowley—than which etcetera.

The two or three changes in the cast since this New-York run have to do with the incidental or the minor characters, and are, as to the identity of the new members, of a kind to make me believe that the performance is bettered by their having been made. The burden of the piece is carried by Miss Chrystal Herne, Miss Anne Sutherland, and Charles Trowbridge; and I, who at times seem to number the actors I know by the million, am unable to suggest wherein what each of them does might be bettered: that is the kind of performance given to Mr. Kelly's play—or, rather, was given to it fifteen months ago. . . . You will, if you like what is best in the theater, like "Craig's Wife"; and I have a conviction that what is left of the season will bring to you nothing else as good as this.

Question and Answer.

SIR: Did you let "Juno and the Paycock" slip into the crevice represented by your illness at the time the comedy was put on in the Goodman, early in the month, and forget to view and to review it? I'm one of many theater-goers I know who watched your column, daily and Sunday, in expectation that you would have something to say about the piece and its performance in Chicago. You seemed interested in it as long ago as when it was acted in London, about which time you wrote an opinion based on the published copy. Our crowd has been to see it. Most of us didn't care for it. Why have you passed it up (or by)?

JANE M. M. MACNEIL.

Chicago: January 24, 1927.

Like most of your crowd, Miss MacNeil, I didn't care for it: that is, for the way in which it was given in the Goodman Memorial. That I refrained from writing about it was, I fear, a vain gesture of negative graciousness: I seemed to think I might be regarded as nice if I permitted the venture to pass without again registering disappointment with a performance there. I was unable to share the delight of my colleagues in Whitford Kane's playing as the Paycock—a rôle that shrieks for Arthur Sinclair or J. M. Kerrigan—and the playing of his associates. I was bored by their insistent fussing with unimportant details; and they gave to me from the stage none of the sense of impending disaster I had taken from reading the printed play. . . . And the play, in performance, only served to reawaken my old admiration for the stark economy with which Synge, Lady Gregory, Boyle, Murray, St. John G. Irvine, Lennox Robinson, and other writers for the Abbey Theater fashioned their works: any of them could have put the essential matter of "Juno and the Paycock" into an hour-long tragedy. Sean O'Casey has a feeling for drama and a flair for ironic comedy; but he is in need of a deal of teaching.

Another letter is from a typewriting actor who, after telling me that I'm Irish, not only hints that THE TRIBUNE is not the W. G. N., but also makes pointed his expression of what he says is his belief that I don't know all there is to know about good acting and bad. A naif and an eager soul, he says he prefers the cheers of a Sunday-night audience in Chicago to my opinion; so, there's no answering him.

Play-List for East-Bound Chicagoans.

The current issue of Variety lists the following as "New York's dirtiest plays": "The Captive," "New-York Exchange," "Sex," "An American Tragedy," "Lulu Belle," "Praying Curve," "The Squall," "The Virgin Man," and "The Night-Hawk." (As the purpose of my reprinting the inventory is to guide Chicagoans about to visit New-York away from what is impure and harmful, it is well in the cause of Service to explain that the title of "Praying Curve" is now "The Love-Thief.") . . . Variety adds that "the failures among the dirtiest plays of this season" have been "The Pearl of Great Price," "Red Blinds," "The Galloping Sheik," and "Seed of the Brute."

And, while on the theme, there is interest in the dispatches saying that New-York's district-attorney is to use his own judgment from now on in the matter of which plays are dirty and which are not, adding that he regards his play-jury experiment as a failure. It has been anything but a failure: nothing funnier as a device of censorship has been even considered since a mayor of Chicago put its esthetic destinies into the keeping of a sidewalk policeman. When his achievements were added up, summarized, and indexed at the end of a season, it was found that he had been of enormous value to the manufacturers of a chromo-copy of the painting named "September Morn."

A Ladder of Prayers.

Martin Brown is the author of the "Praying Curve"-"Love Thief" exhibit. He wrote "The Love Child" and "Cobra," and is a gifted dramatist. Nor are the sins of "The Love Thief" deep scarlet, save in the unpleasant frankness employed in the exposition of ugly characters.

The heroine is a prostitute bound to a bootlegger who loves a consumptive dope fiend gone west to improve his health. High up in the Colorado mountains he dies and his pal, in a spirit of adventure, takes over his name and his correspondence. Becoming a telegraph operator at "Praying Curve," so called because it is the most dangerous stretch of track on the division and a sight of it invariably starts the passengers and the train crew praying that they may negotiate it safely, this lad gets religion. He never, as he writes, has felt so close to God before and he sees in the path of the shining Colorado sun a ladder of prayers that leads directly to the throne of the Most High. His letters inspire the girl with a desire to lead a better life, and once she is free of the grip of her dissolute companions she joins the eloquent letter writer in the mountains.

There she discovers the deception and will have none of him and they both are about to revert to their old lives when an act of heroism on his part brings them together in a spiritually cleansing emotional experience. They are on the highway to redemption and happiness at the curtain.

"The Love Thief" is soundly written drama, but its weakness in the present state of the public mind is that it is so boldly repulsive through its first acts that the highly moral conclusion is hardly strong enough to overcome the handicap. It is well played by Florence Rittenhouse as the girl and Frank Thomas as the redeemed telegrapher.

Mack Writes Another.

We are going in strongly for the exposure of district attorneys, criminal lawyers, and the political trickery of the courts this season. In a way I am not so sure the general effect will not in the long run prove salutary. The playgoing public is at least learning a lot about the rottenness of its unfit servants in office.

Willard Mack's fifth play of the season is one called "Honor Be Damned," with a politically controlled criminal lawyer as its protagonist. His life is said to parallel in effect that of a local attorney named William Fallon, but the truth of the statement is open to question.

This boy has grown up on the east side, acquired a legal education with the help of his political crowd, and is bound in obligation to stick with the gang. A large part of his revenue is gained from "springing" crooks with political influence. But, though his loyalty bids him remain faithful to his own particular Tammany, he insists upon maintaining the high integrity of his family life. His mother and his sister are his chief concern. Then the day he agrees, under pressure, to frame a defense for one of his pals who has committed a defenseless murder, he learns that this same pal is the seducer of his sister and suffers a temporary brainstorm, becoming highly excited and freely profane. At the curtain, however, he is determinedly going through with the defense of the rat he has given his word to protect.

It is not a believable story, breaking sharply when wild coincidence forces the combination of the sister's fall and the call to loyalty. Therefore, I have little faith in its success. Mack has had an unlucky year. The "Fanny" he wrote for Fannie Brice went down by the head. His "Lily Sue," with Beth Merrill, though a good western drama, was just sufficiently outdated to miss a popular success. "The Noose," which was his next, is solid melodrama and is at least a half success. "Hangman's House" lasted only a week, and now "Honor Be Damned" is breathing hard. Mack himself plays the attorney, and William Courtleigh is perfect as a ward boss. But the rest of the cast are only so-so.

Ziegfeld's Pal.

Gene Buck, who has for years been a sort of unofficial lieutenant of the Ziegfeld enterprises, writing songs, suggesting scenes, digging up novelties, etc., emerged on his own as a producer of a Ziegfeld type musical comedy this week. "Yours Truly" it is called and Leon Errol is the star. With a story starting in Chinatown, involving a pretty mission worker, who had rather sing ballads about loyal boy friends than live in luxury on the Stillwood estates, and advancing thence to a garden party on those same estates, "Yours Truly" is quite like the better class music plays in form. It has a Joseph Urban setting, a Tiller Girl chorus, and a lot of clever people in the cast. Marion Harris, a crooning contralto of likeable personality; Jack Squires, and Ina Williams help Mr. Errol, who is comically drunken the first act and nobly sober the second.

Hollywood, Cal.

Mary Astor and Buster Collier have received a pleasant assignment. They are to go on a location trip to the Tia Juana race track during the races to shoot scenes for "The Sunset Derby." Luck like that comes only once in a lifetime, they say in Hollywood.

Marie Prevost and her husband, Kenneth Harlan, have taken a hotel suite to escape the scarlet fever quarantine on their home. Kenneth Basted, 3 year old nephew of Harlan, is the victim, though he is not considered seriously ill. The baby has recently arrived from his home in Detroit and the fever developed shortly after his arrival here.

Echoes of Natacha Rambova's arty ideas and what they cost Valentino came out to roll around a little when a recent claim of George Ullman's for $48,000 against the Valentino estate was granted for money advanced by Ullman to Valentino while Natacha was making "What Price Beauty." That was her personally directed and written production which was shelved.

Hofmann Delights as an Accompanist

By Joan King.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—When Lea Luboschutz, who has been engaged as violin soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra for the Ann Arbor music festival in May, gave a Carnegie hall recital recently, she had as her accompanist no less a musical personage than Josef Hofmann, himself. And this marked the first occasion in many years that the noted pianist had been heard in another rôle than that of recitalist or performer with orchestra.

This blending of the art of two such virtuosos as Miss Luboschutz and Mr. Hofmann should have been, it would seem, the occasion for some showing of an exceptional interest on the part of the general public. But somehow the extraordinary aspects of the event did not hold an appeal, or at any rate sufficiently, for there were empty seats in the hall, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Hofmann without the added power of Miss Luboschutz would have filled the house should he have appeared in solo recital.

Revelation in Ensemble.

The Brahms sonata in G major, César Franck's sonata written for violin and piano, and the G minor concerto by Bruch were chosen as the program for the occasion. Both artists played from memory, and the result was an exceptional ensemble indeed—though no more so than should have been foreseen by those familiar with the powers of the performers. Miss Luboschutz played with warm, sensitive tone and beautiful phrasing. Mr. Hofmann's performance was hardly short of a revelation of what the finest ensemble playing can be. The two instruments were heard as a single unit.

This event was surely a proof upon which to dispute the saying that a virtuoso cannot be a good ensemble player.

Blind Organist Scores.

One of the most noteworthy debuts in a season full of newcomers to opera, orchestra, and recital was represented by the premier bow to New York recently of Louis Vierné, blind Parisian organist.

M. Vierné has been the organist at the Cathedral of Nôtre Dame for twenty-seven years. He is fifty-six years of age. Not only, however, is he an organist of world-wide renown, but he lists among his compositions one mass, five organ symphonies, one symphony for orchestra, and fifty-four shorter pieces, both secular and ecclesiastic.

To those unfamiliar with the career of the French artist, it will be interesting to note that he was born with impaired vision and until the age of 10 could see but little. Medical attention strengthened his eyesight until he became able to read both ordinary print and music by means of a powerful glass. Recently, however, his eyesight failed again and he is now forced to use the Braille system for both reading and composing.

Mme. Marie Richepin, niece of Jean Richepin, French poet and academician who died recently, is his amanuensis. As he composes she translates his work into musical notation. She is in this country with M. Vierné. They will remain in America for two months.

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

REPORT is that "Coal-Oil Jennie," which seemed pretty bad when given in the Blackstone in the Autumn, has been so improved by Frank Craven that it looks like a stellar success. It is now called "Spring from Home"; and the author of the rôle acted here by Ernest Truesdell, while the part of the girl, so badly performed by Miss Blyth Daly, is now cast with Miss Roberta Arnold, who was here not long ago in the bad piece named "Sisters." . . .

Miss Mary Ellis, who gave up opera and operetta to be an out-and-out actress, and Basil Sydney, who has been acting in "King Henry IV" with the North-Shore Theater Guild, are mentioned as co-stars of a play named "The Crown-Prince," by Ernest Vadja, author of "Grounds for Divorce," in which Miss Ina Claire acted here in it.

"The Willow-Tree," a slender little thing of Japanese implication in which Miss Fay Bainter appeared about ten years ago in the Blackstone, has been made into the libretto of an operetta.

Miss Margaret Lawrence, here in the Spring of last year in "Close Quarters" and "Divorçons!" expects to be the star of "The Heaven-Tappers," by George Scarborough and Miss Annette Westbay.

William Hurlbut, who had the nerve to put his name up as author of the recent sheep-dip called "Sin of Sins," announces new plays entitled, respectively, "Recessional" and "Hidden."

J. P. McEvoy, whose revue named "Americana" (and named that with not even a bow to our Mr. Mencken) will have had more than two hundred performances in New-York, says he is at work on a new one that will be musical to 1927.

George Middleton, who's been working at writing plays for nearly three decades, has made a stage-version of "Blood-Money," by R. H. Van Loan, a tale of whose is the basis of "The Racket."

Miss Zöe Akins, who's been without success in the theater since Miss Barrymore acted in "Déclassée," has dramatized a novel named "Veils," by J. J. Davis.

Lyn Harding, not in Chicago in a long time, is acting in London the title in "Twelve Miles Out," which Frank Shannon has in the Cort performances.

"Sam Abramovitch," the play by a Frenchman about immigrants in the United States, was taken off in New-York last night after two weeks. The money to put it on was furnished by the author of "Abie's Irish Rose," who hasn't been a good picker since she turned manager.

A play named "The Roaring Forties," after being put into rehearsal, was ordered rewritten: the point of the producer's instructions to the author was that the twenty-four characters of the original should be reduced to twelve, in the interests of the pay-roll.

J. C. Nugent, who has been back in the two-a-day, is going into something named "A Marriage Made in Heaven," by Hatcher Hughes.

Miss Helen MacKellar is named as the principal actress in a Chicago cast of the play named "The Night-Hawk." It is listed by Variety as one of the nine "dirtiest plays in New-York."

And dirt is said by that frank weekly to explain the measurable success in New-York of a piece named "The Squall," another of the nine. The reviewers, the morning following the première, said the play as a play was so bad that it wouldn't last a week.

Shifting Playbills

This Afternoon:
Miss Ruth Draper in the Harris.—Worth in the Chicago series of six programmes by this unique entertainer. . . . The fifth will be Thursday afternoon, and the sixth next Sunday.

Tonight:
"Craig's Wife," with Miss Chrystal Herne, in the Selwyn.—A play by George Kelly, author of "The Show-Off": the piece has been the subject of frequent mention in The Tribune since its New-York premiere in the Autumn of 1925. Charles Trowbridge, Miss Anne Sutherland, and Miss Isabel Irving are well-known in the cast with Miss Herne.

Wednesday night:
"The Ragged Edge" in the Princess.—The play by Franz Langer acted abroad as "Periphery," and to be given here under the auspices of the Chicago Play-Producing Company, in an English text by George Abbott. Robert Ames and Miss Wanda Lyon head the cast.

"Penelope" in the Goodman Memorial.—Revival of W. Somerset Maugham's light-comedy, acted in this country in 1909-10 by Miss Marie Tempest, with Miss Alexandra Carlisle [Mrs. J. Elliot Jenkins], in the title-part, and Clifford Kane. Their associates will be the resident "professionals."

Monday, February 14:
Miss Laurette Taylor in "The Comédienne" in the Illinois.—The popular favorite for the first time in years in Chicago in a play of statutory length. The piece is by J. Hartley Manners, and is said to be an amplification of the likeable sketch in which she acted last month for a week in the Palace.

Tuesday, February 20:
"A Night in Paris" in the Apollo.—A floor prepared by the Messrs. Shubert on the roof-auditorium of the Century Theater, New-York. The personnel for the show is not yet announced.

Monday, February 21:
"Mrs. McCobb's Daughter," with John Cromwell and Miss Florence Johns, in the Princess.—A play by Sidney Howard about bootleggers in New-England: it is one of the pieces which the Theater Guild of New-York is performing there, where it is said to be a popular success.

New in Manhattan

These are the new things listed for this week in the New-York theaters:

"The Adventurous Age," by Frederick Witney, with Mrs. Patrick Campbell. . . . The return of the British actress to the United States after an absence since 1915 seems to be the most interesting aspect of this venture: the play is one she brought with her in the hope of interesting an American producer in it.

"Sinner," by Thompson Buchanan, with Allan Dinehart and Miss Claiborne Foster. . . . The author was at one time active as a playwright, turning out pieces named, respectively, "The Intruder," "A Woman's Way" (wherein Miss Grace George acted here), "The Five Million," "The Cub," and "Life." The production of the new piece marks the reunion of Mr. Dinehart and Miss Foster, who acted together here in "Two Fellows and a Girl" and "Applesauce."

"Fog," by John Willard. The cast is not available. . . . Mr. Willard wrote "The Cat and the Canary," "The Green Beetle," and "Sisters"; the last-named was a recent disaster in Chicago.

"The Strawberry Blonde," by Martin Brown: the cast is not to-hand. . . . This is the third play by Mr. Brown, at one time a popular song-and-dance lad in the girl-and-music shows, to be made known in New-York in less than three weeks.

"Judy," by Mark Swan, with Miss Queenie Smith and Charles Purcell. . . . Mr. Swan is the author of, among other things, the piece on view in the La Salle. This one, having failed in its original form, has been fitted out with songs, dances, and girls.

"Off-Key," by Arthur Caesar, with Miss Florence Eldridge, Miss Lucille Watson, and McKay Morris.

"Lally," by Henry Stillman, with Miss Anne Morrison and Claude Raines. . . . Mr. Stillman's previous celebrity (if any) has been as a stage-director. Miss Morrison helped to write the minor opus named "Piga." Mr. Raines is an English actor who came earlier in the season to play in "The Constant Nymph"—and he is a good English actor: I have seen him in numerous rôles in London.

"Granite," by Miss Clemence Dane. . . . This is to be performed for the first time in this country by the "group" calling itself the American Laboratory Theater: it was a failure when recently acted in London by Miss Sybil Thorndyke.

"Spellbound," by Walter Elwood. Cast unknown.

PROMINENT IN THE WEEK'S NEW PLAYS

MISS CHRYSTAL HERNE · ROBERT AMES

SHE comes in the title-part of "Craig's Wife," wherein she acted last season in its long New-York run. Miss Herne has not been seen in Chicago theaters in a long time. She is one of the acting daughters of the late James A. Herne, a notable of the stage in his day as an actor, a director, and a playwright. . . . Mr. Ames is returning to act the part of the dancing assassin in "The Ragged Edge," wher ewith the Chicago Play-Producing Company is to inaugurate its season's activities for the redem ption of the drama in this territory. He has not been here in the three years since "Kelly's Va cation" was performed in the Adelphi.

NEW HERE, AND QUITE NICE

MISS VERA NEILSON

SHE is in "On Approval," having replaced Miss Kathleen MacDonell, who had the part of the wealthy spinster in the New-York performances of this bright piece by the author of "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney." . . . Miss Neilson, it seems, is an Australian, is of experience in England, and is in her first visit to the United States. The reporter of plays for The Tribune is of the expressed belief that she is about perfect in her part in Mr. Lonsdale's farce.

novelties are destined to become permanent items in the orchestra's repertoire is another question, depending entirely on the novelties themselves. However, no repertoire can grow except by accretions from novelties that turn out to be worth while.

So this week he plans to play three new pieces. One is "Tintagel," a tone-poem by Arnold Bax; another a "Concerto Grosso" by the central European composer, Krenek—again the pronunciation is not guaranteed, though there is an assurance that it sounds considerably different from what it looks—the third is called descriptively "Variations and Gigue on a Theme by Handel."

From the Apollo Club.

In inclosing a bit of its history, the Apollo Musical club sends word that it is also looking to the future. Its plan to organize other choruses throughout the city is under way, with the double idea of developing interest in choral singing and drafting new singers into the Apollo Musical club as a center. Likewise a number of large women's clubs, the Chicago Woman's club and the Musicians' Club of Women among them, have interested themselves in the drive to raise funds for paying off the Apollo club's deficit and creating its endowment fund.

Historically the Apollo club points out that in the last quarter-century it has sung forty-nine large choral works and fifty-eight part songs. Of the major works, Handel's "The Messiah" is far in the lead, with fifty-three performances to its credit. Mendelssohn's "Elijah" has been sung nine times; Bach's Mass in B minor, eight; the choral part of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, six; Haydn's "The Creation" and Bach's "Matthew Passion," five each. There are four performances for Rossini's "Stabat Mater," Brahms' "German Requiem" and Georg Schumann's "Ruth," and three each for Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise," Goring Thomas' "Swan and the Skylark," Wolf-Ferrari's "The New Life," Mahler's Eighth Symphony and Verdi's "Requiem."

On Feb. 21 the club will add to its repertoire with Coleridge-Taylor's "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast," with Harrison M. Wild conducting, and Frederick Stock's "Psalmodic Rhapsody," with Mr. Stock conducting. Lambert Murphy, tenor, will be the soloist.

Here and There in Music.

Ruth Page, première danseuse of the Adolph Bolm ballet, is to make her first appearance as a member of the Metropolitan Opera company tomorrow night. She is announced for solo dances in the performance of Smetana's "The Bartered Bride."

Margery Maxwell, for seven years a member of the Chicago and Ravinia opera companies, appeared a short time ago in the part of Mimi in "La Bohème" with the Washington Opera company. It was her first appearance in the part, though she had made something of a reputation hereabouts for her first class Musetta in the same opera.

The Haydn Choral society, Haydn Owens, director, is planning its first European tour. It will start July 1 for five weeks' concertising in the British Isles. It will give another concert here before leaving, however. On March 15 it is scheduled for a performance of Handel's "Acis and Galatea." There is a vague rumor that this work was sung here somewhere by some organization about thirty years ago, but to most it is only a name, though containing some of Handel's most beautiful music.

San Francisco sounds the trumpet for its opera season next fall. It will last for two and a half weeks and include twelve works, in content, if not in length, much like the opera seasons here and in New York. They plan to present Puccini's "Turandot" and Giordano's "La Cena delle Beffe," likewise Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde," wherein Alfred Hertz will take over the baton from Gaetano Merola. There is also talk of Thomas' "Mignon" and Verdi's "Falstaff," not to mention the standard list of "Aïda," "Il Trovatore," "Tosca," "Carmen," "Romeo and Juliet," and the rest. Among the artists already engaged are Giovanni Martinelli, Lucrezia Bori, Antonio Scotti, Lawrence Tibbett, Elsa Alsen, Kathryn Meisle, Ina Bourskaya, Rudolph Laubenthal, and Louis d'Angelo.

One of the joyous episodes of the coming National Federation of Music clubs' convention here is the federation's official bulletin for January. Its front page cover carries a picture of the Field museum with the caption, "Imposing stadium on the lake front, Chicago."

NEW MUSIC MAKERS

MARIANNE KNEISEL STRING QUARTET.

HEADED by the daughter of the late Franz Kneisel, in his day a famous violinist and chamber music director, this new quartet will make its first appearance in Chicago next Wednesday evening at the Blackstone. It is one of the few feministic chamber music organizations in the world and its first appearances in the eastern cities have been accompanied by words of praise.

Voice of the Movie Fan

Some Sidelights on Mary.

Dear Miss Tinée: Just finished reading your criticism on Mary Pickford's latest film entitled "Sparrows," in which you declare "you don't know what to say about it." Which, of course, is "fair enough."

Although I have not yet viewed this film, I have anxiously awaited the arrival of same.

While a visitor in Pasadena, Cal., by chance I "ran into" Mary and her company of kiddies taking the final shots of the film. They were exteriors, outside on the lawn of a millionaire's mansion in Oak Knoll, the grounds being "rented out" for the occasion. And what a veritable army of workers were there! Carpenters, electricians, property men, directors, assistants, camera men, maids, a school teacher who held classes in a large, roomy bus parked at the curb, and darling Mary and her gang of kiddies. "Ye gods," I cried to my friend, "what a pay roll she must have!" And they weren't the half of it.

I was jotting down some memoranda when one of the mothers of the company mistook me for a newspaper reporter [which I have always secretly yearned to be] and she confided the following:

"Mary is the grandest person in the world to work for. She is ever mindful of the comforts of her kiddies. That little girl over there [and she pointed her out] is Mary's double. But Mary is game and does most of the risky business herself. She would not ask any one to do that which she would not.

"Notice the wedding ring on her finger. It is soaped to give it the appearance of having a stone. She never takes it off. And by the way, Doug just idolizes her. They get along like two kids. She has one-half the studio yard and he the other.

"That big tall fellow in gray that always stands within close range of her is a detective. You know they tried to kidnap her and she is always under guard. That's her maid you see holding the makeup box in front of her while she daubs some more yellow powder on her complexion to please the director. She bought her maid a nice car. That's how well she treats her servants.

"That canvas chair on the lot next to Mary's marked 'Mrs. Charlotte Pickford' belongs to Mary's mother, but she must be sick today because she is always on the lot. Now just look at the patience she has trying to get Baby Louise Miller to do her stuff after waking up crying from her after dinner nap. And all the retakes!"

I forgot I must confine my letter to one page. Well, anyhow, I now stood right outside the fence where Mary was standing and she beamed at me one of the most pleasant smiles that was ever beamed, which, after all, was grander than all the California sunshine and flowers.

And I'm a sorry lad tonight that her picture, which was originally called "Rags" [being later changed to "Sparrows"], is not destined to be "one of the best sellers." At least, let's not blame poor Mary.

Sincerely yours, STEVE C. R.

Editor's Note: Thank you for this interesting letter, Steve. Please write again!

Feel Free to Kick.

Dear Mae Tinée: This is the first time I've written since I expressed myself about Dorothy Mackaill's ability to play "Peter Pan," but I read you and the Voice of the Fans all the time.

What on earth happened to Kick Korner? We certainly kicked enough to keep it going, I hope. Right now I would kick about several things, but since it is the first sunny day this year, I'll restrain myself.

See you some more, JEANNE.

Editor's Note: Here's where you kick, now, Jeanne. Step right up.

"Peanut's" Opinions.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have written to you once before and you were so kind to acknowledge it. I love your "Good morning's" and "See you tomorrow." You are so friendly and it seems as if I had known you for a long time.

Pit-a-pat, pit-a-pat! Thump, thump, thump. Ker-flop! That's the way my head went when I saw Florence Vidor and Clive Brook in "You Never Know Women." O! Isn't Clive the most wonderful lover! And Florence is so cute and makes such a cute sweetheart.

Gee, isn't love grand, when you have a fellow crazy over you like he was? I cried when she realized that it was too late to know her love because that is so often true in real life, and then he came back to her and they were happy. That is the only picture that has ever thrilled me through and through. And, gee, Mae, guess I have a case on Clive!

Hope you'll acknowledge this letter because I enjoy it and think it's awfully nice of you to print my last letter. Will write again soon. See you later. "PEANUT."

Editor's Note: Awfully nice of you to write, Peanut!

A Vote for "La Boheme."

Dear Miss Tinée: O, I think Mrs. A. H. was so cruel and unjust in her criticisms of the picture, "La Boheme" and of Miss Gish. Never have I witnessed a performance before that I could say was more beautiful than this picture. At times it was so pathetic and then so gay and cheery. The love scenes between Miss Gish and Mr. Gilbert were beautiful.

Then take the scene when Mimi returns home, how she clings to the wagon, then falls to the street and drags herself to the door of her home. Is this what one would or could call the insipid contortions of Lillian Gish? No, never! I went to see the picture twice, and in Mrs. A. H.'s opinion four hours of valuable time have been wasted. I never will regret that I did "waste" four hours to see one of the most beautiful and well acted pictures ever screened.

Now, Mrs. A. H. may not have meant just all she wrote. I think, however, she does broadcast the fact of her having been in France quite a bit.

I'm just happy as can be that you agree with me and gave the picture a pretty good review.

Hurrah! Three cheers for Miss Tinée! Yours truly,

MARGUERITTE G. S.

Enjoyed "Fingerprints."

Dear Mae: [Or is it "Mister Mae," huh?] Just a line to tell you how much I enjoy your column—and you.

"Thanks for the compliment," is what you'll say. Well, Y' wekkum.

Now Mae, please let me say just a bit about a wonderful picture, "Fingerprints." Why, oh, why didn't they give it more publicity? Honestly, I couldn't find a thing wrong with it, and oh, boy, how I love to criticize pictures!

Louise Fazenda [the clever thing] should have more of those character parts. She's a scream.

Do forgive me for this long and boresome letter, but I've never written to one whom I admired so much before.

["MAE FAN"] K. C.

Editor's note: Just call me Mae! And thank you!

Likes the Column.

Dear Miss Tinée: Good morning, or should I say good afternoon? I do not know which, because, I don't know when you will glance at this letter. Or probably it will fly into the waste basket without being opened. But, no, I don't believe Miss Tinée will be so cruel to my poor letter.

Honest and truly, cross my heart, whenever I take a Trib in my hands there are certain features that I have to—yes, have to—read. And the first one is your column. No bunk, you've great when it comes to reviewing movies. Honest, I am not kidding.

Every day in every way I begin to like the pictures produced by Fox. Heretofore I never like them. "The Fool," "Havoc," "Whispering Wives," "The Iron Horse," "The Blue Eagle," and last but not least the "Three Bad Men," have convinced me that I might have been wrong. If I am not mistaken, I have seen these because you recommended them.

Only one or two things more, and I am through. In a battle scene in "The Havoc," the English soldiers were smeared with mud, while the Germans were as clean as soda straws. Even their boots were as shiny as their helmets.

Having had a military training myself, I could not see why that terrible mud of France could not smear the Germans, too. Or were the producers not willing to pay any cleaning bills for the enemy, the supposed-to-be-Germans?

And last of all, Tom Santchy [is his name right?] was a "knockout" in the "Three Bad Men," and the picture itself was a dandy one—one of the best I've seen.

Now I sign off.

SAM G. K.

Editor's Note: Happy to know you like our column! Thank you—and write again!

Mildred Davis Lloyd Goes Back to the Silversheet

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Mildred Davis Lloyd, after four years off the screen (she will be married to Harold Lloyd four years on Feb. 10), is back at work and happy to be at it again. She is at Lasky's in "Too Many Crooks," playing the rôle of a society girl trying to write a crook drama with the help of a lot of nice detectives, who are really crooks, working her for everything they can carry away.

Mildred ran away from the "broads" and "flats" and "spots" (all names for different movie studio lights) for long enough to tell how it feels to be back in grease paint after such a long vacation. She admits she loves it, but the big sticker is Mildred Gloria, the 2 year old Lloyd baby.

Mildred says the first week away from home and the baby was a big strain; she rushed to the studio telephone several times a day just to hear that everything was still all right. The needs of maternal solicitude still recur, but are getting farther apart now.

"You know how settled it makes a girl feel to have a baby," said Mildred. "Well, being back at my old job before a camera has just peeled off that," and she gesticulated with a handle in her eye.

When Parents Start Talking.

Lloyd Hughes is leading man for Mrs. Lloyd, and the conversation all day long between these fond parents is about their respective children—one aged 3 years and the other 3 months—consists of what cute things they do at various ages, how bright they are, and what their future is going to be.

Mildred Lloyd thinks that young Gloria, named for Lloyd Hughes' wife, Gloria Hope, could hardly do better than be an actress like her mother and father and godmother. She could hardly do better professionally than her father, nor matrimonially than her mother.

Mrs. Lloyd reports that progress on the Lloyd Beverly Hills estate is rapid; the tennis courts are in fine shape and Harold and his missus and friends go out every Sunday and play tennis. The house, which is to be of Italian renaissance design, is to have the foundation laid soon.

Progress with Harold is equally satisfactory. Mildred is quite proud of her husband as a husband; they went to the wedding of a friend recently and Harold didn't need to be told to do it; he came home all by himself with a lovely bunch of orchids for Mildred. Mildred is a firm believer that young husbands should come home nights even if, or because, it is Hollywood. Genius or no genius, Harold comes home, and that's that.

A Home for Her Mother.

In reply to a rather nervy question as to what she was going to do with her own money she is earning by working in pictures, Mildred says she is going to buy her mother a house of her own. Not that Harold wouldn't, but Mildred wants to do that herself with her own efforts. It isn't the same, she says, if Harold does it; she wants her work to do it. Just about this point Mildred Gloria called by after getting a fitting for her pink fairy costume that she is to wear to the costume party little Mary Hay Barthelmess is giving Sunday afternoon at the Barthelmess family home in Beverly Hills.

Among the guests who came to visit on the Mildred Davis Lloyd set during the afternoon was Elinor Patterson. She was accompanied by Morris Gest and Max Reinhardt, who are producing "The Miracle" in Los Angeles. Miss Patterson is playing the rôle of the nun. She wore a purple crêpe dress, a small purple felt hat, and a mink full length coat.

Are They "Making Up"?

Constance Talmadge caused considerable stir at the noon hour on Wednesday when she walked into the crowded dining room of the Montmartre with its lunching and dancing crowds accompanied by her husband and Mrs. Vincent Astor. There were other guests in the party, but those two caused the stir.

Alastair MacIntosh, whom Constance announced several months ago she would divorce, seems not averse to spending what time Constance graciously allows him in the society of his wife. Everybody wondered if the appearance together was the forerunner of a reconciliation between the couple, but this Constance denies.

She has been going about here with Buster Collier and a young real estate man from Beverly Hills up to the time Alastair arrived in the party with Mrs. Vincent Astor. Edmund Goulding, the director, also was at Constance's strange luncheon party. Mrs. Astor wore a pale wine colored wool sports frock and felt hat to match, with a fur coat. Constance appeared in a tan accordeon plaited skirt, a green leather short coat, a green and yellow kerchief at her neck, and a tan sports hat.

Edna Mae Cooper Reminisces.

Edna Mae Cooper, who occasionally takes a rôle in a picture and is now working with Pola Negri, was an actress with Gloria Swanson at Sennett's in Gloria's early days. Edna Mae gave up ambitions for a screen career when she married Carl Brown, most famous of picture cameramen, who was Griffith's cameraman and who invented the use of the soft focus and the miniatures in films. Brown photographed "The Birth of a Nation," in which these technical tricks were used first; now Brown is a director.

Edna Mae's reminiscences of those early days are always interesting, and her story of Gloria Swanson and the perfume is quite amusing. Gloria at that time was just beginning to attract notice, and one day there came to the dressing room at Sennett's a large bottle of perfume from some admirer.

Gloria took it into Edna Mae's dressing room and the girls went home together that afternoon and washed their hair. While it was drying they bethought them of the perfume. From the size of the bottle they decided it must be toilet water and decided to try it. The two of them doused their hair plentifully, and as it smelled very nice and the bottle was large they used plenty more till the bottle was half empty. Next day when down town shopping they spotted a bottle of the "toilet water" just like the one Gloria had been sent and the two girls nearly dropped dead when it was priced to them at $300. They had used $150 for their shampoo.

PIANIST

SERGEI RACHMANINOFF.
[Bain Photo.]

A notable pianist and a notable composer, he will appear in a recital at Orchestra hall this afternoon. His program begins with Schubert and passes to Chopin and Brahms, then down to modern times with at least one specimen of his own works, and will end with some of the thunderous feats of virtuosity for which he is famous.

The P N Corrective Figure Garments Give Correct Posture and the Fashionable Lines of Youth

—Third Floor—Dearborn Street—

Miss Louise Gifford, body director of the Theater Guild, New York City, noted authority on posture and body expression, has discovered the secret of slenderness—she has published a course of nonstrenuous corrective movements that make the years and pounds seem actually to disappear. This booklet will be presented to patrons in Our Corset Section Monday, while a limited number last. At sixty retain the youthful lines of sixteen.

Miss Gifford's corrective exercises point a way to correct posture and straighten the spine. The P N Practical Front corset points the same way. The latter is an immediate remedy because the P N Practical Front corset gives a woman "the true joy of looking slim."

Beautiful and stylish, straight in front and back, made of coutil, a striped material and beautiful brocades. Has the exclusive feature of the inner elastic vest that nestles around and hugs the abdomen; topless and medium bust.

Sizes to 36, at $5 to $12

Extra sizes 38, 40 and 42 are available also, and priced at $7 to $12

Churches Will Help Garrett Institute

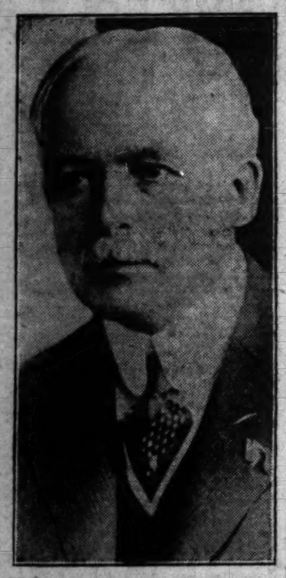
By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

METHODIST Episcopal churches of the midwest will observe today as Garrett day, meaning thereby they will present the cause of the Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston, Ill., in affiliation with, although independent of, Northwestern university.

"It is an ill wind that blows nobody good," is a well known saying. Garrett is an illustration of a good wind that sometimes blows temporary ills to certain people. The building of Wacker drive, for instance, which we regard as a good wind, resulted in the temporary loss in rentals and the added financial burdens of special assessments to Garrett. Other property of the institute has been similarly affected, resulting in a shrinkage in income of $50,000 a year.

The churches have therefore undertaken the task of raising this special fund for three years in expectation that relief will come by that time. A special service of ritual and addresses has been arranged. On Feb. 21 the Methodist ministers' meeting will have a Garrett program and a midyear luncheon.

Dr. H. V. Holt, field representative, says Garrett Day is not primarily for fund raising but to acquaint the membership of the churches with the intimate relationship between the institute and church life.



THE REV. RUFUS A. WHITE, D. D.
[Gibson Photo.]

Special recognition of thirty-five years of service as pastor of the People's Liberal church, at 65th street and Stewart avenue, will be given today at 10:30 to Dr. Rufus A. White. On Friday evening next Dr. and Mrs. White will be given a public social reception, to which all are invited.

Dr. White has been active in the social and civic life of Chicago as member for five years of the Chicago board of education, founder of the Penny Savings society, president of the Children's Home and Aid society, and the leader of the organization and promotion of the Oakhaven Old People's home at 113th street and Western avenue.

The United Lutheran Congregation of Chicago, which is the result of the merger of the Bethlehem, St. Paul's English, and Our Savior Lutheran churches, will hold its regular services hereafter in the Ella Flagg Young school, Waller avenue and Le Moyne street. A site for a new $300,000 building has been selected and work will be begun in the early summer. The Rev. Martin Anderson, D. D., is pastor and the Rev. H. P. Ausan, associate.

Three former pastors of the Englewood Methodist Episcopal church, 64th street and Stewart avenue, will speak today at a home coming service recognizing the fortieth anniversary of the laying of the corner stone of the church building. They are Dr. James A. Beebe, president of Allegheny college, Pa., who will speak at 11 a. m.; Dr. C. Claud Travis, pastor of Epworth church, Edgewater, at 3 p. m., and Dr. W. J. Davidson, president Illinois Wesleyan university, Bloomington, at 7:45 p. m. Dr. H. H. Hough, the pastor, who has received letters from former members in many sections of the country, will have general charge.

The international council of religious education will meet this week at the Sherman hotel. On Thursday beginning at 9:30 week day education will be considered. Among the speakers will be William McAndrew, superintendent of Chicago public schools, and Dr. Hugh S. Magill, general secretary of the international council of religious education.

The Rev. Norris L. Tibbetts, associate pastor of the Hyde Park Baptist church, will speak this evening at 7:30 at the Lorimer Memorial Baptist church, 73d street and St. Lawrence avenue, before the Park Manor and Brookline Sunday Evening club. His subject will be "Whole Cloth."

W. M. Pierce, governor of Oregon for four years, will speak today at three Methodist Episcopal churches. At 11 o'clock at the Irving Park church, Grace street and North Keeler avenue; at 4 p. m. at Downers Grove, and this evening at Western Springs.

The Rev. Frederick E. Stillwell has resigned as pastor of the Fourth Congregational church, Talman avenue and Logan boulevard, and has accepted the pastorate of the Congregational church at Mendon, Ill. The resignation goes into effect March 1. During his three years' pastorate here Mr. Stillwell has led in the erection of a new church costing $85,000.

Dr. L. L. Mann, rabbi of Sinai congregation, will address tomorrow afternoon the northeastern deanery of the Episcopal church at St. Peter's church, 621 Belmont avenue, on the subject, "Are You a Christian?" O. J. Milliken, superintendent of the Chicago Parental school, will also speak.

Catholic Big Sisters will celebrate their tenth anniversary on Tuesday. Mass will be celebrated at 9 a. m. at St. Mary's [Pianist] church, Wabash avenue and 9th street. Conferences will be held later in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel and at 7 there will be a banquet in the Gold room of the Congress. The speakers include Mayor Dever, Bishop R. F. Hoban, Victor P. Arnold and others.

TRUDIE TO TELL FANS OF FAMOUS SWIM FROM W-G-N

On Air Next Sunday in Radio Interview.

Gertrude Ederle, 19 year old conqueror of the English channel, the first woman to swim the treacherous waters that lie between Calais and the chalk cliffs of the Dover coast, will tell radio listeners her own story of her triumphant feat next Sunday evening at 6:45 o'clock over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel.

"Trudie," as the world affectionately calls her, is to be in the city for a series of appearances at the Balaban & Katz theaters, starting Monday, Feb. 14, at the Chicago, and W-G-N has been given the first opportunity to present her to the radio audience. Quin Ryan, W-G-N announcer, who has interviewed many sports and theatrical celebrities over the radio, including Suzanne Lenglen, "Red" Grange, Gloria Swanson, and Richard Barthelmess, will sit down before the microphone with Miss Ederle, and he will ask her questions about her record swim.

Will Tell of Swim.

All the facts about Trudie's famous fourteen hour swim, the methods she used in training, and her sensations while in the water will be covered in the interview.

It was on the 6th of August, 1926, that the New York girl staggered out of the chilly waters of the channel on the sandy beach at Kingdown, England, and found herself famous as the first woman to succeed in spanning the rough straits that lie between England and France. Her triumph was unquestionably the most thrilling sports achievement of the year. Miss Ederle covered the estimated distance of over 31 miles in 14 hours and 31 minutes.

Fans Can Send Questions.

One of the things that listeners will probably hear from the lips of Miss Eberle is her famous expression, "What for?" the question she asked during the midst of the swim when her trainer wanted her to leave the water, thinking the odds too great for her. Trudie will be asked to tell how she felt when she shouted it up from the water at Thomas W. Burgess, her trainer, himself a channel swimmer.

Radio fans who want to know just how Trudie did it; what she ate, what she wore, how she trained, how it felt to spend fourteen hours in the water, and if she was cold, are invited to send their questions to W-G-N, Tribune Tower, Chicago. Fifty of the best questions submitted by listeners will be selected, and these are the ones which Quin will ask Trudie next Sunday evening.

DIAMOND EXPERT TO TELL ABOUT GEMS FROM STATION WLS

What the well dressed woman is wearing in the way of diamonds is the subject of the third of a series of popular talks on diamond jewelry to be broadcast by Emil M. Schmidt, diamond expert, over WLS, tomorrow at 2:30 p. m.

EMIL H. SCHMIDT. [H. A. Atwell Photo.]

Whether she owns many of them or only a very modest engagement ring, every woman is interested in diamonds but usually knows very little about them.

Present fashions in diamonds and the kinds of diamond jewelry suited to enhance individual personalities are some of the topics which will be discussed, along with the points of a precious stone, how to select one and to care for them.

Mr. Schmidt has made a study of diamonds for many years and has recently returned from studying the diamond markets of Antwerp, Amsterdam and Paris.

(Sunday, February 6.) RADIO PROGRAMS FOR TODAY (Central Standard Time.)

TITTA RUFFO, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera company, will be heard tonight at 8:15 o'clock in the New York program over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. Ruffo, it will be recalled, was heard over W-G-N on Nov. 15. His baritone is of a remarkably sweet quality and power, with a range that extends into the tenor and bass registers. A Tuscan by birth, Ruffo spent his early boyhood in Rome. His first emphatic success was effected at Cattania, in Sicily, where he created a furore as Renato in Verdi's "The Masked Ball." Since then he has sung in practically every country of Europe and Latin-America and has attained triumphs in more than fifty operas. In his program tonight he will be assisted by Rudolph Gruen, pianist, and the orchestra under the direction of Louis Edlin.

The Chicago Woman's String quartet will present the Lyon & Healy recital this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The organization is composed of Ebba Sundstrom, first violin; Elsa Becker, second violin; Rosalind Wallack, viola; Goldie Cross, cello.

William Scnwartz will be the soloist in the program arranged by Joseph A. Schwickerath for the Philharmonic orchestra which will broadcast this afternoon from the North Side Turner hall. The orchestra, conducted by Richard Czerwonky, will begin the program with the march, "American Patrol" by Meacham. Among the other orchestral numbers are "Ballet Scene," by Nicode; waltz, "Dolores," by Waldtetufel; march "National Guard," by Aronson; "Lyric Suite," by Greig; selection from "Faust." Walter Hancock, violinist, will play "Chanson D' Amour," by Saar. Mr. Schwartz will sing the aria, "Ma Pari" from the opera, "Martha," and the following group—"Der Leiermann," by Schubert; "Du bist die Ruhe," by Schubert; "The River is Free" by Meyers. The Salernos will be heard during the intermission.

Compositions from Rimsky Korsakoff will be heard during Our Music Room period, 9:15 to 10 o'clock. The Drake Concert ensemble, under the direction of Henry Selinger, will play "Song of the Shepherd Lehl," "Look Upon Thy Garden Fair," "Believe Me Not," and "Like Mountains and Waves." Gilbert Ford, tenor, will sing among other numbers "Song of India," "Romance," and selections from "Sheherazade."

Auld Sandy will be on the air at 8 o'clock for fifteen minutes of Scotch songs, poems, and stories. Correll and Gosden will give one of their popular programs at 7:30 o'clock.

RUFFO, FAMOUS BARITONE, TO BE HEARD TONIGHT

Italian numbers exclusively will be presented when Titta Ruffo, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera, broadcasts his first radio concert in the Atwater Kent series tonight from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel.

The famous Italian singer is a native of Pisa, and spent his early boyhod in Rome. Here the former iron worker has recently built a magnificent palace on the very highest point of one of the seven hills of the Eternal City, overlooking the Santa Cecelis conservatory which rejected him as having "neither voice nor dramatic ability."

He later studied under several professors, but attributes his success to the genius of his brother, Ettore, a musician of note, who coached him for his debut as the Herald in "Lohengrin" at the Teatro Costanzi, in Rome.

His first emphatic success was at Cattania, in Sicily, as Renato in Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera." Since then he has sung in Italy, Spain, France, England, Hungary, Poland, Russia, Germany, Roumania, Egypt and South America.

After a tour of the United States, Ruffo sang with the Chicago Opera company, and later joined the Metropolitan Opera. His broadcasting tonight is the result of the agreement entered into with the Metropolitan management.

LINCOLN AND DOUGLAS TO DEBATE AGAIN FOR RADIO FANS SATURDAY

One of the famous Lincoln-Douglas debates, which first brought Abraham Lincoln into political prominence in America, will be reproduced by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, on Saturday evening, Feb. 12, Lincoln's birthday, between 9 and 10 o'clock.

The Lincoln-Douglas debates were one of the high lights of American political history. Lincoln, Springfield lawyer, entered the senatorial race against Stephen A. Douglas, the "Little Giant," and challenged him to a series of debates throughout the state. Douglas accepted and together they took the same stump in town after town the length and breadth of Illinois. The eyes of the nation were focused on the contest, and it was in these debates that Lincoln first attracted the political attention that was later to bring him the presidency.

Cal's Home State Kicks About Radio Reception

Because of bad broadcasting conditions there, a joint resolution has been passed by the state legislature of Vermont asking congress to press legislation to protect radio users. The matter was formally presented to the senate by Senator Greene of Vermont.

FAMOUS PIANIST TO PLAY FROM W-G-N ON SUNDAY

One of the features of next Sunday's program at W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, will be the appearance, in a special recital, of Silvio Scionti, pianist. Signor Scionti, long a resident of Chicago, is a well known pianist, both in recital and orchestra. His recitals in Chicago and other cities are among the musical events of the season. He studied and won his first successes in his chosen career in Naples. He has appeared as soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra and the [illegible] apolis Symphony orchestra, and has also scored successes in his appearances with prominent chamber music organizations. His recital over W-G-N next Sunday will be heard between 5 and 5:30 o'clock.

SHAKESPEARE TO HAVE PLACE ON LINE PROGRAM

Dennis King to Portray Role of Romeo.

Echoes of Shakespeare, with Dennis King as Romeo, is only one of the many features which R. H. L., conductor of the "Line o' Type" column in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, promises to radio listeners in his third "Line Book Night," which will be heard from WGN next Wednesday evening, starting at 10:30 o'clock.

There will be the customary contingent of "Line" contributors to add their bits of poetry and humor to the program, R. H. L. will give readings from this year's "Line Book," and the WGN mixed quartet will sing "Georgia Sleep Song," a contribution to the Line by E. D. B.

King a Trained Actor.

The Shakespearean portion of the program, however, will be the evening's high light. Dennis King, who is at present playing the rôle of Francois Villon in "The Vagabond King" at the Great Northern theater, is a trained Shakespearean actor. When still a youth he became call boy at the Drinkwater Repertory theatre in Birmingham, England, where his talent first attracted attention, and he was made a member of the company. His promise as a Shakespearean actor soon was apparent. He played many famous Shakespearean rôles, among them Feste, the clown, in "Twelfth Night"; Orlando in "As You Life It," and Mercutio in "Romeo and Juliet."

Following the war, in which he saw service, Mr. King came to America and rose from almost comparative obscurity to play a brilliant Mercutio in Jane Cowl's famous production of "Romeo and Juliet."

Daisy Belmore on Program.

Next Wednesday during "Line Book Night" Mr. King will read the famous balcony scene and the tomb scene from "Romeo and Juliet." Daisy Belmore, another member of "The Vagabond King" company, well versed in the acting of Shakespeare, will read the part of Juliet to Mr. King's Romeo.

Before presenting Mr. King and Miss Belmore, R. H. L. will read a brief resumé of the play and the part of the chorus as an introduction to their joint portrayal of the bard's most famous characters. Special music is being prepared to accompany the two scenes.

One of the most gorgeous burlesques of all time will also be contained in the "Line Night," when "Duke Bakrak," one of the Line's most popular contributors, will address the county chairmen and precinct captains, introducing his candidate for the senate, "Snowshoe Al," who has been making his bid for popular favor in the Line o' Type." Snowshoe will then address the audience, and state his campaign platform and what he will do if elected.

Concialdi to Sing.

An additional musical feature of the program will be the appearance of Eusebio Concialdi, baritone, singing "Road to Vaux," by Madelon, one of the most popular poems that has ever appeared in the "Line." Isaac Van Grove, who wrote the music, will be at the piano.

INSIDE THE LOUD SPEAKER

BY QUIN A. RYAN, W-G-N Announcer

WE have been beleaguered for many weeks by feminine listeners to publish some interviews with two of our Chicago announcers, Harry Geise of WQJ and Bob Whitney of WMAQ.

So we have commissioned our regular interviewer, Mr. Rupert O'Radiator, who has been laying off for some time, to shake hips around and interview the boys. And the following are his findings:

"I have just come from a visit with Happy Harry Geise, whom I found to be a big, jolly fellow and an anti-vivisectionist. He was busy in his garden when I arrived, doing his regular morning hoeing on horseback. He leaped from his horse upon sight of me and slid down the handle of the hoe.

"Harry told me that he used to be a long distance walker. As a boy he worked in his father's store, selling anvils and sunbursts and things to the villagers. One day a linen peddler stopped in the town and got acquainted with the mayor. But Harry didn't meet him, and he didn't know the mayor, either.

"So our story moves on to the World's Fair, where Harry got in free. He spent a most enjoyable day there.

"He is a graceful pianist and came into the radio business by his piano playing, announcing first at WQJ, then at WIBO, and then back again at WQJ. He sings, plays his own accompaniment, and parts his own hair. Even on the coldest mornings of the year he may be seen walking briskly to work, from Wilson avenue to Lawrence.

"As I took leave of him he was starting out to stick some pins in his neighbors' doorbells."

"Bob Whitney, announcer of WMAQ and pianist at the Whitney trio, once played third base with Cap Anson's Chicago White Stockings. After this the carpetbaggers nominated him for congress on their ticket, but he preferred to stay home with his folks; so he withdrew.

"Bob is a very young fellow, most gracious and modest in his demeanor. I sat with him, gazing out at the lake, which was rather hard to glimpse at the time, because he resides in Oak Park. We discussed the Browning case, and I stated that the trial would probably have a detrimental effect on the sale of Browning's poems—and he laughed a bit at me, although I haven't since been able to figure out why.

"His favorite sport is the hunting of squills; he spends his Sundays out in the fields with net and saber, stalking the elusive squill.

"He declared, after some questioning, that he takes three lumps of sugar, and is now reading 'Ivanhoe.'

"He expects to be admitted to the bar in about six months."

"Radio's initial fascination for the listener was in its physical prowess, its knack of leaping a continent and snubbing all obstacles. Back in 1921 our radio sets were homely contrivances, operated with long outside aerials, heavy wet batteries, and head phones, and supplying plenty of occupation for the tinkerer. Listeners were satisfied to snatch from the air a jabberwocky of music and screeches and talk and howls, provided it came from a distant enough source. Men left off telling how far they motored on one set of tires to boast of the distance they jumped about the country by radio in one evening.

"As with the automobile and the phonograph, the squawk-age sets bared their innards to the gaze of the owner, laying themselves open to constant adjustments and toying, a privilege which the buyer rather expected. We had not yet arrived at the age of ease and convenience of operation nor attained the receiving set adapted for fine selectivity, accuracy of tuning, and elimination of static.

"We have seen radio sets come to us in many stages, from the elementary crystal sets, on through the sets with increasing powers of selectivity and amplification, to the electrically operated combination of phonograph and radio receiver with all mechanism and horn concealed. As radio sets have become more and more welcome in the home the designers have made them more and more decorative and substantial."—[From the new Chicago Tribune Radio book, 1927 edition, now on sale at the Tribune Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street, Chicago, or for 15 cents by mail. The book contains the history of broadcasting, a chapter of clippings from this column, a directory of all radio stations listed alphabetically, geographically, and by wave length, and pictures of the various activities and personalities.

STATION WLS engaged in a bully good stunt recently. Announcer Dudley Richards announced on the air that a family in Kentucky named Bartley were looking for a name for their new baby girl. About a thousand names were wired in by the radio fans, and their suggestions were read over the radio. We do not know whether the names of the contributors were announced also, but if they were, it gave the novel game a false impulse.

Anyway, it must have been fun for all concerned, for it brought in many odd combinations of names, including alliterative sets all beginning with "B," such as Bonnie Barbara Bartley.

THE ELEVATOR man's receiving set was chirping last night, and he thought he had the Canary islands.

LAST YEAR the bridge lessons on the radio were discontinued during the summer months, and we hope this popular radio activity will not be dropped this season. But if they are, there are many other enterprises and pastimes in which the listeners can engage themselves simultaneously with the instructions from the radio horn. There is paddling a canoe, and the fan can act out the instructions just as he hears them. And there could be lessons in blowing smoke rings, or spinning tops, or chinning yourself, all of which might be rehearsed in front of the radio set.

WE NOTICE, in the children's mail, that many of the youngsters now about ten years old are named after movie stars who were in their glory at the time the children were born. And it has led us to speculate on whether the popularity of the radio will lead parents to christen their offspring after the radio luminaries. We may not hear of a Graham McNamee O'Reilly, or a Bill Hay Stack, or Mark Love Byrd, or some twins, Sam 'n' Henry Hoogle.

RABBI NATHAN KRASS TALKS TONIGHT AT SUNDAY EVENING CLUB

Rabbi Nathan Krass of Temple Emanu-El, New York City, will deliver an address on "Our Dissolving Ethics" before the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall tonight. KYW will broadcast the services.

WILLIAM P. SIDLEY

Elmer T. Stevens, secretary of the club, will preside at the meeting, and William P. Sidley, trustee, and the Rev. Douglass H. Cornell, pastor of the Glencoe Union church, will have a part in the service. Dr. Cornell also will give the informal Bible talk at seven.

Rabbi Krass is a native of Odessa, Russia, and head of one of the largest congregations in the United States. His two former addresses before the club received wide publicity due to his frank utterances on the subject of race prejudice, religion, stage and church topics.

NBA ADDS SEVEN COAST STATIONS TO ITS CHAIN

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special.]—The creation of a nation-wide broadcasting service, by which the greater part of the 20,000,000 radio listeners in the United States would be reached from central broadcasting studios in New York, Chicago, and San Francisco, is forecast in a statement issued by Merlin Hall Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting company, announcing that a new network of seven leading broadcasting stations is to be formed on the Pacific coast, to be served by programs of the National Broadcasting company from San Francisco.

The stations affected are KFO, San Francisco; KGO, Oakland; KFI, Los Angeles; KFOA and KOMO, Seattle; KGW, Portland, Ore., and KHQ, Spokane, Wash.

Thirty-five in Chain.

With the series of independently-owned stations which now comprise the so-called "red" and "blue" networks of the National Broadcasting company and the group of southern stations recently associated with the system, the new Pacific coast network will increase the total number of stations fed by the program service of the National Broadcasting company to thirty-five. These 35 stations will cover the greater area of the country as far north as Canada, as far west as San Francisco, Portland, and Seattle, and as far south as Atlanta, Ga.

Mr. Aylesworth's announcement made it clear, however, that no change in policy on the part of the National Broadcasting company is involved in the arrangement just completed. The company, he pointed out, continues to own but one station, WEAF, in New York City, although it directs the operation and the program activities of stations WJZ in New York and WRC, Washington, owned by the Radio Corporation of America, as well as of station KFKX at Hastings, Neb., owned by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company.

The first nation-wide test of the network of thirty-five stations made possible by the addition of the west coast stations will come on Washington's birthday, Feb. 22, when President Coolidge's address, to be delivered before a joint session of the senate and house at Washington, will be heard. This will be under temporary facilities arranged for the occasion.

"The National Broadcasting company," Mr. Aylesworth declared in his statement, "is committed to the policy of developing the best possible broadcasting service and of making this available to the largest possible portion of the 100,000,000 people in the United States. It was expected that this might be a task of many months, but the country-wide demand that the great stars of the opera, the eminent artists of the concert hall, and the national features which have marked the outstanding broadcasting programs since the establishment of the National Broadcasting company two months ago be made available to the west and to the south on the same basis as in the east has quickened this process.

100 Stations Want Service.

"Over 100 broadcasting stations in the United States to date have applied for the network service of the National Broadcasting company, and we are extending our program service wherever the public demand is sufficiently great and the facilities for wire interconnection are practicable."

Old Styles Return on Fashion's Wheel

By Mme. X.

FASHION is but a large and slowly moving wheel on which we mortals bind ourselves, as Kipling's wise old lama would say. Around and 'round we turn and if we wait long enough the same mode becomes a part of our obsession. How long is it since we women have sported muffs? Ten or fifteen years, I think, and now these utterly feminine and really useful appendages are once more coming into style, if one can read the signs aright. I have noticed three of our best dressed and most sapient social leaders carrying these furry hand warmers with a half apology as if they did not like to be conspicuous, but had sufficient reason for resurrecting them. As a matter of fact, folk recently returned from Paris report seeing muffs carried by not a few smartly clad women. Here Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Mrs. Lawrence Viles and Mrs. Allen Haines all appeared lately with tiny and extremely dainty mufflets.

As out of the habit of making muffs are our workers in fur that one of these women said when she ordered hers made by her furrier it was sent to her with no other lining than just a satin interior, that is, there was no stuffing in it to give it form and body. All of these pioneer muffs were small and could be easily tucked under the arm when not wanted.

When Huge Muffs Were in Vogue.

Do you remember the huge muffs we once carried? Large, soft, fluffy, capacious, they served as reservoirs of handkerchiefs, purses, card cases, opera glasses, cigaret cases, and everything else that milady was wont to tote around with her. And they were a most costly addition to her winter outfit. Apropos of their capacity, I once saw a woman carrying one of those tiny Chinese "sleeve dogs" in her muff, its snub-nosed face peeping out of one end, its silken tail out of the other. The three I noted this winter will undoubtedly be followed by many more next year, and I foresee an era of muffs of all styles, sizes, and shapes lying ahead of our "pretty waist."

I don't know whether our men will ever take to them. Russians, Poles and others of the Balkan monfolk have, at times of intense cold, carried muffs. Young officers, skating or taking long tramps through deep snow and bitter arctic weather, have been glad to make muffs a part of their outfit in days now long dead.

It takes but a brief time to outlaw fashions. At a little and intimate party recently, a hen party, where impromptu fancy dress was indulged in, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick came in the ordinary evening dress of today, but wearing a black velvet hat that had been considered a beautiful creation in 1911-'12. It was of incredible size, so large in circumference that she had to tip her head far over sidewise in order to get into her automobile. Its brim spread far beyond the outermost edge of her shoulders. Its crown was likewise of vast extent and dominated by a clump of towering and superb gray feathers, as large in size as the leaves of a royal palm. You know those soft and feathery fronds that float out from that loveliest of tropical trees. The effect of this headgear was stupendous. It seemed impossible to believe that so short a time ago as 1911 a hat of these overpowering proportions had been the mode.

It will not be many years hence when we shall wonder how in heaven's name women of any modesty could wear the present delightful and revealing short skirts. That is, perhaps, time will turn us back to longer ones. If not, and the style goes on developing along present lines, we may in a year or so be wearing trousers, or even close fitting knee breeches.

Gowns Sponsor Knickerbockers.

An observer lately returned from New York was enthusiastic over a frock she saw at one of the most a la mode dressmakers. It was of black satin, soft and shining, the waist low necked with a transparent and full lace skirt through which black satin knickerbockers were revealed. It sounds a little startling, but the fashion was predicted by one of the winter's chicest Paris models, which has been popular with our best dressed women. This was a black velvet evening gown whose rather full skirts were so fashioned that while they came together in front, they were really open, and if the wearer took a long step or sat down carelessly, a natty pair of black velvet knickerbockers could be seen by the observant, although a casual onlooker might not recognize them as such. It was really quite an elegant and extremely becoming costume.

Many women wish that the present fashion of uncorseted figures, shingled heads and short skirts might always remain, with such modifications as are inevitable in even the plainest garb. Never have we women been so sanely, so comfortably attired since we migrated from tropical tree tops, lost our tails and became cave dwellers. But it would be too much to hope that manufacturers of dry goods, dressmakers, hair dressers and corset makers will "leave us be." They must all provide shelter, food, drink, and clothes for themselves and their families, not to speak of the many other things that go to make up the sum of human life and happiness, and the mutability of styles is the very foundation of the means of their existence.

Collecting Firebacks.

Speaking of modes, one of the latest fads in the realm of that mysterious class of mortals who delight to collect things is iron firebacks. These are to be found at the back of old fireplaces. They are of blackened iron and have repoussé designs. Some of these designs are rich and rare. Ships under full sail, baskets of flowers, clumps of shrubbery, set designs of fleur de lys or similar patterns, animals, vegetables and so forth are delineated on these ancient and now almost extinct species of adornment.

My informant as to this latest of fads was Mrs. Allen Haines who is collecting specimens of this lost art—for what do you suppose? Not to put in the back of the fireplaces of her charming new skyscraper cottage in New York, but to ornament its outer walls. The Haineses have one of those new abodes, "pent houses" they are called, set on the roof of tall buildings, where light, air, silence and space are sought.

The adaptability of man to environment is one of his strongest characteristics. Without this quality no living species could survive. We Americans have it to a striking degree. Having made of our city streets dark, noisy, airless canyons, where daily life is well nigh impossible, and real health is quite out of the question, we go to work and devise places in which to live that overcome these defects. The pent house on the top of a skyscraper solves, for some, a mighty problem.

The Smart Maisonette.

Much the same class of pioneer is the dweller in what is called in New York the "maisonette," which is a lowly little mansion crouching close to the street and made out of an ancient stable or shed or little house, relic of a bygone age. These are to be found in many of Gotham's by-streets. The maisonettes look most alluring. They usually have window boxes, in winter set with glossy evergreens; in other seasons with gay growing flowers. Smart curtains are visible. The exterior radiates color: red bricks, bright green, blue, or yellow doors and window frames, a fancy roof, and an air of entire spick and spanness which has a desirable quality and a charm not to be found in the most sumptuous of upper Fifth avenue's palaces.

There is no question that a made over house usually has an individuality and attractiveness about it often lacking in the most artistic modern dwellings. If several generations of men, women and children of a certain means and culture have lived in a house they leave behind them an ineffable quality that seems to cling to the walls and floors and give these inanimate things life and character. I suppose that it really is because those who came before us had an innate sense of proportion either entirely lacking in us, or crushed out by the so-called necessities of a more peopled age. We cannot, or think we cannot, afford high ceilings, spacious rooms, tall doors, handsome staircases, and those other features of houses fifty or more years old.

In Chicago we have not yet come to the pent house or maisonnette period, but it is not far off. Families that have hitherto thought they needed a certain amount of space are just now beginning to find out in how much smaller a space they can live and not be too uncomfortable. More and more is it becoming our habit to scrimp in our town quarters and to make the house in the country the chief abode. The winter program of such as do this is supposed, of course, to include only a comparatively short stay in the city and a cheerful outing to distant climes, before returning to the task of opening country houses and setting gardens going. Eager to be in the mode, this p. p. p. set out last Tuesday for southern California and will endeavor to chronicle for its readers the doings and surroundings of that numerous band of Chicagoites who annually flock thither in increasing numbers.

Indiscreet Biographers.

We seem at the moment to be in an epidemic of indiscreet biographers or chroniclers of the times; luckless mortals who write candidly about their contemporaries, hitting at both the living and the dead. Col. Wright, over in England, will henceforth be known chiefly as the besmircher of a hitherto admired and revered statesman. The sons of the late Lord Gladstone have sprung to the defense of their father's name from an attack that is either false or ill-timed. Whether he is proven a teller of the truth or a liar, Col. Wright has lost out in the case.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Nearer at home are three babbling contemporaries, two of whom might be labeled Chicagoites, who are attracting more notice than they are inspiring affection. One of the trio is a New Yorker. Mrs. Philip Lydig, in her series of articles in a magazine, arraigns her social world, citing many cases of delinquency and worse among the people in New York's smart set and elsewhere in such a way that any one at all familiar with the members composing this august body of people cannot fail to put names, places and dates to the occurrences related therein. These diatribes are eliciting remarks the reverse of complimentary about the quondam beauty and belle from New Yorkers in the know. It seems not improbable that in deciding to send out to the avid public this picture of America's so-called most exclusive and fashionable society she knew she was burning her bridges behind her and did not care to play in their back yards any more, for she would hardly be a welcome guest in certain well known households today that once welcomed her as an ornamental addition to their entertainments.

Even more personal and scathing in her denunciation of people of whose world she was once a part is Mrs. Leslie Carter, whose narrative of her own life is now appearing in that cheerful and chatty weekly, Liberty. She is more open in her attacks on her contemporaries, as she mentions names as well as dates and places in the incidents she portrays.

The writer never knew Mrs. Carter, but did have the pleasure of knowing Leslie Carter, a quiet, pleasant, intelligent gentleman. His former wife has, in a way, done him a service in this series of articles, for if any one did not understand why he divorced her the reason is quite patent here. By the way, has a divorced wife the right to use her husband's baptismal name? Shouldn't Mrs. Carter write herself "Mrs. Louise Dudley Carter," or, as is the fashion today, "Mrs. Dudley-Carter"?

Howard O'Brien, the third of the trio of indiscreet chroniclers of their times and contemporaries, may not make any money out of his recently published work, "Wine, Women and War," but at least he has saved himself the price of a ticket back to Chicago. I have not read the book, but from what I hear about it I should think the climate of anywhere else than Chicago would be better for him than anything that we can offer him hereabouts. I am sorry, for he is a most attractive, good looking, and interesting young man. What a dull world it would be, however, if there were no indiscreet folk! Pepys, Boswell and their ilk would never have attained fame had it not been for their utter lack of delicacy and consideration, God bless 'em!

A Most Appealing Charity.

My attention has been called recently to one of Chicago's really appealing philanthropies, an enterprise not so widely known as it deserves to be, the Anti-Cruelty society, which has its home at 155 West Grand avenue. It was founded in 1899 largely by the activities of Mrs. Theodore Thomas, aided by Mrs. Sydney Taber and other lovers of animals. Up to that time there was no haven for lost, abandoned or vagrant dogs, unhappy creatures that were the butt of every brutal passerby and who had to be scavengers to maintain life.

What started in a small way has now become an efficient institution. It shelters from fifteen to thirty dogs at a time. It puts the sickly ones painlessly out of the way; for healthy ones it finds homes. To facilitate the work of those who find stray dogs the society will pay the taxi fare of anyone bringing in such an animal. The place is open practically all the time, as the people who are in charge of the place live upstairs at 155 West Grand avenue. Dr. Scheiber, the superintendent, is there from nine o'clock in the morning until late in the afternoon. A watch is kept on the papers advertising lost dogs. The place is well worth a visit, especially from any one looking for a healthy dog as a household pet or protector.

The officers of the Anti-Cruelty society are: President, John J. Abbott; vice president, George W. Dixon; treasurer, Lewis E. Meyers; assistant treasurer, Robert J. Hercock; honorary president, Mrs. Theodore Thomas; honorary vice presidents, Edward B. Butler, J. Fenimore Cooper, John V. Farwell, Dr. Fred Formaneck, Ernest Graham, James M. Hopkins, Mrs. Walter Inbusch, Edwin S. Jackman, Julius Rosenwald, William Wrigley Jr., and Miss Edith Wyatt.

The directors are the Mesdames David Adler, R. T. Crane Jr., John Farwell, R. R. McCormick, Norval H. Pierce, R. R. Richardson, Alexander F. Smith, Alden B. Swift, Hathaway Watson, Mark Willing, the Misses Mabel Linn and Lucy Martin, and the Messrs. Robert Allerton, Albert R. Brunker, Howard Gillette, Chauncey McCormick, and John T. McCutcheon.

About Three Books.

Apropos of the last named, have you seen that charming little blue-gray covered book Mr. and Mrs. McCutcheon have sent out to some of their friends, called "The Island Song Book"? It is a delightfully gotten up souvenir of their West Indian paradise, "Treasure Island," with songs native to the Bahamas and others writ by the McCutcheons and their friends to celebrate some special occasions. It has delicious sketches by Mr. McCutcheon and snapshots of the features and folk of the place. To any one who has been there it will recall the innumerable joys of that delectable and inaccessible island and its wonderful hosts. To others who know it not this little volume will convey a consuming desire to see it. Therefore, let those fortunate ones who are recipients of this book of songs keep it out of the hands of those who know not the island, lest unrest and longing destroy them!

Still another attractive volume that has lately come the way of this p. p. p. is of quite a different character. This is "Allendale Annals," by Edward L. and Maud Menefee Bradley, the two presiding genii of this wonderful maker of men, for that is what Allendale is. It takes lads of any age from childhood up, boys who have had little or no show in life, who have come against the law, who have been outcasts and waifs, and makes of them fine, upstanding, self-respecting citizens.

In this well gotten up and attractive volume Col. and Mrs. Bradley tell the story of Allendale from its small and somewhat discouraging beginnings to its present recognised position as one of the outstanding enterprises in the country, a model for all others of its kind and an object of pride and affection to all who are in any way connected with it, whether from the outside or the inside.

The many tales of the boys and their doings, their pride in the farm, their achievements in the settlement during their stay and after they have left this, the only real home most of them ever knew, make absorbing reading. The book is printed, bound, and published by the Allendale Press and is as fine a piece of workmanship as one could ask.

Still another book, of quite a different character but of utmost value to those Chicagoans who are interested in the city's welfare and standing, is one issued from the University of Chicago press and written by one of its professors, Carroll Hill Wooddy. It is entitled "The Chicago Primary of 1926; A Study in Election Methods." In it is carefully set forth much contemporary history, together with pen portraits of all of the conspicuous figures in the local, state, and national politics of the state of Illinois. It is candid, careful, just, and not calculated to fill its readers with any particular pride or confidence in their present political leaders.

It would be of infinite value to our permanent welfare if this book could be distributed to every voter in the state and if each recipient would give it careful study. If things are as herein described, the people of Chicago should at least become acquainted with the facts. If such knowledge didn't arouse desire for reform, then "vogue la galere," which, in old fashioned verbiage, means "let her rip," and those who don't like to live in a commonwealth run as this part of the land is should get out. I'm not talking politics or parties. I'm simply urging you to get this dun colored, neatly printed pamphlet and read it. Then lend it to your neighbor and tell him to pass it on. It's easy reading and extremely interesting.

A Venture in Stage Tactics.

On Wednesday of this week comes the open dress rehearsal of the Chicago Play Producing company's first of three plays, "The Ragged Edge," adapted by George Abbott from Max Reinhardt's Berlin success, "Periphery," by Frans Langer. This first performance is to be given at the Princess theater, and I am told the use of the stage will be particularly interesting.

It is to be divided into three parts—two large sections upstage, and a third running across them parallel with the footlights. Sometimes one of these divisions will be used, sometimes another, by means of shifting lights. The divisions, or walls, are made by moving scenes, and can be changed in size at any moment.

On the list of those of our fashionable world entertaining at the dress rehearsal Wednesday evening are the Byron Harveys, the John Bordens, the William S. Monroes, Mrs. Louis Guensel, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Marx, Arthur Aldis, Arthur Bissell, the Joseph Ryersons, the Andrew Sherriffs, the Carter Harrisons, the Howard Willetts, the Charles Strobels, and the William V. Kelleys.

Mr. Bissell is president of the Chicago Play Producing company, Mrs. George F. Porter and Ira Nelson Morris are vice presidents, and Miss Helen Dupee is secretary and treasurer.

Paris Does Know Beauty

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Every summer I go to Paris, when my stage work ends, to learn the latest aids to beauty. Paris gave me as a girl the beauty that made me famous. She has kept my youth. So I go there yearly to get her latest discoveries, just as dressmakers go for styles.

I bring them back to you. Every help I use is supplied by all toilet counters. It is at the call of every girl who wants more beauty, of every woman who wants youth.

One is Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Cream. That combines many helps in one. It contains, among other things, products of both lemon and strawberry, the greatest of complexion aids. But there are several other modern helps of great importance to the face skin.

My Youth Cream comes in two types—cold cream and vanishing. I apply one at night, the other in the morning. Never is my face skin without this care and protection. Please note the result. Few young girls have a complexion as soft and as rosy as mine. Yet mine is a grandmother's age.

I urge you to try my Youth Cream. It will surprise and delight you. It will bring you a new conception of what cream can do. If you wish to try it before buying, mail the coupon. It will bring you a sample tube, also my Beauty Book. Clip coupon now.

For Trial Tube A&S C.T.

of Youth Cream mail this today to Edna Wallace Hopper, 336 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Big Sisters Observe Decade of Service

By Kate Webber

MEMBERS of the Big Sisters will have a full day on Tuesday in observance of the tenth anniversary of the organization's founding. At 9 o'clock in the morning there will be an anniversary mass at St. Mary's church, followed by a business meeting at the Congress. The Hon. William Cummings, John A. Lapp and the Rev. Frederick Siedenburg will be the speakers.

Following luncheon there will be a short conference, when persons prominent in the handling of Juvenile court cases will contribute their experiences. A scholarship conference will be held at 2:30 o'clock, with Mrs. William S. Hefferan leading the discussion.

At 7 o'clock in the evening an anniversary banquet will be held at the Congress, with Mrs. George V. McIntyre presiding. The speakers will be Bishop Dever, Bishop Edward F. Hoban, Mrs. J. Edward Thorndike, Judge Victor P. Arnold, the Rev. Francis P. Duffy and A. Owsley Stanley, former governor and senator from Kentucky.

It was just a decade ago that a group of women organized in Chicago for preventive and protective work for girls under the name of "Big Sisters." The result has been that problems previously considered of tremendous and sometimes insurmountable difficulty have been solved with lasting benefit to the underprivileged juveniles in the community.

Membership of 2,000.

Systematic organization makes the operation of the Big Sisters, through seven committees and a staff of trained workers, a comparatively simple matter, in spite of the membership of almost two thousand women. Daily attendance at sessions of the juvenile court, listening to testimony and thereby gaining a true understanding of the cases they wish to help, is the duty of the courts committee; the members then follow up the cases until adjustments are made.

Finding a lost daughter for a grieving mother, a home for a new baby, a boarding home for a young girl stranger in the city, a bed for a sick and destitute child, dental and medical care for a countless number of girls—these are among the duties of the welfare committee.

With scholarships in a normal school, in many of the city's business colleges, in private and public grammar schools and high schools, the responsibilities of the scholarship committee are great, as the recreational hours of the scholarship girls must be supervised. Consideration must be given to the many applications for scholarships from various sources, and efforts must be made to enlist the aid of as many generous minded persons as possible, in order that no plea may be refused.

Meeting the Needs of All.

In a month's work the Big Sisters run the gamut of every need of girlhood. They come in contact with poverty at its utmost, and with degradation. The constant procession through the offices of girls ranging in age from the tots with hurt, wondering eyes, to the sophisticated flapper of 17 or thereabouts, makes an irresistible appeal for service and help.

Many thousands of these little sisters have found sympathy and understanding in their bewilderment during the last ten years. They have received encouragement and praise when merited. And the records of the organization prove a comforting percentage of girls show promise of blossoming into worthy womanhood.

MRS. JAMES R. IRELAND. [Monfort Photo.]

THE tenth anniversary of the Big Sisters is to be celebrated on Tuesday, beginning with an anniversary mass in the morning, and continuing with business sessions all day and a banquet in the evening. Details of the organization's work are to be found in today's club notes.

Of exceptional interest is the announcement of the organization of the Native Daughters of Illinois, which will have its opening meeting next Thursday at 2 o'clock at the Palmer house. Mrs. Charles J. Trainor is president, Mrs. Donald I. Graham and Mrs. Walter W. H. Schwedler, vice presidents; Mrs. Rosamond Birabella, recording secretary; Mrs. Bessie Dyniewicz, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Paul Gerhardt, treasurer.

The twenty-five clubs in the third district, I. F. W. C., will be guests of the Chicago Lawn Woman's club on Tuesday, when there will be a luncheon at 12:30 o'clock, talks by the club presidents, music and a handicraft exhibit. Mrs. James R. Ireland is president of the hostess club, which hopes soon to have its own club house.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

Prof. Gaetano Salvemini of Florence, Italy, will speak at the Wednesday meeting of the Chicago Woman's club. A program on poetry and music will feature the Sunday open door tomorrow. At the meet of the study class of the education and philosophy department tomorrow Mrs. William J. Hagen and Miss Ella Boynton will preside. Tuesday morning there will be meetings of the house and Park and high school committees. The art section will meet at 10:30 o'clock at the art institute for the annual tour of the exhibits. The literary class will meet on Wednesday morning, and the two French classes will have their usual sessions that day. The class in effective speaking will meet on Thursday, when members will give one minute speeches. The forest and garden class will meet on Friday, and there also will be a legislative conference that day, with traction and other bills under discussion. Arthur Ponsonby, M. P., will speak at a luncheon given on Saturday by the national and international relations committee.

Following the meeting of the board of managers of the Woman's City club at 10:30 o'clock, the club breakfast will be held. The parliamentary law class will meet on Wednesday morning, as will the food and markets committee. John Doughty and Flint Grinnell will speak at the latter. At noon there will be a meeting of the Cook county affairs and public institutions committee, and at 2:30 o'clock Dudley Crafts Watson will speak before a joint meeting of the education and current book review committees. The transportation committee will meet for luncheon on Thursday. There will be a luncheon meeting of the housing and zoning committee on Friday.

Meetings at the headquarters of the I. F. W. C. this week include the public health and child welfare committee on Tuesday morning, the music department in the afternoon, a meeting of the magazine committee of the Illinois Clubwoman's World on Wednesday at 2 o'clock, and the education department on Friday morning.

Dr. Morris Fishbein will speak at the monthly tea of the education department of the Chicago Woman's Aid on Tuesday. The art committee will sponsor a tour of the Art institute galleries on Wednesday at 1:30 o'clock. Dr. Solomon B. Freehof will give his second lecture before the art and literature department on Thursday at 3 o'clock. The French classes will meet on Friday morning.

The first district of the Illinois State Association of Graduate Nurses will give a luncheon tomorrow at 12:30 o'clock at headquarters, when prominent medical men, chiefs of hospital staffs, and presidents of women's auxiliary boards will attend and discuss the merits of group nursing, a new plan being considered workable in hospitals. The district will hold its annual meeting on Tuesday afternoon and evening, when annual business and election of officers will be on the program.

Carl O. De Dardel, Swedish consul at Chicago, will be the speaker on Thursday evening in the course on art appreciation at central branch, Y. W. C. A., with Mrs. Charles H. Hubbard as chairman. Dr. Caroline Hedger will speak on nutrition and reducing tomorrow evening. Membership month is being observed at the Y. W. C. A. centers during February. A world fellowship meeting and supper will be held on Tuesday evening, and on Friday there will be a membership tea.

Mrs. Maurice H. Ingalls is chairman of a dinner dance to be given tomorrow evening at the Edgewater Beach hotel by the Illinois Colony club.

A board meeting of the Lake City Woman's club will be held on Wednesday morning at the Morrison hotel, followed by luncheon and cards.

The Woman's Relief corps, department of Illinois, will give its annual luncheon tomorrow at the Palmer house, with the national president, Mrs. Edith Mason Christy of Oberlin, O., as the guest. Mrs. Walter M. Antrim is chairman of arrangements. At 11 o'clock a bronze tablet of Gen. John A. Logan's message establishing May 30 as Memorial day will be presented to the G. A. R. headquarters in the Memorial building.

Mrs. Mathew T. Fitzpatrick is chairman of the third annual dinner dance and card party of the Friends of the Aged Woman's club, to be given on Friday evening at the Edgewater Beach hotel.

Members of the Baron Hirsch Coworkers will give the program on Tuesday afternoon before the Baron Hirsch Woman's club.

The Chicago Mount Holyoke club will give a card party and tea for the benefit of the scholarship fund on Saturday at 2 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Arthur Conseer, 404 Fairview avenue, Park Ridge.

The parliamentary law class of the Catholic Woman's league will meet on Saturday at 1:30 o'clock, followed by the business session.

President Max Mason of the University of Chicago will be the speaker at the meeting of the Chicago Society of New England Women on Thursday at the Blackstone.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

"WELL, what do you think of that!" said one department member to another, as the two met in the corridor after the meeting. "Putting up a woman like Mrs. Bonty for chairman when she hasn't done a thing for the department. Why she's hardly attended any meetings until just recently."

"I should think it would make Mrs. Clem's election all the more probable," answered the other. "She's worked in the department since she came into the club, five or six years ago, and she's exceedingly well fitted for the job."

"Indeed she is. She always shows interest and is loyal, and if service such as she's given isn't recognized, I think we're in rather a poor way. But we'll have to be watchful, Mrs. Bonty has a strong hold on her group."

"Yes, she has. I understand that her candidacy was launched by her friends at a lavish luncheon she gave for them at her father's hotel—a sort of political luncheon. I guess you're right, we'll have to be watchful. The chances are they'll work for her tooth and nail."

A third member of the department came up and greeted the two.

"I hope you ladies are going to vote for Mrs. Bonty. We need new blood in the department. It isn't good to have the same ones holding office again and again. You both will vote for her, won't you?"

"I'm going to vote for the one who has worked for the department and helped to build it up," answered one of the two. "I believe in civil service in our clubs as well as in civic life."

"The same here," replied the other. "I believe in new blood, all right, but I believe in it where it belongs—on a committee or in a minor position until we see whether or not it's good blood."

"Oh, all right," replied the supporter of Mrs. Bonty as she passed on down the corridor.

"I guess that will hold her for a while," remarked the one.

"Meantime, I'm getting busy for Mrs. Clem," announced the other.

Question.

"When a chairman is unable to tell which of two members has arisen first to claim the floor, how can the question be decided? CHAIRMAN.

Reply.

By a majority vote.

Question.

"Some of our members think that our parliamentarian should not be a member of our board. Should she?

"M. T. N."

Reply.

No, nor should she serve on a committee that makes it necessary for her to take sides in matters upon which her opinon as parliamentarian may be desired later.

L. H. McCormicks Motor on Riviera

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NICE.—[Special Correspondence.]—Among the prominent Chicagoans spending the winter on the Riviera are Mr. and Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick and their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Leander McCormick, who have been at the Hotel Majestic, Cannes, for several weeks.

The senior McCormicks are frequently seen at Nice and Monte Carlo, but are living quietly, doing little entertaining, and seeing only a few intimate friends. Like most who know the Riviera well, they prefer motor trips to the surrounding picturesque wild mountain country to the hectic baccarat tables.

Another Chicagoan who has discovered this truth is Mrs. Francis Whitehouse, who motored from Paris and now is at her winter palace here for a short stay. She is proceeding by motor in short stages to Rome.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Vanderbilts Cause Many Conjectures

By Dolly Madison.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—As a rule, society concerns itself little with the affairs of its own members. Divorces, of course, receive their need of attention and then become an old story, while a separation of two notables soon becomes an accustomed state of affairs with nothing about the matter to arouse interest.

For many years now New York society has complacently been aware that Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt II. were living apart. To find Mrs. Vanderbilt and her husband at the same gathering, but with different parties, was far from a noteworthy incident.

The debuts of their daughters, Consuelo and Muriel, several seasons ago aroused some question of a possible reconciliation, and a great deal of comment as to whether the debuts would be jointly sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt. However, in the most casual way, the two girls were presented in their particular seasons, and their marriages followed, Consuelo's to Earl E. T. Smith, and Muriel's to Frederic Cameron Church of Boston. Society once more contemplated with unconcern the separate existence of the W. K. Vanderbilts.

A Marriage in the Offing.

However, all this is changed. Developments recently brought to light have caused as much excited conjecture along Park avenue as among the readers of the newspapers who know society only from the prints.

Every one is convinced that a marriage between W. K. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Lancaster Warburton is in the offing, and the departure of W. K. for Europe several days ago, gave society additional cause for wonder, inasmuch as Mrs. Warburton was scheduled to sail yesterday for France. The topic that most agitates the smart set at present is just what Mrs. Vanderbilt will do should W. K. succeed in obtaining his freedom abroad. Not in ages has society itself been so interested in the affairs of several of its members, and at present it is just as much at sea as any others.

Season Has Gone Southward.

Despite the fact that there are still a great many balls and amateur entertainments to be given during February, the season has definitely moved southward. That important member of the Palm Beach colony, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., and Mrs. Biddle, accompanied by Anthony III., left on Monday to occupy their villa on the Ocean boulevard.

Mr. Biddle, whose father, Major Biddle, is society's best amateur boxer, is unusually active in Palm Beach affairs. He is president of the new Bath and Tennis club, which opened this season for the first time and threatens to become as exclusive as Bailey's beach at Newport. Certainly an effort is being made to keep Palm Beach sacred to the cottage owners, despite the fact that there is no intent to destroy its faintly Bohemian mixture of artistic and social celebrities.

Young Tony is also a governor of the Oasis, which is sacred to men, or bachelors as they are termed, though most of the officers are married and quite contented with their wives and families.

Others who left this week for the south were Alice De Lamar, Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Macy, and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie II.

Quite the newest departure at Palm Beach is the Amphitrite, which while rejoicing in the dignified appellation of an hotel, is fundamentally an exmember of the United States navy.

The rival of the sprawling Poinciana and the new Alba is anchored some 300 feet off shore on the bosom of Lake Worth, and makes a spot of vivid color with its awning hung decks. Already the S.S. Hotel Amphitrite is becoming popular at tea time. Princess Francisco Rospigliosi is staying aboard the hostelry and Mrs. R. T. Wilson intends to make it her pied-a-terre when she leaves for the south.

"Why Not?" Is Great Success.

Somehow Spence school seems to produce more talent than most of the other fashionable schools in and about New York. The annual alumnae show which always holds forth at the Plaza was given Thursday and Friday nights. In the form of a musical revue, labeled "Why Not?", it held forth in two acts and twelve scenes, covering everything imaginable from Carmen to a terpsichorean exposition of the Rhapsody in Blue given by the nimble footed Frances McCoon.

As usual, the ballroom of the Plaza was filled with matrons and their subdeb daughters, utterly thrilled at this pre-view of the social world that will be theirs in a season or two.

Two scenes from Carmen were greeted with much applause. The leading rôles were taken by Mrs. D. Chester Noyes, Mrs. William F. Irwin, Mrs. T. J. Johnston Mali, June Hess, and Faustina Munroe.

The audience, which on both nights was quite in a holiday mood, and didn't at all mind the length of the show, which gave little of the remaining time for dancing, included Mrs. Henry Rawle, Mrs. E. Lloyd Sanderson, Lois McCall, Mrs. Lawrence Copley Thaw, Constance Kinney, Eva Taylor, Dorothy Warren, Betty Baldwin, Louise Watts, Dorothy Havemeyer, and Margaret Knott.

The Last Junior Assembly.

Another concluding note of the season was the third and last of the junior assemblies at the Ritz-Carlton on Friday. A great thorn in the sides of those debutantes not fortunate enough to be sponsored as members, the last of the dances kept the same swagger tone of its predecessors, though the attendance was not quite so large as that of the second dance, which took place in the middle of the Christmas holidays with all the younger men home from college and eager for parties.

Nevertheless, Friday's dance was exceedingly colorful. Many dinners were given in advance, and among those who were in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Batterman, and Marion Batterman; Mrs. Edward W. Sparrow, Hope Borden, Mrs. Richard C. Colt, Mrs. James Gore King, Mrs. Marshall Dodge, Mrs. Walter Phelps Bliss, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Mrs. De Lancey Kountze, Mrs. Harry Peters, and Mrs. T. J. Oakley Vander Poel.

Among the debutantes sponsored for the dance were Almira Rockefeller, Rachel Hammond, Mildred Vander Poel, Barbara Van Rensselaer, Cora Legg, Katherine Kennedey Tod, Virginia Chapin, and Aurelie Murchison.

Events for Valentine's Day.

St. Valentine's day, as usual, will be honored by several affairs bearing its name. The annual Kettle Drum will take place at the Plaza on Friday afternoon. Next to the charity ball, the Kettle Drum is New York's oldest charitable event. All sorts of colorful booths will be erected for the sale of various commodities, including dolls and candy. The card committee includes Mrs. E. S. Reynal, Mrs. Ten Eyck Wendell, Mrs. George B. Wagstaff, Mrs. L. Havemeyer Butt, and Mrs. H. H. Benkard.

On the other committees are Mrs. Effingham Lawrence, Mrs. Edwards Spencer, Mrs. F. C. Huntington, Mrs. Frederick Barbour, Mrs. Howland Davis, Lydia Dadman, Molly Cogswell, Mrs. Gustave Kissel, and Mrs. Alfred Kessler.

Besides the Kettle Drum, St. Valentine's day will see a ball at the Ross Fenton club in aid of the league for American citizenship.

On the committee in charge of this ball are Mrs. Edgar T. Appleby, Mrs. H. Rogers, Benjamin, Marjorie Cleveland, Mrs. Lewis A. Coffin Jr., Mrs. F. Ashton De Peyster, Muriel Wurts Dundas, and Mrs. Lawrence Copley Thaw.

WEDDED.

MRS. IRVING B. JAFFE.

Announcement is made of the marriage on Jan. 15 of Miss Minna Coia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coia of 823 Forquer street, to Irving B. Jaffe.

Miami Season Opens with Garden Party

MIAMI, Fla.—[Special.]—That historic figure of Miami, the Royal Palm Hotel, whose wide and rambling galleries and vaulted hallways still bear the atmosphere of the early Flagler days in Florida, was the scene of a remarkable gathering this week, when the tea garden was opened for the season. The garden, one of the most beautiful and exotic in Florida, and a companion piece to Coconut Grove at the Royal Poinciana at Palm Beach, does not usually come into active being until February, for that is the time that the pioneer Flagler considered a logical seasonal beginning for south Florida.

Miami has not the social ambitions nor pretensions of Palm Beach, but this old establishment was a gathering place for the Vanderbilts, Goulds, and many older New York families and distinguished persons from Virginia and the Carolinas and even Maryland.

It was here that the Coconut Grove colony at Miami was brought into being and has remained of austere social quality since.

Many Present.

At the opening of the tea garden this year there were present many of the older families of Miami and Coconut Grove, and newer residents and winter visitors. The gathering performs the function of enabling renewal of old acquaintancesnips and the making of new friends. Mrs. Charles Deering, Mrs. Albert J. Bigler, and Mrs. George [Mabel] Reinecke, guest of Mrs. Bigler, were among those noted at the tables.

What was, without doubt, the most distinguished gathering at Palm Beach this season was the reception at White Hall for Sir John and Lady Lavery of London, when the exhibition of that artist's paintings was inaugurated formally this week. Every name of prominence in the winter colony's exclusive circles was on the guest list, and the attendance bordered upon the rather commonplace description of "stampede."

Young Set Triumphs.

What might be termed Chicago's youngest set seems to be making a deep impression at Palm Beach in the way of popularity and amiability. This set congregates prominently on the sands in the late forenoons and, while not exactly "wild," manifests considerable spirit and thus far the beach censors have been held in defiance. Outstanding in this coterie are Betty, Staunton, and Lester Armour Jr., the children of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Armour of Chicago, and Dorothy Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Nelson, none apparently more than 5 or 6 years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Reinhardt Jr. of Chicago and Master Peter Reinhardt are with Mrs. Benjamin J. Rosenthal at Palm Beach. Mrs. Reinhardt is the former Elaine Rosenthal, once woman golf champion of South Florida and always popular in Palm Beach society. Mr. Rosenthal is not at Palm Beach this winter, having been called to Europe. Miss Helen Rand of Chicago is at the Breakers, Palm Beach. Robert Cutler, a house guest of the George McKinlocks at Palm Beach, has gone to Nassau. John B. Ryerson is to be their guest for some time.

Many from Chicago.

During the week quite an influx from Chicago has been noted, among those arriving being James R. McKay and Mrs. McKay Le Roy, Mrs. E. R. Bacon, Mrs. H. H. Bishop and W. Bishop, Morris Lewis, Sidman McKee, Mrs. Aleen Jackson, Andrew Jaicks, Paul Block and Wilson A. Jenks. Dick Greiner stopped off at Palm Beach preparatory to leaving for Cuba on a long cruise.

Miss Murial McCormick arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George A. McKinlock, Casa Alejandro, and has been making a round of visits before settling down to the formalities of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Butler are occupying their Brazilian avenue home and have the Fred Butlers as guests. Mr. and Mrs. Lester Armour have taken a house in Everglades avenue and Mr. and Mrs. John R. Thompson Jr. have one on Barton avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Holmes and Clarke Eastus of Chicago are house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Church. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Revell Jr. are again in Palm Beach and will be at White Hall with Mr. Revell's parents for a few weeks.

Mrs. Eugene McVoy of Chicago, accompanied by Miss Corinne McVoy and Mlle. Shais de Graffenreich of Paris, is at Palm Beach. Mr. and Mrs. John F. Fowler and John F. Ebson have arrived at White Hall for the season.

Chicagoans Trek South to Carolina

AIKEN, S. C.—[Special Correspondence.]—Mr. and Mrs. Austin H. Niblack of Lake Forest, who have purchased Let's Pretend, the former winter residence of Gouveneur Morris, the novelist, were among the early arrivals this season, and are taking active part in the hunts which are scheduled thrice weekly in the Hitchcock woodland.

Miss Sarah Peet of Chicago, who built a villa at Kalmia last summer, has arrived and has as her guest Miss Eleanor Sevens. Goelet Gallitin of Chicago and Big Horn, Wyo., has leased The Nook for the season and has shipped his polo ponies and hunters.

Chicago Arrivals.

R. K. Caldwell of Chicago has leased Violet cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Giraud Foster have opened Orange Grove for February and March. Mr. and Mrs. Giraud Foster Jr. are expected to join them in late February.

Mrs. Charles B. Soutter of Chicago and Cedar Rapids has arrived at her villa, Onawa cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hopkins Smith Sr. of Chicago and Portland, Me., are at Cedar Lodge and are entertaining extensively.

Mrs. Robert R. McCormick, wife of Col. McCormick, publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, has taken Periwinkle cottage for the polo season.

Guests from Other Parts.

Arrivals during the week include United States Senator Richard S. Aldrich and Mrs. Aldrich of Rhode Island; Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, and Mrs. Grace and their daughter, Mrs. Alton Parker Hall [the former Miss Emmeline Grace]; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Dolan, Rosemont, Pa.; Dr. and Mrs. Frederic Terry, Newport; Mr. and Mrs. George H. Howard, Chicago and Buffalo; George H. Mead of Dayton, O., poloist, and F. Skiddy Von Stade of New York.

Among the Fermata school pupils this season are the Misses Elizabeth Brown, Chicago; Marise Fawsett, Milwaukee, and Frances Forsyth, Lake Forest.

At the preparatory school for boys are: Masters John S. Pillsbury Jr., John F. Wilkins Jr., Edward Lee Wilson III., Gurnee Munn Jr., and White Broman.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Cummings have opened their winter home on Sea Spray avenue and Mr. and Mrs. Lucius P. Orday of Lake Forest have taken a house in the same avenue. Mrs. Walter Scott Leeds, who has been at Palm Beach since November, has returned to Chicago.

Chicagoans at Hollywood.

Hollywood has developed quite a Chicago colony this year with its beautiful beach hotel at the east and the quaint inn in the hills at the west. Mr. and Mrs. William McJunkin arrived this week. They planned motoring from Chicago, but snowdrifts prevented driving north of Memphis, and with Mrs. Charles Seren they drove from that point.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Del Struthers came by way of New York for an extended golfing holiday. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Coburn recently have arrived at the Beach. J. E. Faget came around from California and is to be at the Hollywood Golf and Country club for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Wells and three daughters of Kenosha, Wis., Mrs. Jane Nicholson, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. McKane and C. J. Lins of Milwaukee are at the historic Royal Palm at Miami for the winter.

Announcement is made of the coming wedding of Miss Helen Curry of Miami and Frederick D. Kay of Chicago.

Refresh Your Face as Actresses Do

Other faces grow dull and drawn and tired looking. But not actresses' faces. In spite of late hours, weariness, grease paint, on-creeping years, their skins must remain fresh and youthful.

Yet they have no magic—no secret you may not share. They know a better cleansing method, that is all. A method that dissolves the hidden dust and powder and dried oils; that brings the reviving, youthifying blood tingling to the surface. Not with costly treatments or creams or foams. But with Calonite—a pure white powder that they apply with a wet wash cloth.

Let your face enjoy this freshening, too. Feel the drawn tired skin respond—instantly. Feel the gentle bubbling as dirt you didn't know was there, dissolves. Feel the warm life-giving blood glowing in your cheeks. Look for the blackheads, the sallowness, the dullness—all gone! How clear and clean and new your skin looks. How fresh and young it feels. After a Calonite cleansing you look and feel a new person. Ask your druggist for Calonite. Try it this very night.

Your money back if not delighted.

ART AND ARTISTS

Chicago Show Wins Praise from Critic

By Inez Cunningham.

WHETHER it is the chastened spirit that follows desperate escape and eyes new lit by charity, or merely intellectual impression, I do not know, but I do know that the thirty-first annual exhibition of artists of Chicago and vicinity looks to me like a much better show than the thirtieth A. E. of A. of C. and V.

Shall we next look for the reason and hand the jury a fragrant token? Alas, no! For the jury, like all other juries, has done strange things. Let us hand the bouquets to the artists, God bless them! Even some of the most hopelessly trite of them have at least made this progress—they have learned to paint their triteness better, just as an author who does not progress in making characterization sometimes improves literary style. And those of the goup who have something have certainly said so more emphatically this year than they did last.

There are, of course, always some disappointments to bear from favorites now and then, but why mention them? One can be disappointed in one's children when there is company present. And pictures painted for special exhibitions are very like children on company behavior, are they not?

Critic Wonders Why.

Now with the button on the foil let me take my annual poke at the jury.

We would like to know why the jury gave prizes to the second best painting, "Spanish Beggars" of Martin Henning, while "Old Spanish Houses" of his is hung in a small gallery and is so much better.

Why did they not award a prize to "The Land of Gold"—that striking picture by H. Harrington Betts—instead of giving it to his other, much less original and beautiful picture, "Glorietta," which received the Julius Rosenwald purchase prize?

Praise Is Due.

And now let me bow the forensic knee to the jury for awarding the Marshall Fuller Homes prize to "Friendly Enemies" by William S. Schwartz. To me it seems one of the very best things of the show, not only as to color and composition, but in the painting of qualities. In originality of conception it is really unusual for a still life.

"THE MORNING ROUTE," by Marques E. Reitzel, won two prizes at the exhibition of Chicago artists: the F. G. Logan medal and the Edward B. Butler prize. Its distinctive quality sets it apart as a fine piece of work.

Mr. Schwartz, as I remember saying on several occasions, has a certain quality that, when fully developed, will make him a considerable mark of his own.

Looking at the paintings, one wonders if he has as yet found his medium—whether he ought not to be working on glass for great cathedrals rather than on canvas. There is something mystic and religious about his conceptions as well as their presentation, and the deep colors of the liturgy flow from his brush in harmonies that would light a church with Miltonian rightness.

A Prize Well Awarded.

Another laud for the jury for giving the Rogers' Park Woman's club prize to Ethel Spears for her delightful "Conservatory." Miss Spears has that quality more unstrained than mercy, that rare quality, humor. Pray heaven she may never lose it, as she and others get to taking her seriously.

As to the other prize winners, there is the first prize, the Frank G. Logan medal, etc., to H. Amiard Oberteuffer for "The Yellow Dress," which is freely, in fact, almost sketchily painted. There is a great deal to recommend it, of course, especially its loveliness of color, but I am afraid a jury less like the London busmen, to whom legs are no treat, would never have given it first prize, because the woman in the yellow dress is apparently able to bend his tibia.

The second F. G. Logan medal goes to "The Morning Route," by Marques E. Reitzel, the simple and beautiful rendering of the dawn, blue over countryside and snow, shining on milk cans and making purple the edge of a red barn.

"Sundown on the Holler," by Rudolph Ingerle, gained the Mr. and Mrs. Jule F. Brower prize, has a much lovelier painting as "The Branch." It is full of and its cadence is as peaceful as Wordsworth's verse.

Other Prize Awards.

Frederic Tellander obtained the Arts building prize for his "Seine to 'La Cité,'" [illegible] ed and well done. The Butler prize also goes to "The ing Route," by Mr. Reitzel; the N. Eisendrath prize to "Studio Window," by Carl and the Municipal Art "Portrait of My Wife," Klasek. The Englewood club prize went to "Navajo by Carl Hoerman; the Chi an's Aid prize to Frances B. for her "Black Vase." wiec was justly awarded Knapp prize for exceptional The Robert Rice Jenkins young artist was awarded Shula for "The City Night." The Morris and the William Ormond prize respectively went to Fleck and Mary Stafford. ing received the first prize ture.

Formal—Informal—or Intimate
Every Meal Is a Banquet at Chicago's
Morrison Hotel

PRIVATE DINING ROOM, BOSTON OYSTER HOUSE, MORRISON HOTEL

The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel, 46 stories high, with 3,400 rooms.

A SIX-COURSE dinner, with every incidental of formal ceremony—or a "chummy" lunch with one or two friends—each is a pleasure long remembered when enjoyed at the Morrison Hotel.

A Varied Environment

The genial spirit of the institution brightens every social gathering—whether in the stately Cameo Room, the Terrace Garden, or one of the private dining rooms so popular with groups of business men.

Luxury with Economy

Yet, although the quality of the meals is unsurpassed even by the most expensive hotels, the moderation of Morrison prices is a proverb. Note, for example, the following figures for fixed-price meals:

Breakfast, 35c to $1.00
Luncheon, 80c. Dinner, $1.25

1,944 Outside Rooms, $2.50 Up

Every guest room at the Morrison has bath, running ice water, and Servidor, which assures complete privacy. Every patron enjoys garage privileges. Yet minimum rates are charged because the valuable store subleases at this central location pay all the ground rent, and the saving is passed on to the guests.

The Terrace Garden's table d'hote Sunday dinner is served from 5 to 9 p. m., with dancing and full entertainment program; only $1.50.

Follow the Sun to Golden Days and Glamorous Nights at Florida's Most Beautiful Hotel

WHY dream by a fireside when you can live by a sunny seaside? Why shiver by dying firelight when you can bask in ardent sunlight? Turn your back on winter and catch up with the sun down at Hollywood.

Come to the Hollywood Beach Hotel and luxuriate in a winter that will be a lifetime memory—a winter with the ease and delight of summer. No fickle, halfway climate; real summer warmth. A genial sun in a clear, turquoise sky. No nip in the air, nor chill in the surf. You live on a tropical palm-shaded shore beside a tropical sea.

Here nature fosters every healthful outdoor fun and sport. Bathing by day and night in a gentle surf, never dangerous even for small children. Restful idling on a broad, clean beach. And the finest fishing in the world, angling for the big game of the sea, tarpon and sailfish.

On the coral shore 'twixt Palm Beach and Miami—rising like a palace out of fairyland, Hollywood Beach Hotel is Florida's most entrancing retreat from the snow and freezing winds of the north.

Right on the ocean, looking forth on tropical beach and sea, it is the center of life as you dream it. Balmy breezes waft through your rooms. You don bathing suit and go straight to the broad clean beach with gently rolling surf.

Vast spacious chambers with gorgeous decorations and furnishings—conveniences and refinements matchless amidst the most luxurious appointments single out this magnificent hotel for your comfort and delight.

Delicious tablefare, freshened and enriched with vegetables, fruits, butter, milk, and eggs from the hotel's own farms, intrigues your appetite.

Every outdoor sport and recreation invites you—golf on two excellent courses, horseback riding, tennis, motor boating, aquaplaning, and bathing on the peerless beach. Every night dances, recitals, concerts make it a favorite rendezvous in Florida's brilliant social playground.

Fine—18 hole golf course

Hotel motor buses leave on regular schedule for Palm Beach, Miami and the race track.

Here you live as you please—do as you please—at a reasonable cost sure to please. Rates most attractive in Florida. No more than at northern high class hotels.

Change winter into summer; live a life that pays no tax to weather. Catch up with the sun and summer at Hollywood Beach Hotel.

There is a Hollywood hotel that matches your needs and wishes. It gives you what you want for what you like to pay. At Hollywood Hills Inn, Park View Hotel, and Great Southern, Hollywood has an attractive range of moderate rates: for one person per day, as low as $2.50 (European) and $7 (American). Special rates for two, and by the week.

To facilitate reservations and assure the convenience and comfort of a trip to Florida, the Hollywood hotels maintain a New York office. Here you obtain complete description of rooms and suites, and their moderate rates. Through it you may make all arrangements for a Florida visit, including transportation on railroad or steamship. Any information on Florida you require will be furnished promptly. Call, or telephone, or write. Send for our colorful booklet "Florida's Most Beautiful Hotel."

Greater Palm Beach Forges Steadily Forward

Street, drainage and sewage projects in West Palm Beach, together with private construction, involve the expenditure of $72,000,000 and the labor of 10,000 men. A thriving community must be adequately served and safeguarded.

Telephone requirements are 17 times as great as six years ago and the Southern Bell has invested a million dollars in new building and equipment. An equal sum marks the investment of the Florida Power & Light Co. in extension and power plant. The Palm Beach Gas Co. has extended mains by the mile; and pure soft water is even more ample in supply, through extensions, a new filtration plant and other improvements—representing a million and a half in new investments on the part of the West Palm Beach Water Company.

Never Before Have Pfanstiehl Radio Sets Been Sold at Reduced Prices

RADIO is one of the fastest growing industries in the world. The Pfanstiehl Radio Company is one of the foremost makers of high grade radio sets. Thousands of Pfanstiehl radio sets are being sold in high class stores throughout America. But, as it sometimes happens in an industry so great as radio, the Pfanstiehl Company has overproduced on their latest models to the extent of 5,000 sets.

We have secured this tremendous stock of high grade five and six tube sets at such amazingly low prices, that we are able to offer them at savings of one-half and even more off the list prices!

1/2 PRICE AND LESS

When you "tune in" on a Pfanstiehl with its single dial control, you will be greatly impressed by its outstanding feature—unexcelled tone quality. The overtones in voice or music are the life and soul of beautiful sound. They make what is called "tone color" and they distinguish between one voice and another, between one musical instrument and another, between one performer and another.

Some Pfanstiehl features: Single tuning control, pilot lamp lights up dial when set is in use, non-warping, genuine walnut panel.

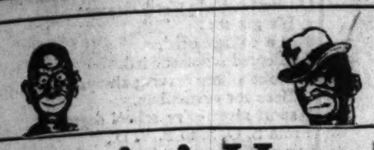
SAM 'N' HENRY — Sam Almost Eats — By Correll & Gosden



Sam 'n' Henry

Since the two friends—cautious, captious Henry and gullible Sam—wandered up from Birmingham last year, millions of radio fans have enjoyed listening to these colored boys broadcast from The Chicago Tribune radio station W-G-N.

This section will contain an article every Sunday by these famous entertainers. Start the first one here!

The two boys are working as day laborers on a building now under construction in the Chicago loop district.

Noon whistle blows.

Sam—Henry, de minute dey blow dat whistle you drop jus' what you got hold of, no mattah what you'h carryin'. Don' drop dat boa'd down like dat when I got hol' of it. Lay de boa'd down easy—you goin' break my hand all heah.

Henry—Don' ahgue wid me—let's go down on de sidewalk and staht eatin'.

Henry—Where you goin' now—where you goin' now?

Sam (starting down)—I'se goin' down heah—I done lef' mah dinner pail down at dat little house.

Henry—You de craziest boy I evah see. If you find yo' dinnah pail down dere, you is goin' some.

Sam—Heah 'tis—right in dis little house heah. Come heah, go to de door wid me. See' inside dis door heah, to de lef'.

Henry—Where 'bouts yo' mean?

Sam—Lord, Henry, dat thing done gone! (To man standing near)—Mistah, is you seen my lunch pail?

Sam—No, sah, Mistah, but I done lef' a pail heah an' it's gone.

Man—Well, don't tell me your troubles—tell it to the marines.

Sam—who is de marines?

Man—Get out of here!

"Heah 'tis, Mistah. Dat's a good watch, too."

Sam—Look heah, Henry—I done lost my money, too.

Henry—Now, cahm yo'self—cahm yo'self—what is de trouble?

Sam—Look heah, Henry—I done tore my pocket open. You know when I caught myself on de nail dis mornin'? I done lost my money, Henry.

Henry—Now, wait a minute—wait a minute—you losin' ev'vything you got. You bettah count yo' fingahs on both han's an' see if you got all yo' fingahs.

Sam—What I goin' do, Henry?

Henry (as he starts eating his lunch)—Don' worry me now, while I'se eatin' dese heah ham san'wiches. You know, I ain't got but a short time to eat dese.

Sam—I gotta git sompin' to eat heah. I'se hungry. Henry, dere's a pawnshop 'cross de street dere—come on, go over dere wid me. I gonna put my watch in hock—I gotta have some money.

Henry—What kin' o' watch is dat you got?

Sam—Dis is a railroad watch.

Henry—Well, come on—let's go over dere, den. (They start across the street.) Come on—hurry up.

Sam (opening door)—Come in heah wid me, den, Henry—come on in dis heah door.

Henry (as they enter)—Take off yo' hat now when you talk to de gent'man—take off yo' hat.

Pawnbroker—Vat iss it?

Sam—Mistah, my name is Sam Smith. I wanna pawn dis heah watch. How much yo' gimme on dis heah watch till Sat'day?

Pawnbroker—Vat kind of watch iss it?

Sam—Dis is a gold watch.

Pawnbroker—Vell—let me see it.

Henry—Take de watch off dat rope—take de watch off dat rope—untie de watch.

Pawnbroker (examining watch)—A-a-ah, dat watch iss in very bad condition. I can only giff you a dollar on it.

Sam—Can't git but a dollah? I wanna try an' git five dollahs.

Pawnbroker—Vell—I'll tell you vat I'll do. You look like a goot boy—I'll give you two dollars.

Sam—Mistah, can't I git mo' dan two dollahs?

Pawnbroker—All right—here's a nice two dollar bill. And here's the ticket.

Sam—Thank yo', sah, Mistah.

SAM (as they leave)—Let's go over dere now and see how much time we got, I wantta go up to de cornah dere and git myself some san'wiches.

Henry (as they arrive at the building where they are working)—Ask dat gent'man dere how much mo' time we got.

Sam (to man)—Mistah, how much mo' time we got fo' lunch?

Man—O, ten or fifteen minutes—something like that.

Sam—Thank yo', sah. (To Henry) Henry, come on—walk up to de cornah wid me to git some san'wiches.

(As they start away an insurance agent approaches them. This agent is of the street faker type.)

Agent—Just a minute—just a minute—what's your name?

Sam—You talkin' to me, Mistah? My name is Sam Smith.

Agent—You're just the fellow I'm looking for—you're working on this building, aren't you?

Sam—Yassah, I'se workin' on de buildin'.

Agent—You're the fellow, all right. Now—the Indefinite Life Insurance company sent me here to see you.

Sam—Who sent you heah?

Agent—The Indefinite Life Insurance company of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Sam—What dey want, Mistah—what dey want?

Agent—Well, here's the proposition. You are one of the few men in Chicago who are not protected, and, according to the laws of the United States, every workman in district 75 should be protected against injury. Do you realize what it would mean if one of those beams should fall through the building here and hit you? Do you realize what it would mean if you should step on a nail and run it through your foot and blood poison set in? Do you realize what it would mean if somebody should accidentally hit you in the head with a hammer? What protection do you have? You can't answer that question, can you? But I'll answer it. You have no protection. Picture yourself lying in bed with a broken head, and probably one leg off, without a dime—at the mercy of charity—your stomach hungry for food. That is the most terrible predicament any human being could be in.

Agent—Now, then—I have a policy here—in case of death we give your nearest relative $500 cash immediately upon your death. But the clause of our policy which should interest you most is this clause right here. Should you lose one eye and one leg, you get $250. Should you lose both eyes and both legs, you get $300. Should you lose both eyes, both legs, and one arm, you get $350—and, should this condition cause you to die, the nearest relatives gets the difference between the amount paid you and $500. In the United States alone, during the year of 1925, we paid out over $200,000 to men who held our policies. This is one of the most reasonable and equitable policies of its kind in existence. The premium is only ten cents a week. Now, I only have a short time and the Indefinite Life Insurance company has only a limited number of these policies. Now, I'm going to write your name on this one because I know you want it.

Agent—It's the greatest buy in America today.

Sam—Henry, what you think 'bout dis heah thing?

Henry—You got money. Go on—buy de thing.

Sam—Well, Mistah, I take one of 'em. Put my name down on it.

Agent—Ah—that's fine. Sam Smith—now, how old are you?

Sam—I'se thirty-two.

Agent (filling in policy)—Thirty-two. And what is your address?

Sam—General delivery.

Agent—All right, here you are—here's your certificate. The first premium is two dollars and after that it's ten cents a week.

Sam—Two dollahs?

Agent—That's the first premium. You understand that, of course?

Sam—Henry—do you know what dat means?

Henry—Sho'—give de man de two dollahs—give de man de money.

Sam—I pays you two dollahs now—is dat it, Mistah?

Agent—That's the idea. You give me two dollars now and then only ten cents a week after that.

Henry—Give de gent'man de two dollahs.

Sam (handing him his money)—Heah you are, Mistah—heah's de two dollahs.

Agent (turning to Henry)—What's your name?

Henry—My name's Henry Johnson.

Agent—Now, I'll fix you up with one of these policies, too, Henry.

Henry—Nosah, Mistah, don' bothah 'bout me. Use protected.

Agent—Do you carry insurance?

Henry—Yessah, I carries a lot o' insurance.

Sam (to agent)—Mistah, lemme ask yo' one question. Where do I collect dis heah money in case sompin' happens to me?

Agent—Why, the money is brought to you. Your labor council immediately notifies us of your accident and we rush to your bedside with the cash. (As he starts to leave) Well, boys, I'm glad to have seen you. Sam, I know you'll feel better working now, knowing that you are fully protected by the Indefinite Life Insurance company. (Leaving) so long, boys.

(Whistle on building blows.)

Sam—Henry, what's dat I heah?

Henry—You know what dat is—dat means we gotta git back to work.

Sam—Henry, I ain't had nothin' to eat.

Henry—You ain't got time to ahgue now—git up on dere and git hol' o' dem boa'ds.

Sam—Henry—I gotta have sompin' to eat—and I ain't got a cent.

Henry—An' you can read dat sign up dere on de house—"No money advances befo' Sat'day."

Sam—What mus' I do, Henry—what I goin' do—I gotta have some money?

Henry—Come on. Heah—git to work—you got a long day befo' yo'. With all dese heah things flyin' 'roun' yo' head, sompin' might happen to yo' befo' de day's ovah an' you kin collect from dat Indefinite Insurance company.

GROSS EXAGGERATIONS FROM HEESTORY

By Milt Gross

It Begins Gradually de Heestory from de World.

HEESTORY—So wot it minns de dafaneetion from de woid Heestory? So is so: Is di-wided in two hiquill pots de woid Heestory, wiz:

A prifix—Heest.

Witt a soffix—Story.

Wot it minns itch one so.

Heest—Sh! Silence! Hock! Geeve a leesten!

Story—A nerrative, a rummance, a tale, a fable, a yon (could ulso minn a floor from a building, wiz: de toid sturry).

So it minns Heestory: Geeve a leesten a nerrative!

Heh heh—Of cuss, it couldn't be "Geeve a leesten a floor from a building"; excapt sometimes wot it should squikk de floor, wot in deez case it would gradually resamble de whole Heestory like it should be from Rets witt Mize, is no??

II. Notes Witt Rafarances.

(To whom it'll maybe gonna consoin). De Heestorian. witt de Meesus Heestorian, riquast gradually de extrimmingly great honor dey should geeve witt de bast from plasure a announcement wot dey exknowledging de information in dees Wolume from de following susses:

(a) Bottweiser Brewery hell-wertizements "Famous Beer Dreenkeers From Heestory."

(b) Hactual haxpeerence from Heestorian in Woild Wur (see Over de Mop, witt de Keetchen Poliss by Heestorian, $2 nat).

CHEPTER ONE.

De Woild Wurr and Wot Hez Gone Befurr.

Of cuss, it was de Woild Wurr one from de most nuttable ewents wot took plaze in Ninetinn Futtin—bot in bitwinn time it will geve de heestorian a synopsis from de sturry hopp ontill de prasant time wot it conseests de woild from deeference contrizz witt nations wot is here de leest in de horder from dere appeerance. So is so itch contry witt de hage:

U. S. A.—151 years hold lest Futt from July.

Hingland—632106 [eet she's a day].

Frence—1076—[honly, of cuss, is rilly 2152 on accont wot dey leeving in Pris twice so fest like by all over].

Ijjipt—999,999 [dun't looking a day over 999,998].

Jepen—[Over 21].

China—986,664,367½ [gung on 986,664,368, wheech is rilly in American time seex wicks witt two days].

Of cuss, in de beginning whan was joost bing esteblished de woild it deedn't was nidder by Ijjipt a seengle pyrameed nodded by Sweetzerland Ivvin a Elp;—was hall over de woild Hice wot dees was de Hice Hage.

So occurding de system wot is entitled de ceetizens from China, Chinamen, so was entitled de inhebitants from de Hice Hage, Hicemen!!

So dees Glazers from hice wot it was hall over de woild so was a whole time trevelling arond; nutt-bond, witt sout-bond, witt Trenscontinantel, witt Union Paceefic Glaziers wot it deedn't nidded in dem days de pipple nidder sobways nodder trollicozz.

So from de hice was warious by-products, like snow witt hail, witt so futt from wheech is so de proof: Eeef it takes de ridder in de hends a snubball wot he'll geeve it a squizz, so it'll bicome hod de snubball it should be hice, is no?? [Of cuss, it could geeve you dees information anny schoolboy]. So from dees was deescovered de teeory wot is hice elestic. Hm, of cuss, we couldn't boncing a hice-boig opp witt don, odder dey couldn't making from hice binn-shooters, odder dey couldn't stratching a fife-cents piece hice it should be like a ten-cents piece. It was hable honly de hice it should squizze in—hout it couldn't squizze.

So it leeved de pipple in houzes from hize wot dey was entitled bigloos. So it came Sonday monnink wot it weeshed a tennant he should take a batt so it was nacessary dey should melting opp de hice—so it made de tennants a spitch so:

"Hm, geev a look—so I got to melt opp a heff from de front putch witt a rocking cherr yat in horder I should take a batt!! Is diss a system?! Hm, is a locky ting we dun't leeving in de brownze hage—we should go sweeming in a tob from melted brownze we should come hout yat brownze-plated, ha??"

So it took de pipple murr wit murr batts wot it gave gradually a wanish de Hize Hage!

(Hend from Chepter One.)

CHEPTER TWO.

Oily Settlers in de Woild Wot Dey Settled in Betwinn de Hize Hages.

TO was foist de foist hize hage den gradually a sacund hize hage, und in cocklusion was a toid witt a futt hize hage wot in bitwinn itch wan a hintermeesion. . . . So in itch hintermeesion it axeested critchures wot it belunged in de following kettegories. Wiz:

Nomber Wan—SEA FOOD—Feesh, clems, hoysters, lobsters, shreeraps, scellops.

Nomber Two—RAPTILES—Snakes, woims, ketterpillows, leezards, scuppions, mounsters.

Nomber Tree—MEMMELS—Kemels, &c.

Nomber Furr—PIPPLE—Man, weemen, goils, boyiss, babiss, tweens.

So it would arrife like dees a hize hage: Foist it would stend in de paper a nuttice so:

"Wadder tomorrow: fair witt wummer."

So de naxt day it came hout de ground hog wot he gave a look de shedow wot he gave a hexclamation:

"Yi yi yi!!—Geeve a look a shedow like from a heepopoutamus! Brr—Brr."

So you should see wot it stoot in de paper hextras so:

CITY SHEEVERS IN GREEP FROM WEENTER FROM COLD WAFE MOOFING SOUT
STORM CREEPLES TREFFIC
NO RILLIF AXPACTED FOR TWANTY TOUSAND YEARS
SIX INCHES SNOW BY HOLLYWOOT
MOOFY HINDUSTRY ET STENDSTEEL

So it was gung on in Hollywood hall kinds from hexcitement honly of cuss, bing wot it was den de Raptile administration, so it was in da moofies in dem days honly woims, witt so futt. So it would say wan woim to anodder was so:

"Noo Jake, you wolking??"

"Hm!—Do I wolking, he esks!! HA! HA! Lesky is ronning me regged! You should see a beeg feeshing peecture dey got for me. . . . So I sad to heem, I sad so: 'Leesten, Jassy——we goot frands, bot for de feeshing gegs you'll gat plizze a dobble!! I lust lest yirr a hinch huff from me witt de feeshing beezness!!'"

"Say come hout plizze from behind de bush——Look, wheeskers—you coftinly nidding a shafe!"

"Wat shafe?? I'm doing no kerreckter'stoff!!"

"Kerreckter stoff???—Hm—de woim toins!—HA HA!!"

"So where you strotting you stoff??"

"Hm, of cuss just now I et leeberty—bitwinn peectures you know. . . . Bot I stotting naxt wick wot it wrote for me spacial a oreeginal sturry Michael Ollen."

"I gatting tired from de low comedy stoff. . . . I'll gonna gat in de ligeetimate."

"Hm—you should see a siquence in de foist cloze opp wot I come hout from a hepple. . . ."

"Dot's goot hukkum. . . . Ho, by de way, dey hed to stop woik on de 'Beeg Parate.'"

"Wat was??"

"Hm, dun't esk—De centipede got Kligg heyes!!"

So shuttly hefter dees it came de naxt hize hage, wot it fruzz opp hall de snakes witt de woims witt de scuppions so witt a couple tousand years later wot he chopped huff hall de hize; so was ondernitt memmels!!

POT TWO—MEMMELS.

Hirrtofurr was leeving honly feesh witt raptiles wot dey was hall bechelors. It deedn't was by dem hosbands witt wifes. So den it came alung de memmels wot dey inwented families; wot from dees it deweloped gatting merried—witt diwusses witt alimony witt consull-fizz. So instat dey should lay haggs like de feesh witt de raptiles so instat it brutt dem de stuck huff-spreengs. Ulso wot is hable a memmel it should fiddling de yonksters wot it ain't nacassary dey should geeving de baby a bottle. So is ulso annodder hebit by memmels: Feesh with raptiles dey hall bald; so de memmels was de foist ones wot dey hintrodoosed hair witt furr witt wheeskers, witt siteboins, with speetcoils, witt silskeen, witt holmine, witt meenk, witt skonk, witt Koleensky.

So de foist memmel was a huss. Honly instat it should be heem hoofs so was on de furrfitt feengers, and on de hind-fitt tuzz. So wan day it came alung a blecksmeet wot he inwented hussshooz. Se he sad to de husses, he sad so:

"Noo, huss—it looks like rain, is no??"

So de huss sad: "Hm, dun't esk!! I got witt mine corns wot mine woister enimizz shouldn't hev it!!"

So de blecksmeet sad: "Hm, rilly, is dat so? So why you dun't trying 'Squizzone'??"

So de huss sad: "Pheh—I trite dem hall. . . . Is a bonch Benena Holi."

So de blecksmeet sad: "So why you dun't gung by a cheeroppideest??"

So de huss sad: "Wot?? Dem jeeps?!——Say, bilive me, it tin't woit while de bodder witt de corns witt de bonions witt de hingrown nails. Tuzz witt feengers I nidd yat—I should play maybe a piano, odder a daff witt a domb lengwidge I should loin, maybe, ha? Besites—de menicuring wot it custs me a year in de jeep bobber shops——!!!"

So de blecksmeet sad: "Of cuss, of cuss,——Wal, we putting on de mocket a skim wot'll gonna safe you hall de expanses. . Noo, geeve a look—HUSSHOOZ!!"

So from dees it discodded de husses de feengers witt de tuzz wot it stodded opp a style from hoofs.

SENTENCE SERMONS

BY THE REV. ROY L. SMITH

The Very Best Men—

—Differ only from the worst in their attitudes.
—Know that they could be as evil as the worst.
—Have some weaknesses they are ashamed of.
—Must make a constant fight to keep at their best.
—Are usually the most charitable of the weakest.
—Can usually learn something from any of the rest.
—Never succeeded through an accident.

No Man Is Interesting—

—Who has nothing to talk about but himself.
—Who sees nothing that is right with the world.
—Who is interested only in those who can do him favors.
—Who resents the time that other people take in the conversation.
—Who has nothing to say and insists on saying it.
—Who has not learned to appreciate other people's jokes.
—Who always agrees with you.

We Seem to Be Trying——To cure sorrow with thrills.

—To make happiness out of excitement.
—To find a religion without duties.
—To rear children by absent treatment.
—To have good government and escape personal responsibility.
—To answer arguments by calling people names.
—To substitute complexes for consciences.

Nothing Makes—

—Some men madder than to agree with them.
—Good news to some people except misfortune.
—A town prosper like the coöperation of all its people.
—Money for the help that does not make money for the boss.
—Failure easier than undependability.
—Trouble faster than a tale bearer.
—A home more unhappy than the spirit of jealousy.

WIDE OPEN SPACES.

Mother [anxiously]—I do hope, darling, you look out for the motor cars at the crossings.

Elsie—O, yes, mother. I always wait on the sidewalk until an empty space comes along.—Boston Transcript.

THE JAZZ AGE.

By W. M. Schwimmer.

(Fatalists now claim that every individual's life has been predestined and that particular acts or desires cannot affect the ultimate happiness or unhappiness.)

I NURSE a secret morbid pash
For operatic balderdash,
That vulgar low harmonic hash
The rabble all cail jazz;
The lurid ragtime song refrains
Concocted in some halfwits' brains
Just sends a tingle through my veins!
It seems the music has
A swing—a ring—that makes me sing
And want to flip a fancy fling,
And dance and prance, and take a chance
On hectic Hollywood romance.
It's got me!
Me! a college grad,
A talented scholastic lad,
A bloke whose craving always had
Been for curriculum.
I sport most ev'ry school degree,
From S. O. S. to B. V. D.,
It's surely incongruity
For me to be so dumb.

Now, in the stillness of the night,
I practice my infamous rite,
And tune in ev'ry jazz delight
That's on the radio;
I try that new Black Bottom jig,
And, unobserved, I take a big,
Rejuvenating, hearty swig
Of precious old Jim Crow.
A sip—a nip—is full of zip,
Concealed I keep it, on the hip;
A gink can't drink stuff from a sink
That's just for washing use, I think!
'T's awful,
Folks, to think I wish
To violate the prohibish
And long to be a massive fish
That swims in bourbon lotion;
Beyond the limits I'd abide,
Where Volstead laws can never chide,
And gleefully I'd gulp inside
All rum dumped in the ocean!

For, since I've learned the theories that the fatalists repeat
I do not care if all my views through jazz have been distorted
I do not give a whoop if all my sins may number legion,
For, good or bad, I feel I'm slated for the torrid region!

Breezes from the Lake . . .

By Harland Rohm

STRIDING through Lincoln park on almost any afternoon is a tall woman who swings along with a schoolboy's wholehearted zest for life. She wears tightly fitting trousers and a jersey coat, and many are the amazed stares at her. The story is told that for years she was a hopeless invalid, condemned to be pushed around in a chair the rest of her life. Then a miraculous cure brought back the use of her legs and again she could walk. The regained sense of freedom was so great she never since has permitted her stride to be hampered by skirts. The story may be true.

Apparently night work breeds a camaraderie among men as do few other things. It may be the night worker, coming in contact with fewer persons, has more time to be courteous and leisurely than do those who work in the rush of daylight, but at any rate there is a good nature among the riders of Chicago's elevated and surface lines between 2 and 6 in the morning that never is found during the daylight.

Riding south on a State street car about three the other morning, the conductor proved chatty and friendly. He stopped at Eighth street, but no one got on. "That's funny," he said. "Bill never misses this car," and he walked to the door to look around. "Bill" was legging it across Eighth street as fast as he could go. The conductor waited for him, Bill paid his fare, grinned, and walked into the car.

"Friend of yours?" I asked.

"No," the "con" answered, "but we get to know 'em and it means half an hour's walt if he doesn't make this car."

I walked in and sat down across the aisle from "Bill." He looked up and offered part of his paper, "Wanna read part of it until I get off?"

One of Chicago's sports writers has an amazing fondness for cheese. Brick, cream, limburger, brie—it makes little difference, except the bigger the better, not only to eat, but as a delight to the eye. It is recorded he once stood for twenty minutes in front of a delicatessen shop, wrapped in admiration of a three-foot diameter Swiss cheese. And chaps who have been on the road with him say his idea of a glorious evening is to lie in bed, read and eat cheese. Incidentally, a baseball writer, now retired, used to read Greek at odd moments while covering a game.

One hears little of Greenwich Village—except for Gene Tunney—nowadays and even less of Tower Town, that stretch of rooming houses, odd businesses and studios west of the water tower. But it's still there. The Green Mask and Grey Cottage are gone, but other places like them have bloomed where the others faded. The Dill Pickle and the Radical Book Shop, home of the studio players, are the oldest two left, but there are half a dozen others—the Lower Depths, Nat's, Bill's Barrel, and so forth. Almost all of them have an amateur theatrical company which stages odd plays with a strong preponderance for Eugene O'Neil and things like Wedekind and Asch. How do they pay royalties? They don't.

Add vital statistics—six trolley cars, end to end, extend the length of a loop block. A traffic jam demonstrated it yesterday. And, speaking of jams, fourteen southbound busses were strung along in a line as the link bridge lifted. It was a warm evening with a fine mist covering the city. The lights on the boulevard stretched away like pillars in an ancient temple and the automobile lights made brilliant paths across the wet, black asphalt. The moonlight was strained to a paleness barely visible and the mist softened the outlines of the tall buildings into Pagan shines of beauty. It was a night of loveliness and mystery, yet on the fourteen busses there was one person sitting on top. Maybe she's the kind of girl who writes that sort of vers libre which begins

Mists play symphonies,
Of far dawns
When man was young.

Chicago's record of more than two a day killed by automobiles leads to speculation on the individual's chances of survival. On last year's figures—880 killed in a population of 3,000,000—apparently the odds are about 4,000 to 1 you won't be killed by an auto this year. In a lifetime of 70 years the chances drop to about 60 to 1. It would be interesting to compare these chances of survival with smaller cities. The chances are the "betting odds" in Chicago would be rather good, for in a city of 100,000 only 25 would need to be killed in a year to make the proportion equal.

Despite their apparent recklessness, taxi drivers figure in comparatively few serious accidents. Automobile experts say it's because they are given examinations before they're permitted to drive, they are trained to drive well and it's their job and therefore they know more about the capabilities of their machines. But above all they're young and youth thinks fast and acts fast—not so good in some situations but most effective in emergencies. A concensus of auto drivers opinions is that the most reckless drivers are the mail truck chauffeurs.

Why is it that most restaurants which serve food that really measures up to what food should be are hidden or are out of the way of the food hunter? On North Rush street is a little French restaurant that serves food on huge platters—help yourself—on tables covered with white oilcloth. They never advertise, yet the place is always comfortably filled, with a fair proportion of the diners in evening clothes. Try their frog legs and know why. On South Halsted is another where the dill pickles — truly home made and undoubtedly kosher—are something to dream about; as is the bread which comes baked like a bird's nest with funny swirled crinkling all around the top. It also boasts an extremely "hard" waitress who flatly refuses to bring a customer any dish which she doesn't think is up to standard.

Steaks are something else, and a gamble. The good ones you'll find occasionally; but the truly perfect ones for man's sized appetites—rich red-brown with an aroma that would make a saint wish for another day on earth—quien sabe. They exist—try a double T-bone in Fred Harvey's in Washington, D. C., a rib steak at Mike Torkelson's in Roundup, Mont., or the same cut at the Boulevard Chop House—only when Bill cooks them—in Seattle.

Caught in the quiet back washes of Chicago life are many men who have lived lives of adventure of the sort that "happens only in novels." A cook in a South Clark street restaurant once was famous as a jockey. He'll seldom talk of his races and he never bets. "I know 'em too well" is his only comment. A check back showed he had been ruled off the turf for framing a race.

A night watchman in a lumberyard near 22d street once spent three years inside the Arctic circle on a whaler. The manager of a golf club was in on the wild days of the gold stampede in the Rand of South Africa. A night cashier in a loop restaurant bears a name once as famous on the ball field as Ray Schalk's is now. Most of them are contented, jogging along with a mellow philosophy carved by hard knocks.

A FIGHT! A FIGHT!

This scene is from "Tell It to the Marines," opening tomorrow at McVicker's theater. The three gentlemen most prominently displayed are, left to right, Eddie Gribbon, William Haines and Lon Chaney.

HOT PAGES FRUM MY DIARY

By Snowshoe Al

MICKEY FLYNN'S WEDDING.

YESTERDAY I wuz invited to my frend Mickey Flynn's wedding. The encumbrance he hooked up with wuz a Polish kid naimed Anna Paderyapski. I didn't know Anna but I didn't blame her—I'd git rid uv that monicker if I had to marry a sea lion. It wuz a small wedding—less than fifty customers, mostly Poles. Most small weddings is refered to as "quiet affairs" but this one wuz so dam noisy it wood have made the roaring uv Niagara Falls sound quieter than Sunday afternoon in a padlocked brewery. After the handcuff party wuz over, Mickey kums over to me an' sez:

"Kum on along, Al, an' join the rest uv the noble haff hundred. They're all crashing over to my new father-in-law's joint now to see how much loose groceries they kin destroy. Theez Polocks win the croix de geer wen it kums to attacking free lunch at a wedding!"

FOLLOWS THE SWALLOWERS

So I followed the swallowers back home. No sooner does we git to the Paderyapski residence than hell starts popping. Three dogs, all members uv this same club, tried to chew me loose frum the most important haff uv my 2 piece suit en route between the front gate an' the porch. I missed 2 uv them but the uther one ain't gonna feel quite rite again until they git him a new A battery.

"Wot's the idea uv all the Bowwows?" sez I to Mickey.

"O," squawks the groom, "there used to be thirteen uv them flea-incubators, but ten uv 'em starved to death arguing with the little Paderapskis over hoo wuz gonna git the bones after eech meal."

As we reached the porch the door opened, an' Mickey wuz hit by an avalanche uv new juvenile relatives an' wuz thrown for a 2 yard loss. The noble haff hundred, pressing hungrily forward, wuz real careless about those hoo fell by the wayside, so 4 uv them fox-trotted akross his carcass before he kood yell "time out!" Wen he got up, me an' him did sum line plunging an' gained the parlor with just a few bruises.

"It wood seem," sez Mr. Flynn to me, "that one uv the minor details in a Polock wedding is the groom. Now I know why one uv theez bimbos never gits married twice. He koodn't live thru 2 uv theez skirmishes."

He wood have said more, but at that moment 6 uv theez hombres, with grins on their mugs an' likker on their breth, sneaked out uv line an' crashed by us with so much force that me an' the groom went into a tail-spin an' landed in a corner for the count uv nine.

"Why is it," sez I to Mickey, as we got up, "that all the likkered-up bozos show their love an' affection for us by caressing us so tenderly?"

"Oh," sez Mr. Flynn, "it jist prooves the truth uv that old proverb; 'Absinthe makes the hart grow fonder.'"

A minute later I wuz introduced to Mickey's wife an' her parents. I took a liking to all 3 uv them. They wuz good natured an' rather quiet. Anna wuz about twenty-one an' rather pritty. Her mother wuz gray haired an' rather thin. Her father wuz stout an' rather drunk.

The grub wuz being piled on a huge table in the dining room, an' the kids wuz all locked in a bedroom to keep 'em frum forming into raiding parties. Everybody wuz handed a paper plate an' the necessary iron ware, an' wuz standing around waiting for a signal to charge.

"Lissen," sez Mickey to me, "let's hide sum place until the shock troops go by. Don't git mixed up in the first 3 waves that hit that table, er yew are sunk!"

He wuz rite! The first 20 customers wot re-appeared frum that mob bearing food with 'em wuz certainly entitled to wear wound stripes. One uv 'em had anuther guy's fork still sticking to his wrist. After the mob around the table begun to thin out, Mr. Flynn grabbed me by the arm an' rushed me forward.

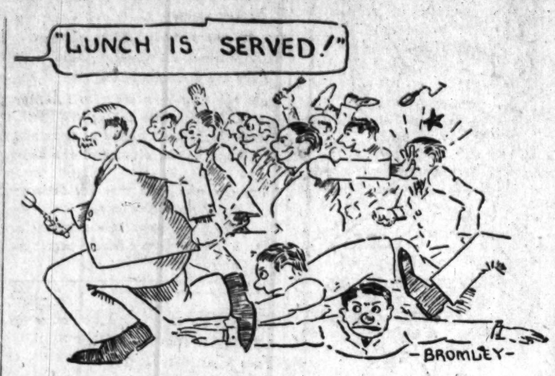
"Quick!" he howls. "Grab all yew want before they open that bedroom door an' let the wolves out!"

"How many kids is in there?" I asks.

"Nine," sez he, "but I only expect to see five kum out. The uther 4 ain't had nuthing to eat fer almost 30 minutes, so they've probably starved to death by this time." We each grabbed a plate uv chow.

"Migawd," sez I, "look at all the empty chairs! All the guys have headed for the cellar. Let's follow 'em!"

I'll say Poland wuz well represented in that cellar! They wuz parked on barrels, boxes, an' on the floor. There wuz plenty uv barrels, an' this mob wuz sure playing a tune on one uv them. They'd take a bite us sausage an' wash it down with a quart uv wine. They wuz using quart jars an' empty tomato cans instead uv glasses. One egg wuz guzzling out uv a gallon lard can. Papa Paderyapski seemed to be Master uv Ceremony down there, an' while he retained his good nature, his natural modesty an' quietness wuz fast melting away, in fact about every 2 minutes he busted forth into song. I love theez poor saps hoo git 2 drinks into them an' then try to proove that the loss uv Caruso, while unfortunate, wuz in no way a calamity. Papa sang in Polish, an' accompanied the singing by gestures. Inasmuch as he wuz balancing a tomato can in each lunch-hook theez gestures brot forth April showers wich descended on the customers, much to their amusement. That crowd wuz too good natured to live!



The noble haff hundred, pressing hugrily forward.

A SLITE ACCIDENT

At this moment there wuz a slite accident. Sum uv theez yaps had stacked a couple uv barrels up, and anuther uv Caruso's competitors wuz singing frum the upper deck. The deck slipped, an' down came McGinty, er wotever his name wuz, accompanied by the upper barrel. The barrel busted, an' 50 gallons uv wine whirled forth, slopped against everybody's shoes, an' then retreated slowly an' painfully towards the sewer. This brot forth a burst uv merriment that made the welkin ring—if there wuz a welkin hanging around at the time. If there wuz any police boxes around they wood have rung also.

Me an' Mickey went upstairs again an' sat on the porch, where little Charlie Paderyapski wuz bizzy trying to slaughter his little sister Maria. Charlie wuz only 6 years old but he wuz the toughest brat wot ever snapped back at a mad dog. It seems that Charlie had had sumthing the matter with his mainspring, wich necessitated his driking cod liver oil. Most kids aint crazy about said tonic but this punk wuz so hard-boiled he dearly loved the dam stuff, wich explains the attempted murder. He had jist accused Maria uv stealing a spoonful uv his fish-grease. Mickey settled the argument by giving them eech a dime an' chasing them out uv the yard.

"Well, Al," sez Mr. Flynn, lighting a cigarete, "wot's yer opinion uv my new relatives an' their frends?"

"I've got the same opinion yew have," sez I, playing safe.

"Well," sez he, after a moment's pause, "don't do it—they hang yuh for it in this State!"

"Yew people have a wrong opinion about we Russians."

MOSE APPEARS

Jist then a battered old wagon, drawn by a feeble an' ancient mule, stopped at the gate, an' the driver, an old colored man, got down an' hobbled towards us.

"Hello, Mose," sez Mickey.

"Howdy suh, howdy," sez Mose; "is yew got any old rags, bottles er newspapers tuh sell?"

"No," sez Mickey, "but if yew buy empty barrels, go rite down stairs. There otta be a duzzen empty by now!"

"Yassuh, yassuh!" squawks Mose, bobbling down the cellar steps.

"Yew know, Al," sez Mickey, putting a chew uv terbacca in his mug, "I kinda like Mose. I kinda like all colored peoples. Colored peoples is under a sort of handicap."

"I yearn for further details," sez I.

"Well, for instance," sez he, "if a Swede mooves into a neighborhood where Swedes is unpoplar he kin claim he' a Norwegian an' get away with it. Same way with a Norwegian—he can claim he's a Swede. Same way with most uv us—we win kin we're something else. But a colored guy ain't got no alibi. If yew ask him whot he is, he's gotta admit he's a Negro. Yup, a colored guy can't be nuthing but a colored guy. Ho, hum! Well, let's go down stairs again!"

A frendly discussion wus under way in the cellar. Old Mose wuz the center uv attention. He wuz sitting on a box, with a canful uv wine in eech mitt.

"Yassuh," he wuz remarkin' to papa Paderyapski, "yassuh! I wuz born in Moscow, an' I lived in Moscow for 5 years, suh, an' I wants tuh say this, suh: yew people over here have formed a wrong opinion about we RUSSIANS—"

Mickey Flynn swallowed his chewin' terbacca an' got deathly sick, the dam fool.

High Pressure Men on Sponge Squad Might Sponge Out the Bootleggers

Prohibition! In her intercourse with bootleggers may she always be in the right; but Prohibition, right or wrong.

GEN. LINCOLN C. ANDREWS, dry ruler of these United States, and E. C. Yellowley, Volstead pro-consul for Illinois, Wisconsin, and Indiana, sat in Mr. Yellowley's apartment in the Congress hotel for two hours recently and told me how they propose to make the country absolutely bone dry.

They're a couple of swell fellows—the general and Mr. Y. I like both of them immensely and wouldn't do a thing to hurt their feelings or discourage them any. But they're both dead wrong as far as the real solution of this prohibition thing is concerned.

I know they're wrong, because I have solved the enforcement problem myself. I have based my sensational findings on a personal study of the minds and methods of some 400 agents I have known in the various stages of the Volstead era. The plan can't fail.

I didn't crack wise to Gen. Andrews or Mr. Yellowley about my ability to clear up the whole thing. The idea which I now am giving to the world will be as much of a surprise to them as it will be a bombshell to the liquor interests.

At the outset it may be as well to admit there are a few spots in the plan that haven't been completely worked out yet. But think of the months and months and millions and millions the government has used up working out the scheme.

The greatest trouble with Gen. Andrews and Mr. Yellowley is that they insist upon surrounding themselves with honest men. Both have performed miracles in weeding corrupt men out of the service. I'll say that 90 per cent of the saints now in government prohibition work won't take dough—at least not unless they are awfully sure of the bigger they're taking it from. Contrary to the general impression, the integrity rating of the dry units is close to the top among public enforcement and administrative groups.

The few dishonest men left in the service are afraid to cop currency; what with all the $5 a day stool pigeons, undercover men, intelligence units and such, it simply isn't a safe racket any more. There is nothing more embarrassing than getting caught with marked money in one's pants.

THE GREAT IDEA

But in return to my solution: My plan is based on the simple but sound economic principle that no business, unless specially endowed, can long exist when too much red ink is used by the bookkeeper. In other words, without profit even the most persistent bootlegger will go into some line of more or less legitimate endeavor in spite of the fact that it may involve hard work.

It therefore is obvious that the way to end bootlegging is to take away the profits of bootlegging. The way to do this is to shove down bootleggers until they shoot up the prices to the absolute maximum. Then shake them some more.

They can't sell the stuff at more than maximum price. They can't stand the shakedowns unless they're selling booze. They can't avoid extortion if they do sell. They have one alternative: They must get out of the racket.

The outcome is as plain as the nose on a gin hound's face. No bootleggers, no booze. No booze and the Volstead act is a tremendous success. Ridiculously simple, isn't it?

My plan when adopted will place a premium on extralegal procedure to an extent unheard of even in Volsteadism.

At the head of the unit will be a man of the temperament and finesse of Mr. Gaston B. Means, who now is a guest of the government at Atlanta—just starting on his second two year lag.

Administrators will be selected from the list of those who have been convicted of shakedowns totaling $100,000 and up each. There are more than enough to head the twenty-five or thirty existent prohibition zones of the country.

The lesser executive positions will be filled by burglars I have known in the service who since have been forced into other lines of enterprise. All must have had a record of at least a grand a week during the time before Gen. Andrews and Mr. Yellowley made the going so hard.

The unit will be self-supporting, for all agents will be obliged to cut fifty-fifty with the government. Each month each agent will be given an efficiency rating. No drones will be allowed to remain in the hive and partake of the honey fetched in by the workers.

Just to keep up morale we may establish a bonus system for "most ingenious shakes," "largest total stakes," etc. Certainly an agent would be entitled to a reward each time he forced a big time legger into bankruptcy.

STANDARD GAGS

The standard extortions which have produced bucks in the past will suffice until some lightning brained old timer evolves some new stuff.

Here are a few of the good old favorites:

THE MORTGAGE ON THE CAR—There isn't a major bootlegger who hasn't paid enough mortgages [theoretically] on prohibition agents' cars [real and phantom] to establish a livery service of astounding proportions. This touch has been good for sums ranging from $150 to $3,500. Nine hundred has been a good average in the past, but the boys will have to do better than this when my plan becomes effective.

THE WIFE IN THE HOSPITAL—This is a sure fire dough extractor. Of course, if the agent's wife actually is in the hospital, so much the better. But that little detail doesn't make a whole lot of difference.

THE FILING CABINET GAG—In this stunt the bootlegger victim, or shakee, is told by the agent that he, the agent, "happened to be going through the big boss' file," and there discovered the record of a lot of dirty digs against the bootleggers. The agent expects to be back at the file the next day, and, for a consideration, will pull out the damaging documents. This one is a cinch, for the agent doesn't have to show the rescued records "for fear of jeopardizing himself." The bootlegger may know the agent is a liar, but he can't take a chance. * Result: Mr. Rum Peddler lays it on the line.

THE PAY WHEN CAUGHT ARRANGEMENT—Before dishonest men were driven from the prohibition unit some of the boys refused to participate in petty larceny dodges and pay roll rackets. They wanted no friendly arrangement with bootleggers. But just let them step in on something. Then it costs a pretty penny. These workers are all assured high rankings in my reorganization plan.

THE SPANISH PRISONER VARIANT—Many agents have done well borrowing from bootleggers with no surety other than fascinating narratives about rich relatives who were about to die or get out of prison or something. There's no end of effective things that can be accomplished with this one.

I once knew four prohibition agents who split a $10 purse four ways, after "giving a pass" to an offending druggist, who had sized them up immediately as $2.50 workers. It is patent that every safeguard must be thrown up to eliminate such miserable pikers from the reorganized service. This kind of rascal soon would nullify the whole plan.

However, dishonesty on a big scale will not alone be sufficient to assure personal triumphs to agents selected to carry out the new plan.

Resourcefulness and frankness are characteristics that will be given every consideration. A case in point:

Three agents were working on a squad together. They were congenial among themselves and seemed to be pulling well together as far as their routine work was concerned. All three were industrious and, so far as I know, all could read and write.

Suddenly one of the men was removed from the squad at the request of the other two. At first I suspected a quarrel, but I could find no evidence to support this theory.

My interest in the situation increased when I observed that the transferred agent was replaced by one of the better educated members of the staff.

Finally I decided to learn something about the manipulation from one of the original squad members.

"What's the idea of kicking off So-and-So and replacing him with Harry Whoozis?" I asked.

"Well, it was this way," answered the agent with splendid candor. "When So-and-So was working with us, none of us could divide by three very well. This caused a lot of trouble and suspicion. Harry's a bear at arithmetic and can figure out the splits quicker than a flash and then prove to our satisfaction that he's right. Now harmony prevails."

Last of Chicago's Chinatown Treks South to New Location

By John Kelley.

MOVING vans have been busy of late on Clark street, between Van Buren and Harrison. As the result of flitting activities this block, which once was the Chinatown of Chicago, has half a hundred "For Rent" signs tacked on doors or displayed in windows. Only two Chinese stores and a chop-suey restaurant remain to remind the wayfarer of the block's former glamour.

The exodus, which begun several weeks ago, marks the passing of a district that for many years was one of the city's show places. Chinatown, with its quaint customs and oddly clad denizens, was like a bit of the orient set down in the heart of a western metropolis. It was colorful, picturesque, and one's visit to Chicago was incomplete without a trip through the Chinese quarter.

Here in the old days was the joss house where a fierce looking idol carved out of wood was worshipped by the followers of Confucius. Lighted tapers that threw off an incense burned day and night in front of joss, and on a table within reach were edibles, including fruits, nuts and cakes. This particular joss must have had a voracious appetite, for the lunch table was replenished every day or so.

On both sides of Clark street, down in gloomy basements or up creaking stairways to lofts, were opium joints, lottery offices, and gaming resorts. On Sundays, when Chinese laundrymen came to Clark street for recreation or to purchase another week's supply of groceries, the fan tan and bung loo games were crowded with devotees. Slant-eyed Mongolians with queues hanging down their backs pattered along the street in sandals. They were loose fitting garments and some of them had fez-like caps, an insignia of rank. The financial standing of the wearer was shown by the head covering. Only those who were in a legitimate business were privileged to wear a cap. This excluded laundrymen, gamblers, opium dealers, and operators of lotteries.

WEIRD MUSIC

Silken banners that bore Chinese characters hung from the walls of shops that correspond with the American grocery. As one walked along the street he heard weird sounds that came from a Chinese orchestra. The Chinese have strange notions about music. They like noise and plenty of it. For that reason a Chinese orchestra is composed of tom-toms, squeaky fiddles, reed instruments on the order of a clarionet and cymbals whose crash can be heard a block away. The man who plays the cymbals is the whole thing. His merits as a performer are measured by the amount of noise he can produce.

But the crash of cymbals or the squeaky notes of the Chinese fiddle are no longer heard on Clark street. The glory of old Chinatown begun to fade when a new Chinese quarter was established about fifteen years ago on 22d street. A good many shopkeepers removed to the new district, but others were loath to leave. Among the first of those who moved away was Hip Lung, the oldest Chinese merchant in the city. Hip Lung isn't his name, by the way, but as representative of the Hip Lung company he acquired the cognomen by which he is generally known.

The Chinatown which was established in 22d street has never been as popular as the old one. But this does not interest John Chinaman, who has an inbred aversion to curious people who come snooping around.

Chinese shopkeepers who within the last few weeks deserted Clark street have established a new business district on State street, south of 23d. When the store leases of those who still remain on Clark street expire the keepers will remove to the new quarter, and then old Chinatown will be only a memory.

The Chinese quarter in Clark street was established about fifty years ago. At one time it had a population of 1,200 Mongolians. There were forty Chinese stores, some of which did a flourishing trade. Several chop suey restaurants were operated in the block, and a trip to Chinatown usually ended in being introduced to the mysteries of some exotic viand. Many a visitor to Chinatown formed the chop suey habit, which its victims say is harder to quit than smoking or drinking.

NATURAL GAMBLERS

The Chinese are natural gamblers. It is a part of their existence. In the old days when a new gambling joint was opened the proprietor notified Chinatown by placards all over the block. These placards were an invitation to attend the opening. A big free lunch was set out for those who came, and a Chinese band discoursed a certain kind of melody which required an oriental ear to appreciate.

"Mushmouth" Johnson's gambling house at 311 Clark street was the largest establishment of its kind in Chinatown. Johnson was a Negro, but he catered to whites, blacks and Chinese. The night that Lee Lan broke the bank at Johnson's was a memorable one in Chinatown. Lee Lan entered the place with only six bits—gambler's parlance for seventy-five cents. He first tried his luck at the roulette wheel and then moved over to the stud poker game. In a few minutes' play he was $35 to the good. With his winnings he went over to the table where a score of whites and blacks were shoting craps. He made "pass" after "pass," letting the bets "ride," and after three hours' play he walked out of the place with $10,987. The orgy that followed this big winning was the talk of Chinatown for weeks after Lee Lan had spent the money and was again working in a laundry.

Most Chinamen wear a bracelet for luck, which is called a "mook ark." One night in a crap game Lee Lan put up his bracelet and lost it. After losing his "mook ark" he fell into disgrace and the tong to which he belonged expelled him.

HAD OWN MAYOR

Chinatown had its "mayor," whose duties chiefly devolved upon acting as interpreter in police courts and regulating hop joints and fan tan games. It was an elective office without remuneration, but the perquisites were worth while.

Sam Moy, who was Chinatown's first mayor, held office for several years, and nothing but death could separate him from the job. It is no figure of speech to say that he was the "most popular mayor" Chinatown ever had.

They say that the Chinese have no sense of humor, but Sam Moy disproved this libel upon his race. One night in passing the blacksmith shop of William Beamish on La Salle street Sam discovered a dead goat which was known to everybody in Chinatown as Beamish's goat. Sam cautiously approached the beast to make sure that he wasn't feigning death. After being convinced that life was extinct he ran to a fire engine house near by and announced the news.

"Let's get tin cans," said Sam, "and hang them up in front of the blacksmith shop. You know, when a fireman or a policeman dies they drape the front of the building in mourning."

Sam found willing workers to assist him and they scoured the alleys of Chinatown for old tin cans. A ladder was taken from the fire engine house and the mourning symbols, appropriate for the decedent, were hung in festoons above the door of the blacksmith shop. If Beamish had ever found out that Sam Moy was the person who played the joke on him there would have been a dead Chinaman.

Sam Moy had the largest funeral that ever left Chinatown. More than 100 carriages followed the hearse to Rosehill cemetery. It is customary to put a hamper of foodstuffs on a Chinaman's grave so that he will not be hungry in crossing the river Styx. A forty pound roast pig was placed on Moy's grave, together with a huge dish of rice and half a bushel of mandarins, of which he was especially fond. A saloonkeeper, at whose place Sam spent $10 daily over the bar, slipped a small flask of whisky under the pig with the remark that "he'll need a jolt of booze worse than a sandwich."

TONG WARS

One night in the early 1890s guns blazed in Chinatown, which was the beginning of tong wars in Chicago. Since then the warring tongs have killed a dozen men.

It is only in recent years that the Chinese in this country have become Americanized. When China became a republic the Chinese in America cut off their queues and laid aside their native costumes for their present garb. With the passing of the Kwang dynasty and the adoption of the Gregorian calendar, the Chinese New Year celebration, which in the old days was a great festival in Chinatown, was discontinued.

The Chinese New Year lasted from one to two weeks. Clark street was a gay place during these celebrations. There was a mingling of the tongs—the On Leongs and the Hep Sings—and during the festival season guns and hatchets were laid away. Great quantities of high powered rice wine were consumed, the fan tan and bung loo resorts never closed, and special programs were arranged by Chinese musicians for the proper observance of the New Year.

According to ancient custom, all Chinamen paid their debts at this holiday season. This "heathen" custom is still adhered to by Chinese in Chicago and elsewhere.

Odd Stories of Chicago Society

SOCIETY columns mirror only a faint outline of the lives of those whose doings they chronicle. If you read them you may know that so-called smart folk go to luncheons, teas, receptions, dinners, balls, and parties. You may very well gain the impression that they go through the paces of life like so many animated puppets modeling fashionable clothes. You may learn, of course, that society women give a proportion of their time to the furthering of charitable works, and that society men attend meetings to promote civic and artistic advancement of the city.

But society editors do not tell you of the human side of the every minute activities of the inhabitants of the Gold Coast. Even the more gossipy ones fail to relate the funny and interesting bits about the characteristics and doings of the beau monde. That is why Maurine Watkins, author of the play "Chicago," referred recently to "the cemetery that is the social columns."

A GATE CRUSHER

If you read the daily society notes all your life you will never hear the tale of the elderly woman whose name graces the Social Register, who has caused the opera management a great deal of bother. She is one of the characters of Chicago. She has known better days, and her desire to attend the opera is apparently out of proportion with the size of her purse, for she has used the entrances from the Auditorium hotel on many occasions without the formality of a ticket. On one particular gala night the balcony ushers were surprised to discover her ascending the fire escape.

HER ONE FAULT

Another story that goes the way of the underground system of information concerns the girl, pretty as she can be, and a bud of a year or so ago. When all the flattering things have been said about her, somebody usually remarks, "But she cheats at cards."

LOST ON THE "L"

The pleasant foibles of society people as well as their more unattractive ones, go often untold.

It was interesting to me to observe the behavior of Harold F. McCormick, his daughter, Miss Muriel McCormick, and Mrs. George McKinlock one wintry night last fall in an L station. It was after one of the big football games, and they were evidently planning to take the electric to Lake Forest. They approached the turnstile, paid for their tickets, and then looked around them in a bewildered way.

"Where do we go now?" queries Miss McCormick, although the sign "From City" was quite obvious.

THE ELEVATOR MAN

Unenlightened, one visions society children as being protected little automatons who have governesses to teach them their letters, and who walk sedately down the street for their relaxation. Not so with Horace Gray Jr., however, the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker. He was pleased with the elevator at the Woman's Exchange, so he promptly applied for the position of starter and operator. He got the job, was conscientious in his duties, reporting for work after his lessons were over in the morning, and keeping a weather eye on his machine even during the process of consuming his lunch. He boasted of his success one day to his uncle, Arthur Meeker Jr.

"I get 25 cents a day," he said, "and my lunches, besides."

He was self-reliant, too, on the subject of those lunches.

"I would like some meat," he informed the waitress, "and some lettuce."

He refused the chicken salad, but suffered her to provide him with some of the lettuce decorating the salad, ate a roll, and a dessert.

THAT'S EASY.

"What are you going to say on these important questions that have arisen?"

"I'll say 'Present' when the roll is called," answered Senator Sorghum, "and 'aye' when my party requires my vote."—Washington Star.

HER NATURAL GAIT.

Londoner—Chicago? O, yes; that's out near the Rockies, isn't it?

Embarrassing Moments

Detained.

I am a principal of a junior high school, and one day as the students were passing from assembly hall to classrooms I was standing on the stage watching the line pass below me. I noticed several pushing and I called to them, but one girl seemed to be pushing more, and scrambling to get through. I reached down and grasped her by the shoulder and held on, meanwhile watching the others and paying no attention to this student who struggled and endeavored to get away.

After the students had all gone I gave a shake and said, "Now, you may go."

You can imagine my embarrassment when I found it was one of my teachers.

R. E. S.

Speaking His Mind.

I am a member of a musical comedy. One thing I distinctly remember about my travels is that in a little western town at which we had just arrived, there was a little theater at which we were to play. When we arrived at the theater I examined the settings and found they were all mixed up. I immediately went to find the stage manager. I found a young man back stage whom I supposed to be a property boy, and I said to him, "That stage manager must be a regular bonehead to get the setting mixed up in such a way as that."

He said, "I couldn't help it. I told them not to unpack until your property man arrived."

"Of course you couldn't help it," I told him, "but where is that idiot, the stage manager? I want to see him."

"You're looking right at him," he said, with a withering glance.

Talk about embarrassed, OH BOY!

B. P.

I WORRY

"What's your pet worry? Tell it in a short and snappy jingle and we'll pay you $2 if we print it. Address Worries, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Here are a couple of samples:

I am the guy who worries for fear
I'll miss the train;
Reach the station ahead of time and wait in the sleet and the rain.

I am the girl who worries because my hair won't curl;
I'm afraid when I meet my Mr.
Right he won't love a straight-haired girl.

SENTENCE SERMONS

ABOUT BROADWAY

Imogene Wilson and Frank Tinney

By Mark Hellinger

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—We write this week of Broadway love. Romances that flourish on the big street are many and varied. But they are sad—most of them. For, while they flame in the beginning like huge torches, they burn into ashes with a rapidity that is startling. And the ashes, in most cases, are merely black bits of bitterness that are ugly and unappealing.

There are, of course, exceptions. There have been Broadway loves that remained as tender and beautiful as the hectic life permitted them to be. But they are few and far between. As a general rule the average Broadway romance lasts but a short time.

As we write we are leading up to one specific case. We refer to Frank Tinney and Imogene Wilson. Let us carry you over a period of three years and show you these people as we knew them.

It is a sad story. It is strange. It is funny. It is Broadway. . . .

It is the latter part of May, 1924. We are sitting in an apartment on West 72d street. Opposite us is sitting a very beautiful girl whose hair is golden and whose eyes are soft and sweet.

The girl is Imogene Wilson. She is young. She is a member of Mr. Ziegfeld's Follies, playing at the New Amsterdam. Mr. Ziegfeld, who is supposed to know, has admitted that this is the most beautiful girl he has ever glorified. She holds a motion picture contract to play opposite Douglas Fairbanks in a new photoplay. Surely she is a very lucky girl!

The morning of that day had found her breaking into the newspapers on an extensive scale. She fell in love with Mr. Frank Tinney, the great comedian. He loved her, too, it seemed, but he had a wife and boy at home. So he left the beautiful showgirl in order to go back to his wife.

FAKES SUICIDE

We have flown, the show girl decided on suicide. Not a real suicide, you understand, but enough to get her into the newspapers. She planned carefully and well. Her wisdom was far beyond her years.

Two little liver pills and a glass of water did the trick. The police arrived. The ambulance, too. Then the reporters. And when morning rolled around pictures of Imogene Wilson and Frank Tinney appeared side by side in the public prints. Such a wise little lady!

Tsst, then, is the situation on this one night in May. It is warm outside—almost hot. The windows in this room are wide open. On a piano stands a vase of flowers. On the walls a picture or two. On a chair a new dress, all spangles and gold, is carelessly resting.

We are there to do the story of this girl's life. The usual butterfly hash, you know, with an extra dash of pepper. In the kitchen, just off the room we are in, a colored girl is humming happily as she bustles around. Across the courtyard some one is whistling a gay tune.

We take out pencil and paper. The girl, her eyes wide with the excitement of it all, commences to talk. . . .

Suddenly, on the left, a door opens. A short, stocky man stumbles into the room. It is Frank Tinney, the great star of the Music Box Revue. Such a funny man on the stage! Earning $1,500 a week. Audiences love him. He makes them laugh until they have to hold their sides. A great comedian—Frank Tinney.

But he is not funny on this night in May. His eyes are narrowed. He has been drinking. He steadies himself on a chair and regards us with suspicion.

"Who are you?" he mutters.

We put out our hand.

"How are you you, Frank?" we inquire. "Don't you remember that we met at the Equity ball at the Astor last year?"

He does not take our hand. He turns about and looks at the beautiful girl.

"What's this all about?" he mumbles.

The girl runs to her love.

"Frank," she cries, "this is a newspaper man. Don't insult him. He's here to do a story. Frank, dear. Frank, dearest. Honey, look at me. You know I love you."

The girl has fallen to her knees. She is clinging to the comedian, looking at him with eyes that are twin pools of adoration. He looks down at her. And then smiles at us.

"Okay, pal," he chirps, "but you better go. We don't want any more stories. The wife gets sore. There's a laugh."

We take our hat and prepare to depart. A third person is always a crowd. When two lovers quarrel on a boulevard, however, a third person is a whole army.

They accompany us to the door. His arm is about her shoulder. We bid them good-night in our best professional manner.

"Good-night," they respond.

And the door softly closes. . . .

THE GRAND JURY

It is late in June, 1924. The scene is the grand jury room in the Criminal Court's building. Imogene Wilson is here. And Frank Tinney. And Mrs. Frank Tinney. And newspaper men galore.

The beautiful girl is trying to have the comedian indicted for assault. She has charged that, as soon as we left her apartment on that night in May, Frank Tinney had beaten her. He had done so and so, she charged, and so and so and so and so and so and so.

A sensation had believed Imogene's story. We had held the comedian for the grand jury. Now the big day was at hand. Would the grand jury hold the funny man for assaulting his beautiful ladylove?

Frank paces about nervously. He is pale and wan and tired. He has lost his job in the Music Box Revue. Too much scandal, they say. Imogene is in the next room. She does not see the man she loves.

Witnesses are heard. Minutes pass—nerve wracking thing. The door of the jury room is opened. A face is thrust forth.

"The grand jury," a voice cries, "refuses to indict Frank Tinney!"

Imogene stamps her foot and says she cannot understand it all. Outside, a score of photographers gather around Tinney. He puts his arm around his wife. And he poses with her.

"Never again," he cries. "From now on my wife is my only love." . . .

It is now the latter part of August, 1926. The scene is in the lobby of one of the better class hotels. Imogene Wilson is sitting opposite us. Her eyes now are a bit harder than they were. She knew much before. She knows much more now.

Frank Tinney has gone to Europe. A contract—and all that. He planned to return to Broadway as soon as the scandal had worn away. He is in London, where money is big and Paris is near.

Imogene is talking. She is telling us everything there is to tell.

"I love him," she says simply, "and I am going to join him abroad as soon as he cables me to come.

"There is no other man in the world for me. Frank and I have gone through much together. But we know now that we love each other. And that is all that counts.

"As long as I live, I will love Frank Tinney. He is mine. I am his. We will be together as long as we live. There is nothing else to be said."

Two months later, Imogene Wilson sailed for London.

It is the early summer of 1925. We are sitting in a summer garden on an estate near Rockville Center Long Island. The estate belongs jointly to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tinney.

Mrs. Tinney has just sued her husband for absolute divorce. Her attorney had gone to London for the evidence. He had been successful. Frank Tinney would soon be free to marry Imogene.

Mosquitos are about in abundance. A block away, an elderly man in overalls is painting the top of a barn. Frank Tinney Jr., a lad of seven, is turning somersaults on the lawn. The air is lazy. But so, so peaceful.

Mrs. Tinney is talking. She is a clever woman, one of the brightest we have ever met. She learned her Broadway in the school of hard knocks. And she knows that the easiest way to take blows is to smile them away.

"I loved Frank Tinney very, very dearly," she says, "although I doubt if he ever loved me for any great length of time. He has never been faithful to me since the day we were married. But what was I to do?

"One thing he does love, however—and that's our kid. Frank's mad about him. It was the only thing, I guess, that ever kept him at home.

THE PRESENT

"I didn't want to divorce Frank, but I find now that I must. I didn't want him to marry that girl, but I guess it's no use. He loves her and she loves him. So I'm bowing out of the picture."

Six months later, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tinney were divorced.

We come now to the present. It is but a scant few days ago. We are going down the bay on a revenue cutter to meet the incoming liner, the Majestic. Imogene Wilson is aboard that boat.

Many things have happened since the summer of 1925. Frank Tinney is now in a sanitarium outside of Philadelphia, Pa. He had been a failure in London. He had returned to America. He had been given a job by Earl Carroll. But he was no longer a star comedian, billed over the entire show. He was an important member of the cast, but his starring days were over.

He had gone on the road. In Detroit came a nervous breakdown. Collapse. Delirium. He has not worked since. They say that his sanity is gone and that he may not live for more than six months. A great comedian, because he would not take direction, must die in a tragic rôle.

But wait! Imogene is coming back. Perhaps she will run to the rescue. Perhaps she will bring him back to himself. Perhaps—well, anything can happen on Broadway.

It is cold out on this morning. Bitter cold. It is very early—7 o'clock or so. Blocks of ice drift by the cutter. The sun comes out, but it fails to make the air any warmer. Nine o'clock. There's the Majestic. Will they never let us get aboard? Lord, it's cold!

Ten o'clock. Aboard at last. Where's Imogene Wilson's cabin? Number 86-E. She is coming in under the name of Mary Robertson—her real name, incidentally. We rush down the aisle to her cabin. And knock at the door. A voice bids us enter.

We turn the knob and open the door.

There she is. A bit older—but hardly noticeable. Thinner, perhaps. Only her eyes are different. They are narrowed now—and very wise. Sophistication has crept in. She is still very beautiful.

"Imogene!" we cry.

She raises her hand. And she speaks with a decided English accent.

"How do you do?" she asks. "How have you been?" You will call me Miss Robertson, won't you?"

We nod vaguely, not knowing what to say. A man is sitting alongside of her. He is very tall and handsome. She introduces us. He is a German film actor.

"This is Nils Asther," says Miss Robertson, "and we are very dear friends. Played in our last picture together in Germany. He speaks no English at all. But I will be glad to translate anything you might wish to ask."

All this in that remarkable English accent. We feel a great desire to burst into peals of laughter. But we refrain.

Imogene keeps speaking. Every once in so often she turns and looks softly at her actor companion. His glance at her is even softer. This, we determine, is no ordinary friendship.

"Yes," she is saying, "I have been studying very hard. Concentrating on one subject at a time, you know. Just at present I am devoting myself to Greek history. Fascinating, isn't it?"

HER ANSWER

All this without a word about Frank Tinney. We hate to ask her. She seems so happy. Finally another reporter enters and takes the responsibility upon himself.

"Pardon, Miss Wilson," he says "but I am compelled to ask you this. Do you intend to see Mr. Tinney shortly? He's dying, you know."

The girl rises to her feet. She draws herself to her full height. Her eyes flash. Her tone is bitter.

"Sir," she says to the reporter, "how dare you ask me such a question? Did you come here to insult me? I have no intention of ever seeing that man again. Please do not bring up his name."

* *

And there you have the story of Frank Tinney and Imogene Wilson. It is a sterling example of Broadway love. You can laugh at it if you will. But every word is true.

You cannot blame Frank Tinney. Today you can feel only pity for him. You cannot blame the girl. She made a great mistake. And if she wants to forget the past, she deserves that opportunity.

But it is strange, isn't it?

CRUEL OVERSIGHT.

Jones—Why don't Brown and Robinson speak now?

Smith—Well, Brown, wrote a book with no end of scandal in it about people we know.

Jones—I see. He put Robinson in it.

Smith—No, that's just the point. He didn't.—London Passing Show.

Imogene Wilson—She was one of the most beautiful of all the beautiful Ziegfeld Follies girls; she was the co-star with Frank Tinney in this hectic romance of Broadway.

[Copyright: Underwood & Underwood.]

Frank Tinney—His Broadway romance with Imogene Wilson is ended; his career as a high salaried comedian is ended, too, it seems, and he is said to be near death.

The Shoreland Hotel

PRESTIGE

In any line is not won without sheer merit . . . whether it be a motor car, a famous train or an exclusive hotel. There is an inherent value in the service received which compels the unconscious tribute.

In the short space of its eight months' existence, the Shoreland has won this Prestige—not alone in Chicago but in New York or Los Angeles or wherever people are wont to gather and discuss the world's fine hostelries—you will find The Shoreland mentioned. Ability and willingness to render an unusual service has engendered this tribute.

The usual penalty of such Prestige is to be considered high priced—extravagant. To the contrary many families find residence here with all housekeeping cares eliminated less expensive than ordinary apartment dwelling.

Those who have dined at The Shoreland recognize its ability to produce catering of a class second to none in Chicago—equaled by few. Yet the prices are most moderate—table d'hote luncheon, $1.00. Table d'hote dinners, $2.00. A la carte prices reasonable. Club breakfasts from 40 cents.

The Shoreland resident mentions his home with satisfaction, it stamps him as one with discriminating taste as well as sound judgment.

If you live in a house or an apartment let us compare costs of living and show you how economical is residence here.

If you live in another hotel you owe it to yourself to call and make a comparison of values received.

H. J. Tawresey
President

Single rooms on leases as low as $118.75 per month. Housekeeping apartments, 4 to 9 rooms, $237.50 to $1377.50 per month. Non-housekeeping apartments—living room with one or two bedrooms, $285.00 to $427.50 per month.

THE HERO - - -

OFFICER MALLEY was the handsomest man on the force. Six feet two of him and every pound well placed so that he was broad shouldered and gracefully muscular. A stanch son of Ireland was Malley, with the lakes of Killarney in his eyes and the raven black of his hair and the brogue of the old country just one generation behind him. His old mother had it with her slurred syllables and her gay shawl brought over from County Kerry.

It was a proud moment for Mother Malley when her son was made a mounted policeman. And a fine figure he made in his sleek uniform on his handsome black horse, guarding the bridle paths of Central park.

"You'll be a hero, me boy," said Mother Malley. "Like your father before you, him that was killed in the riot 'round Dublin. You'll be a hero, with your name in the papers and all."

"Aw, quit kiddin', ma," said Officer Malley, blushing, though he secretly yearned for that very thing to happen. Sometimes he almost wished for a runaway that he might perform a grand rescue, and little thought of the way he was to become a hero and of the strange things which were to come of that.

Officer Malley used to watch admiringly the sons and daughters of wealth as they took their morning rides. Being young and an Irishman, it must be noted that Officer Malley admired the daughters in particular. Perfect they were, those society girls. Perfect as so many dainty flowers, with that haughty quirk of their heads as though all the world were the dirt beneath their horses' hoofs. Their smart habits, their jaunty mannish hats, their pink cheeks on which there was never a wrinkle.

And, indeed, why should there be, reflected Officer Malley, since they'd never been troubled by an overdue rent bill or any bills at all. Their little hands, inside neat gloves, were as smooth as their cheeks, since they'd never washed dishes. They were pampered and petted, and all their way was made smooth by wealth.

THE RESCUE

Officer Malley looked at them and sighed, not with envy for their wealth but because they were so pretty. And there was one in especial, of course, who was prettier than the others. Each morning she gave the young policeman a crisp "Good morning," and the glance of her black eyes which followed the casual greeting in an upward curve was not so crisp.

Each morning Officer Malley returned her salute and followed her trim, little figure with worshipful eyes. She was made on the diminutive and pleasant lines of a Dresden china figure, so that, even in her tailored riding trousers, she managed to look completely feminine. Her face, small, heart-shaped, had the mischievious smile of a knowing child.

In the fine mornings of September and October she came almost every day for her ride. With November came cool breezes, and also came the accident and Officer Malley's great opportunity.

He had returned her greeting but five minutes before, had seen her riding away from him, disappear round a curve in the path, when he heard the swift thud of hoofs. Somebody must be going at a terrific pace. He wheeled his horse sharply just as the runaway dashed past him. She was sticking on gamely, but her mount was plainly beyond her control.

Officer Malley and his trained steed went into swift action. God help her to stick on two more minutes—one more minute now. Expertly he caught at the runaway's bridle with his left hand and with his right arm swung the girl clear of the saddle, drew her in front of him. His own horse paced the other until the frightened animal slowed down and both drew to a pause.

The girl lay against the policeman's shoulder. Her face, close to his, was flushed, her eyes bright, and she smiled up at him. Game little sport that she was! Having the nerve to grin at him like that, instead of fainting or weeping. Her hand, those tiny, gloved fingers, rested lightly on his collar.

"You're wonderful," she whispered. "You've saved my life."

Officer Malley lowered her to the ground, almost brusquely, because it is not a part of police regulations for a rescuer to kiss the lady he has rescued, and he felt he would do just that if she lingered another moment in his arms.

The girl's hat had fallen off and she brushed back her auburn boyish bob.

"I can manage all right now," she said. "You needn't trouble about me."

But Officer Malley did trouble enough to escort her back to the riding stables. When they parted she looked up at him almost shyly.

"Dad will want to thank you," she said. "And I want to thank you again. Won't you please call tonight?"

"It was nothing, nothing at all," he lied gallantly. "But I'll be pleased to call."

She drew a vanity bag from her pocket and, scrawling an address on a card, handed it to him. After she had gone he looked at it and whistled.

"Good Lord!" he said. "And it's me was rescuing the daughter of the sugar king."

THE ELOPEMENT

Malley's deed was duly reported by Malley's captain, and the handsome policeman became a hero. His imposing figure on horseback was displayed in but slightly smaller size than the piquant features of Theodora Gerson, the sugar king's daughter.

Malley's old mother bustled with pride, but Malley himself was strangely unmoved by his eminence. For by this time a more important thing had entered his life. He was in love with Theodora Gerson.

Ridiculous, if you will, for a policeman to love the heiress of millions. It was even more ridiculous, to Malley's way of thinking, that the heiress should love him in return. But love him she did, and gave him clearly to understand it that evening he called at her request to receive her thanks.

She made it plain, in the thousand little ways a girl knows, that she liked Malley, policeman or not, heiress or not. She was completely bowled over by his 6 foot 2 of good looking manhood, his Irish eyes and the adoring looks they gave her.

Two weeks later Malley eloped with Theodora and made her Mrs. Tim Malley. Immediately after the ceremony a small thing happened that irritated him for the moment but, being much in love, he brushed it aside.

"Now, we've kept it a secret long enough, darling," he said. "And I'd like to introduce you to my old mother, who'll be longing to love you, too."

"Your mother," said Theodora with a slight shrug. "O, let's not go to see her now, Tim." And that was that.

Old man Gerson took the blow like a sport. He would not cast out his daughter because she had married outside the Blue Book. He presented the young couple with his country home, his blessing and a substantial allowance.

Malley resigned from the force and they went to the country home for their honeymoon, which passed as honeymoons have a way of doing, on clouds of roses.

It had waned by some two months when Tim gave voice to worry that had been troubling him.

"I'm feeling a shame to myself, Theodora," he said. "A big, strapping man like myself living on the charity of my father-in-law. I ought to be getting a job."

"You don't mean to go back to the force," protested Theodora in white horror.

"Not if you don't want me to," said he miserably. "But something."

"If you insist, dad might give you a nice easy berth selling bonds," she laughed.

Tim said nothing, but he smiled bitterly at the idea of himself dolled up in spats and a cane after the manner of the dapper bond salesman, peddling something of which he knew nothing.

HER FRIENDS

The next worry concerned itself with Theodora's friends. Their number was legion and their habits were those peculiar to the smart, fast set. At all hours they descended upon the Malleys, partook freely of the large cellar, and half wrecked the house.

At first Malley was in some awe of them. After all, they were the children of wealth and society. But gradually his honest soul rose in revolt at their orgies. The girls, in particular, disgusted him.

One evening when even Theodora had grown tipsy on champagne he protested. She grinned at him, a glassy eyed grin. "Don't be a prude. They're my friends. Everybody has a good time. Wake up."

Still another flaw in the marriage upon which the honeymoon was now no more than a flickering sickle far in the east. When Malley ventured to mention a subject which was almost sacred to him he was appalled by his wife's reply.

"Babies," she laughed. "Don't be silly. I haven't time to be bothered with them. Nobody has children any more except poor people."

Malley's Irish grin left him these days; he said little, because the hurt that was growing in his heart and that was born of disillusion was too deep for words. About him he saw falling in shreds and patches the last remnants of his love for his wife.

He saw that his ways were not her ways, that the difference in station they had disregarded was raising a real barrier between them. And he saw the end inevitable.

Strangely enough, it came at least through a final effort on his part to reach a better understanding.

Unwisely he chose the morning after a late party to approach Theodora. She nursed a headache, a grouch, and a cigaret, which helped neither of the first two.

"I wish you'd come to see my mother," he begged. "It's three months now and you've never gone with me to see her. I've told her all about you and it's hurting her that you don't come."

Theodora flung away her cigaret, impatiently.

"I've tried not to offend you by telling you the truth," she said. "But if you nag at me, I will. Can't you understand that I don't want to meet your mother, Tim? What on earth have I in common with her?"

YOU COMMON COP!

All Malley's Irish rose in defense.

"There's one thing sure you haven't in common with her," he snapped. "And that's decency."

The girl's small face flamed in anger to match his own. "How dare you?" she screamed. "How dare you say such things to me, you—you common cop?"

She was working herself into hysterics. "You live on my money and you have the nerve to criticize my friends when you're nothing but low Irish. That's all you are."

Malley's voice was deadly crisp. "Irish I may be, and a cop, and I'm proud of both," he said. "But live on your money I'll do no longer, nor with you at all." He turned at the door. "And I'll thank you not to come riding in the park any more," he said. "For if I see you, I'll forget I'm also a gentleman, and I'll punch your face. You can get a divorce and be damned."

Officer Malley took up his old beat on the bridle path, but 'tis said, to this day, though his rescues have been many and he's rated quite a hero, that, if the runaway's rider be a girl, he sets her straightway on the ground nor pauses to take a word of thanks from her.

"Plenty of Beans."

I had been away at college, and when I came home for the summer several changes had been made in the bungalows across the street—changes in porches, changes in gardens and gateways, and in one case changes even in the people inside. I subconsciously noticed all but the last.

One morning, being unusually busy in the kitchen and quite full of the responsibility of a house left entirely in my care, I resolved to be rid of all interruptions of agents by the simple process of not answering the door. And then around the corner of the back porch, just as I went out to shake the duster, came one of those farmer vegetable women holding forth a huge pan of beans. "Some nice fresh beans for you this morning," said she.

There was no escaping her. I determined to make quick work of her. "I don't care for any beans this morning," said I, quite firmly.

The woman actually looked astonished. "But——" she began.

"Not this morning," I repeated then. "I'm sorry." She seemed so truly surprised at my refusal that I felt obliged to add that we had plenty of beans—a distinct prevarication.

Then, finally, "Perhaps you don't know it, but I am your neighbor from across the street. We have so many beans in our garden, and I thought you might like some."

I think that embarrassed is not quite the word. I nearly fell off the porch! J. E.

Harking Back.

The most embarrassing moment in my life occurred when I was at a football game. The place was crowded and many people were trying to get out before the crowd. Just as the last touchdown was made a woman passed in front of me. Some time later at a party we were discussing the last touchdown. With some heat I remarked, "One of those ha-ha women passed in front of me just as it was made."

Turning around my eyes encountered that very person. It is needless to say I escaped as soon as possible. L. L.

During Rehearsal.

Last winter I had a part in an amateur play. In one scene I had to kneel on a chair as I talked across the table to the "young doctor."

One evening as we went through this scene the chair broke and I found myself, rather suddenly, on the floor of the stage. To make matters worse, my companion, who was as flustered as I, started picking up the pieces of the broken chair, leaving me to scramble up as best I could, much to the amusement of the onlookers. No Thank You Madam!

WHEN the "no-tipping" plan was put in operation at The East End Park Hotel some two years ago hotel managers and operators said it could not be done. But it has been done. Since that time there has been no tipping of uniformed help at this hotel—yet an even higher standard of service has been maintained.

This is but one of many features that make living at The East End Park Hotel so pleasant. In the matter of location it is easily the most conveniently situated residential hotel in Chicago,—two short blocks from the main Hyde Park Depot, where all through, local and express trains stop.

Overlooking a beautiful expanse of Lake, with a south and east exposure,—handsomely equipped—completely furnished. Suites of two, three and four rooms. A FEW NOW AVAILABLE. Floor plans, rates and information furnished on request.

LADY MURDERESSES

THE ORTHWEIN CASE

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

ALL the "success" books written in the last decade have neglected one fundamental axiom which they might well have handed out to a world of women.

I mean, of course, this simple formula:

"Woman, would you acquire a personality overnight? Then commit murder and you'll be famous, for at least the busy span of time between the moment the desk sergeant scribbles your name across the police blotter to the moment the foreman of the twelve good men and true hands over his verdict to the clerk of the court."

When the police rush in and find you, somewhat confused, between the gun and the gin, be prepared. If you are smart you will don an orchid chiffon negligee before you essay to make your mark on your husband, or the other woman's. And, as you give your statement to the officers, don't forget to have on the tip of your tongue an anthology of platitudes from the Dotty Dimple book, with a generous refrain of the good, old fashioned carbon copy stuff, "I loved him so; I had to do it."

Next morning, by the time of the coroner's inquest, the bloodstains will be washed from your hands; your face won't look so blousy, nor your hair so frowsy, and your personality will be well on the road of development. For this personality of a lady murderess is a cumulative commodity. Once you channel it you can let it alone. It will take care of itself.

MRS. CORA ORTHWEIN.

Mrs. Cora Orthwein—She killed Herbert P. Ziegler after a quarrel that started during a round of the cafes. The jury said "not guilty."

HERBERT P. ZIEGLER.

Herbert P. Ziegler—He was killed by a shot from the pistol which he had given Mrs. Orthwein for her protection.

CAN'T BE "AVERAGE"

The "lady" murderess, and there must be at least a half hundred of her with whom I have traded a comparatively new powder puff for an obviously old alibi, simply cannot remain "just average." Nobody will let her. If she has the usual number of teeth and a not bad smile, presto, she emerges from the coroner's inquest a raving beauty. By the time the real trial starts she's convinced that she is.

Now part of this is due, perhaps, to the reporters' pencils. But the real basis for it is something far more fundamental than a mere caligraph and a deadline. The premise upon which the beauty of a woman defendant is builded is the old artistic principle of contrast.

A woman of average looks won't break many hearts if she walks into the dining room of a smart hotel where a score of other women have clean faces and silk stockings. But put that same woman in a drab jail cell, and she'd have to be a terrible hag not to shine out as a beautiful, a wistful, even dazzling creature in distress.

Many a time I've sat in a courtroom filled with gum chewing girls, sloppy women, perspiring men and heard them exclaim, as the lady in the case took the stand, "Gosh, she's a darb." But gray walls, the mob, even the cuspidors, have helped her.

The coroner's inquest gets her off to a good start. For it doesn't require too much skill or beauty to hold the spot light in an undertaking parlor, does it, with six men pulled in from the street corners to serve as jury? There's no competition.

Of course, this acquired personality of ladies who kill is not always based on beauty, though that ever will remain the most royal road to acquittal.

Suppose the woman who fired the shots has been clever enough to have purchased her new spring wardrobe before she makes her plan to spend a month or two in jail. Then the personality comes via the modiste instead of the cosmetician. Not so infallible. Still, it's something to be noted as the best dressed woman ever tried for murder.

Perhaps the feminine defendant owns a book. Splendid. Immediately she becomes a literary killer. The public likes that, for a change. If a mauve colored volume of poetry, and it can be desperately bad poetry, be found within a city block of the corpse, the literary lady becomes also an æsthete.

But sometimes the woman who shoots is terribly plain looking; doesn't know how to dress, and hasn't ever kept a diary of fragmentary grammar, exclamation points and pilferred quotations. She's had just enough brains to pull the trigger, and stopped there. It's a bad start, but not impossible. If she's too dumb too talk, the public will herald her as the plaintive, the wistful, the childlike murderess.

And if she's just ugly, she can't remain just ugly. For this modern "lady" murderess is a creature, inevitably, of superlatives. So the ugly woman becomes, before the trial is over, squat, and greasy, but O, so hard working and home loving.

THE 9 O'CLOCK LADY

Which brings me to the last picture in this category of fair women, and not so fair, whom I've met one side of the bars or the other, who are the laboratory experiments for the conclusion that a "lady" murderess cannot remain just average.

The last specimen is the 9 o'clock lady.

How I hate her. She is the 1927 alibi for most of the feminine errors. She is the embodiment of that guileless sentence, "Me guilty? Mercy, no. Why, I'm in bed every night at 9."

She loves to play the victrola, she says. She wears simple gingham dresses. Occasionally it's a Paris gown, but she hastens to assure you that it really clothes a Hickory Corners soul. She's never, never been in a night club, except when her own dear father took her there to hear the music.

From the faded blonde, who wooed a jury with talk of darning sox, to the shabby old women with skin like elephant's hide who went to jail because she had never gone to a hairdresser, many of the "lady" murderesses, whom I propose to tell of in this series, have annexed to their special brand of personality this 9 o'clock motif.

CORA ORTHWEIN

But Cora Orthwein, the first silhouette in this gallery, fitted into none of the dimensions I have already given. She came near to being unique. Not a raving beauty, but mighty good looking in an abundant way. Not a clothes mannequin, though with her mink and platinum and silk she didn't do a bad job. Not a poet, though she fetched an epigram to the jury. Not a hard working woman, though she did say how the man she killed had always admired the way she made the living room curtains. And, with a perfectly straight face, she told those twelve men in the box what a whiz she was at making bean soup.

Cora Orthwein, surrounded by clothes baskets filled with gin and champagne, made the best of a bad bargain when the police came to her apartment that morning. She admitted the night club life, but swore that she had a 9 o'clock soul. Dusk to dawn cabarets? Yes, but all for Herb, the lover she loved so much she had to kill.

Cora, 38 and fleshy [though the state argued she was 48 and fat], had approached the murder point in her career with a reputation as the "belle of the grand stands" in St. Louis baseball circles, and with two divorce stripes. Nevertheless, it is probable that the radii of her personality would never have extended much beyond local roadhouses, city apartments and maybe another marriage and divorce if she hadn't murdered Herbert P. Ziegler, district manager of a tire company.

THE KILLING

Early on the morning of March 1, 1921, Mrs. Orthwein climaxed a night of drinking and fighting and weeping in north side gardens by returning to her more than comfortable, if somewhat ambiguous, apartment at 518 Surf street, drinking one more glass of gin and grabbing from the bedside table the very gun which Ziegler had once given her for protection, and twice pulling its trigger as Ziegler himself came staggering into the apartment.

Self-defense it was, she argued. And she was irked when the state thrust up an insinuating question mark over the fact that the second self-defense bullet plunged into Ziegler's back. He stumbled, toppled, sprawled over the lace counterpane and presently was dead.

When the police came a flushed woman is reported to have hurled out a tempestuous oath or two, to have shouted in an ecstasy of fury, "I'm glad I killed him!" and then to have asked, somewhat disloyally it would seem, "Why do they make guns?"

Next day, when she went to the coroner's inquest, wearing the $5,000 mink wrap which Ziegler had given, she couldn't remember a thing about that. She recalled that she had moaned, "Herb, I had to do it; I had to do it," as she kissed his head.

With diamond rings and platinum pins, with chiffon velvet gown and chic hat, with Paris pocketbook and smart shoes, Cora Orthwein sat throughout the inquest. Sometimes she twisted the wedding ring, which she still wore. Which one it was no one knew. As wife of Jack O'Connor, former manager of the St. Louis Browns, she had won the title, "belle of the grand stands." And the less savory fame as co-respondent in a divorce case. Mrs. Ralph Orthwein, wife of the vice president of the club, divorced her husband because of Cora Landrum O'Connor, and O'Connor won his divorce by naming Orthwein. Several months later, in 1907, the two co-respondents married, and weren't themselves divorced until seven years later.

"THIS HAD TO BE"

And so at the inquest, in an unofficial interview, she sketched this life, without the divorce records.

"And then," she said, "Herbert came into my life. I loved him. He was the only man I ever loved. And this had to be. Self-defense."

Later. "God knows I didn't want to kill him. Why do they want to go on with this farce of an inquest. There's nothing to gain."

But Ziegler's wife, and his young daughter, Elaine, and Ziegler's father, Peter Ziegler, the police officer, and the state; they all thought there was plenty to gain.

Cora sat there and listened, and sobbed and beat her pump against the chair and twisted her rings, and once had the temerity to say of the dead man's daughter, "Poor Elaine; this is making her suffer so."

THE TRIAL

Then, when it was over, but before the coroner's jury had filed out, she fainted. But the luxury of the mink dolman, or the hard lines under her eyes, or the tears in Peter Ziegler's eyes as he testified, nullified the effect of Mrs. Orthwein's collapse. The jury bound her over to the grand jury, on murder.

Between March and May this "lady" murderess was out on bonds, signed by a wealthy Chicago business man. She spent her leisure well. For she appeared for her trial ten pounds lighter, fifteen years younger looking. And a simple dark blue suit, trim blue sailor hat and flattering veil replacing the heavy mink, the diamonds, the velvet. Her voice was softer; her defiance had tapered off into saddened horror at the trigger pulling episode.

And her ability to make bean soup, as an index of her love and loyalty for another woman's husband, was played up for all it was worth.

When the twelve men looked noble and swore they'd never be swayed by whatever emotions, or gowns, or lipsticks the defendant might bring to the witness stand, Cora Orthwein patted a lock of hair into place beneath the veil, and didn't look very worried.

On the stand she told of her love for him, of "the terrible moment" when she learned that he already had a wife; but of the solace when he drank a toast to "next year by this time I'll be free to marry you."

He beat her, often and hard, she declared, but he was "so sorry about it afterward" that she always forgave him. Dramatically she stepped before the jurors and showed them scars on her arms and neck, mementoes, she told them, of her love affair with "the most wonderful man on earth."

But when the state's attorney asked her to show the jury how she had shot Ziegler, in the back, she just couldn't remember, and made her way back to the witness stand, bewildered.

Then she had a vivid flash of memory. She recalled that Ziegler had picked up a settee and had been about to hurl it at her, when in fear of her life, she had reached for her gun. Her interrogatory reminded her that she had never mentioned the settee at the earlier investigations. Undisturbed she replied serenely.

"But I told my sister about it."

Mrs. Orthwein received two real blows during the trial.

Once, after she had said that she was born in 1882, when the prosecutor sneered and queried:

"Are you sure it wasn't 1872?"

NOT GUILTY

Again in his closing argument when the state's attorney asserted that it was not self-defense, but jealousy that caused Cora Orthwein, over the slope of full blown beauty, to shoot down the lover who had begun to look elsewhere for diversion.

"For weeks before the shooting," the attorney shouted, "the idea of the other woman rankled in her heart. He had begun to look for a new field. It's all right for a man to cheat his wife, but when a man cheats Cora Orthwein the penalty is death.

"She didn't kill in self-defense. She killed because she was getting old.

"She was too fat."

Evidently she wasn't. For the jury, including the time it spent for dinner, was out just 55 minutes before it signed its verdict of "not guilty."

Misadventures of Americans Abroad

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN. — [Special Correspondence.]—A New York tourist — Miss Herpod — quietly touring Germany, was a guest at the fashionable Schloss hotel in Gotha when she witnessed the greatest commotion every time a pale young man crossed the lobby. She was unable to understand the festivals given in his honor until the owner of the hotel informed her that the hero was none less than the grandson of ex Kaiser Wilhelm—the son of the former crown prince of Germany.

To give the impression of a real court atmosphere the German hotel owner introduced the elderly New York woman to the young "prince," and she gaily joined the group of flattering courtiers. The Gotha papers claim that she even kissed the prince's hand, as tradition requires.

Then suddenly the "prince" disappeared. His followers in Thuringia's leading hotels heard the sensational report that their "prince" was unmasked as a coal miner named Harry Pomeis, without a single tinge of royal blood, and their curtsies had been paid to a simple working man.

The tale of Harry's adventures rival those of the famed Baron von Munchausen, consequently a big film concern has asked him to write a scenario and play the leading part in the movie as soon as his "misunderstandings" with the police have been settled.

MONTY BANKS' YARNS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Monty Banks, Hal Roach comedy star, has returned from Italy with reports of several amusing adventures along the way, notably in Paris. He stayed at a hotel where the manager came to Monty to tell him that several dignified newspaper correspondents in frock coats and high hats were calling to see him, and suggested that to impress the gendlemen properly he, the manager, would put Monty in the royal suite at a slightly increased rate over what he was paying for his own simple quarters.

Monty moved in to find himself the sole and undisputed possessor of four very large and lofty rooms, including a corridor of mirrors, gorgeous crested silver and linen and his own butler, all supplied by the hotel.

After taking a bath in a gorgeous marble, crystal and gilt arrangement, Monty found that they did not serve bath towels, but instead a coat of bath towel material. While he was sporting around in the bath towel mat, with his butler out on an errand, a bell rang. He tried to find the door, but the corridor of mirrors proved a funnier gag to him than any in his own comedies, and he was raking about pulling pictures off the wall and trying to loosen the mirrors from their sockets, all in an effort to locate the lost door, while the bell rang at intervals.

Finally still only in the bath towel and, to mend the door and admitted the entire file of European newspaper representatives. Monty wanted to hide and tell them all about it, but realized he felt they would never understand, so mustering what dignity he could he received them.

Another amusing incident happened when Monty was invited to make a personal appearance at the theater which ran one of his pictures in Paris. Bianchi, whose real name is Bianchi, is of Italian birth, and speaks French as readily as English or Italian.

"Pas," said he to the manager. "I have several good stories and I'll work them off on the audience in my best French."

"O, no, that will never do," said the manager of the theater. "You must be an American comedian, not a French or Italian one. You must speak broken French with all the difficulty you can."

Banks did, feeling very foolish, but he found that it was the right idea, for the Europeans demand their film comedians be Americans, just as we seem to consider an opera singer an open singer only when he's a European. Monty got it all off fine, but after his appearance he went over to the Hotel Crillon to find a bunch of his old buddies who had been at the opening laughing their heads off at his broken French.

THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE

By Duke Bakrak

A Birthday Party at the Duke's Expense.

YESTERDAY our sleep disturber, Patricia, gets herself one year old. I was in favor of not celebrating too expensive like, but the B. and C. claims that a first birthday is a great event in every baby's life and calls for big doings. She goes and invites all our friends and those other people which are known as relations. Tha women are to appear in the afternoon and the guys are to come direct frum work in time for the eats. Financially the shindig was a failure, as tha eats set us back 8 bucks and the presents all consisted of teething rings from the celebrated Five & Ten Studios. In the 1st place, she's got all her teeth, and in the second place, Doc. Bundesen is preachin' that they are not sanitary. After the gang goes home tha B. and C. wise-cracks me and says may be the rings are for me on account I only got about 6 teeth left.

The women played bridge in the afternoon, which I claim was certainly a wonderful way to entertain the baby. I asked the boss could I get off a hour earlier, and he says, "Certainly, by all means, NO."

One "liberal-hearted A1" brought a quart of his home made wine; to me it tasted like carbolic acid with a dash of ammonia, but you know these nuts, and me, being the host, had ta say, "You must tell me how you make it"; it only took him 1½ hours to xplain. To get the damn taste out of my mouth I snuck in our pantry and got me a shot, and I was caught doin' it by the B. and C., who said, "Aren't you going to serve all the men," an' I said, "Listen, dearie, 2 fingers of this costs more as a whole barrel of that Sauer Kraut juice."

We had place cards on the table, but it seams that was disregarded, as everybody tried to grab a seat nearest tha meat. We had a turkey, and the platter was passed; wen it got to me there was nothing left but wings and the neck. From the way one guy loaded up you'da thought it was his birthday.

I thought it would be kinda sporty to bring home a box of cigars, an I wanna tellya the way those birds went after 'em they must of thought they was at a lodge meeting. We used our company napkins, which measure about 3x6, and my Uncle (who, by the way, ain't got any lap) could of wrung a plate of soup out of his vest. The women all suggested helping with the dishes, but not a damn one of 'em grabbed a towel, so it looked like I was going to be the goat, an' I was.

After everything was cleared away somebody mentioned that we should have a poker game, if I ever sit in one of those penny anti contests again I should have my brain looked into. It was xplained ten times that you gotta have Jacks or better to open, I looked at one of my hands and what do you think, I got a six full on Kings but sitting next to the dealer I passed so as I could raise when it got back to me, well it's just my luck, everybody passes and after the cards are thrown on the table one of the women has got a pat flush. When they asked her why did'n she open the pot she said, "I thought you had to have a pair of Jacks." About twelve o'clock they suggested playing one more round so we quit at half past two. I was the banker which is also one thing I will never do again, one guy bought four times and claimed it was only three, another bird bought three times and claimed it was only two. Another bird who lost four bucks did'n have any money with him and I had to make it good, so after winning $2.80 I was lucky to quit $2. loser.

Our Radio wasn't workin as clear as it should an a smart aleck who don't play cards says he will fix it, after monkeying a couple of hours the damn thing would'n work at all an on top of that when he gets it together again he's got six or seven parts left over.

I wanna telllya what got me more sore as anything else, as fast as anybody arrived they had to go an pinch the baby's cheek and blow their four out of five's in her face. She was restless all night and yours truly got himself a job as floorwalker.

I was against invitin the woman next door but the B. and C. says that she will hear all the noise and know that there's something going on and will get peeved if we did'n ask her. Every time she comes over she takes up about an hour of everybody's time telling about her operation, and I've heard the story about ten times, it seems that she has been troubled for years and consulted at least a dozen specialists. One of these Docs. figures as how she's got gall trouble. They would'n have had to call in a Doctor as I could have told her that right off the bat. My diagnosis is that she has got too much gall for any one person.

It was a pretty lucky thing that three or four of the people what was invited did'n show cause that gave the rest of the women somebody to talk about. What gets my goat is how people have got to go through all that bunk about as how the baby's got her father's nose and her mother's eyes, etc. Also another swell subject which should be kiboshed is their braggin about their own kids, like for instance, Jimmy got a two dollar raise last week and Betty Jane went into the eighth grade and she's only twelve years old and how Junior brought home his report card last week and it had all 'G's" on it which was explained meant good. I think from the looks of their kid it meant "goofy." There was so much talking by the women in the poker game that nobody knew whose deal it was or whose turn it was to anti. I did'n mind that so much as I'm kinda used to it but when they start talkin about their dresses and hats and I got three aces in my hand I get pretty sore. After the gang left that dogs of ours had a look on his face which was as much as to say, that sure was a hellova gang.

Before we went to bed the B. and C. says, "What are we going to do with all those teething rings?" I suggested either using them to string our new portiers on or to rent a concession out in Riverview park next summer. What I mean is one of those "cane you ring, the cane you get" propositions. Wen the boss asks me what two weeks in August I want for my vacation I'm gonna tell him the first two weeks in February. So if their gonna throw another party when the baby's two years old I will be out of town.

Little Tales of Big Heads

NERO and Andy Gump are famous Big Heads of history, and you know the sufferings enlarged craniums made them. It's common report that Nero's crown had to be sent to the town forge several times daily for enlargement, and as for Andy—did you ever know him to wear a derby? These two specimens of Big Head are familiar to you by hearsay and eyesee. Personally, of course, you're acquainted with folks whose heads are as big or bigger than theirs. Here are some we've heard of recently:

We'll pay $1 apiece for Little Tales of Big Heads that you send in and we print.

L. B. was the rage on the stage, and was timidly approached by a well known picture producer who thought it would be a great idea to star her in a screen story. After much dickering she agreed—for a fabulous price—and the film was started. She was given an A-1 supporting cast and a good director

But——

The lady haughtily refused to be dictated to by the highly efficient man at the megaphone. In two days' time she wasn't speaking to anybody in the cast because she insisted on hogging the limelight and declined to play unless the other women in the production wore inferior costumes to her own gorgeous creations.

The result was a terrible picture, and the star's retirement from stage and screen within a short time because of it. Folks forgot her previous record and groaned when her picture was menticned. And managers hearing of her studio conduct avoided her like rat poison.

That's what the Big Head did for one fair lady—whom you all know.

A woman entered an unfamiliar drug store and asked the girl at the cigar and candy counter for a certain well known brand of cough drops. The girl directed her to the drug counter where the prospective buyer repeated her request to a superior youth with pimples.

"Cough drops? The lady at the candy counter will take care of you."

"But I asked her and she sent me here."

"Perhaps, then, it is the Blank throat tablets that you wish?" said the p. y., coldly. "Throat tablets I handle. Cough drops I do not." Saying which he brought out the required article.

The lady did not slay him, but she thought seriously of doing so.

Another woman who hasn't failed yet, but because of Big Head is growing exceedingly unpopular with the people connected with the large publishing house where she holds an important position, was speaking of her divorced husband to an acquaintance:

"He used to make me angry," she said, "But now I pity him. After all, it must have been hard for an ordinary man to be married to a genius."

MY GREATEST THRILL

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

In the North Woods.

It happened in northern Wisconsin. We had left a fire on the beach in the morning and had gone to town at noon. Returned from town, we found that the fire had spread from the main fire to logs which had been left high and dry on the beach. These logs were now smoldering and the fire had spread back into the underbrush. Everybody went to work to put out the fire. We got all kinds of pans and buckets—anything that would hold water.

We went far back into the woods, hauling water on any bit of spark we saw. No one wanted to go to bed that night, for fear of waking up in the middle of the night to find the woods blazing all around. Finally we got up courage to go to bed. We got safely through that night, but I shall always think of that time as the time of my greatest thrill. J. E. S.

In Quarantine.

As my husband was quarantined in our home, which made it necessary for me to get up nights to attend to the furnace, I felt quite brave, feeling no one would molest any home under quarantine. Imagine my surprise on returning from the basement to see a bright light coming across the front porch. Only the landing light was on, so being in the dark I stood where I could observe what was going to happen. The flashlight made me positive it was a burglar.

As he came nearer and nearer the door I thought, "well, here's where we have our lock picked." That moment of tenseness I shall never forget! At the door the man stopped, and, to my surprise and relief, picked up a dime and left the Sunday paper!

[Mrs.] M. H.

Into the Fence.

My greatest thrill occurred some time ago, while auto riding with my uncle and his family. We were riding on a road that had a great many curves, and sharp ones, at that. My uncle was driving past a fence near a sharp curve when a car suddenly came into view, coming so fast that in order to avoid an accident he was forced to steer directly into the fence.

We were unnerved and frightened, but fortunately no one was hurt. Our car had a fender damaged and a light broken. The driver of the other car sped on as if nothing had happened. Was I thrilled? I'll say so! F. M.

Speedy Driving.

Being a nurse, of course my work is accompanied by a great many thrills.

One day one of the physicians called me and asked me to accompany him on a case which was about thirty-five miles out of town.

The doctor called for me, and we started out. We went through the main street at the rate of sixty-five miles an hour, and this was around five in the evening when the traffic was the greatest.

One minute we would be dodging cars on the right side of the street, the next minute on the left. To my wonder and amazement, we got out of town safely and out on the highway, where we speeded up to seventy miles an hour. We went over hills and bumps without a stop. We almost bumped into two cars, and crossed a railroad track on which was a moving train about fifty yards from us.

We reached our destination safely, and in fifteen minutes—a distance which took the average driver an hour.

Talk about a thrill! I thought my heart was going to jump out of my mouth. Otherwise I was none the worse for the ride. We saved the patient's life. E. M. B.

Narrow Escape.

My greatest thrill happened on a motor trip when we were only one mile from our destination. There was a deep canyon exactly at a turn. We made the turn safely, but a little way from it we slid in the gravel off the road. We were tipping almost over, when by a slight turn of the wheel the car was righted.

But that wasn't the end. Oh, no! I looked ahead. There was a sign post staring us in the face. It was coming nearer and nearer.

The accelerator was stuck. We couldn't stop. Missing the post by only an inch we headed straight for the canyon. By some miracle we were able to stop the car on the side of hill just a foot from where we would have gone to our death.

Mrs. J. M. S.

Up She Goes.

I am a young woman and a newspaper reporter. Sometime ago I received my greatest thrill in a southern aviation field. With notebook in hand, I had crowded close up to one of the big planes just ready for flight in a most thrilling spectacular dare-devil stunt. The pilot, strapped in his seat, gave an order to his aid that could not be heard above the terrible noise of the hundreds of cheering people and throbbing of the big engines. A moment later I was seized, pushed and crammed through a wall of humanity up into the great airship and swiftly secured in a chair directly behind the pilot.

My frantic protests were useless, as hearing was impossible in that deafening roar, and the straps were soon tightly adjusted. Then in a moment the machine glided forward, then lifted like some giant bird into great heights above. I could not utter one word. I was paralyzed with the great terror of it all—the nose dive, looping the loop, and doing the "Charleston" in the ballroom of the air. After what seemed eternity to me, we landed in safety.

As soon as I regained speech, I turned indignantly to the pilot and demanded: "How did you dare to force me into that plane without my consent?"

"And," demanded the much surprised pilot when he saw who I was, and a perfect stranger, "how did you get into the ship without my consent?"

Explanations, however, cleared up the embarrassing situation; the excited aid had mistaken me for the pilot's sweetheart, who was, as previously arranged, to have accompanied him in his flight; and it sure was the greatest of thrills, but I do not care to repeat it. E. P.

Winning a Diploma.

The most thrilling experience of my life happened last June at Ohio university. It was the result of long and tedious labor.

I was on the last lap of my college career, but two months from graduation when I was taken down with illness which lasted a month. I blamed myself in a thousand ways for getting ill. It wasn't a pleasant thought to imagine myself compelled to take over the last semester of my senior year. It would mean a loss of as least $250.

This had to be considered as I was earning my way through school. When I returned to school I had only five weeks in which to complete my work. O, how I slaved!

Imagine my supreme joy and thrill when my diploma was presented to me. M. B.

In a Snowstorm.

Some time ago a party of four decided to take in a show in a neighboring town. Before leaving home it started to rain, but we thought little of it, as we had a cement highway all the way.

As we left the theater to return home we were horrified to find we were facing one of the worst snowstorms this part of the country had experienced in years. We started creeping along at the rate of about fifteen miles per hour. To see more than three feet ahead was impossible.

When about half way home we came to a long "S" hill. Our driver must have put his foot on the brake and at the same time shorted the lighting system. Everything went black. Around we whirled, every minute expecting to land in the deep ravine by the side of the highway. Luck was with us, though. We did not leave the road, and after finding our direction again, continued on our way. Were we glad when our journey was over? Well, I guess.

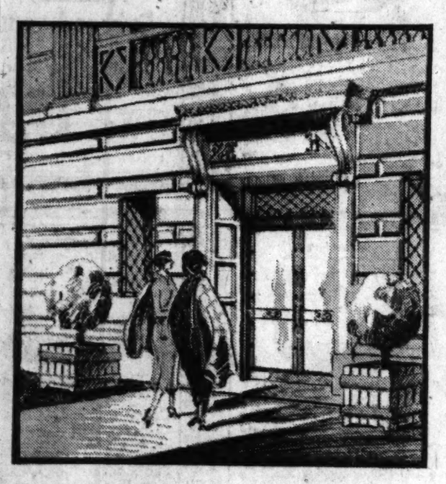
THE MAYFAIR

HYDE PARK BOULEVARD AT 55TH STREET



Decidedly—

A Fashionable Place to Live

THE Mayfair presents an entirely new note in apartment hotel accommodations. Architecturally this new 12-story structure is both distinguished and aristocratic. In point of furnishings and decorative scheme the effect is refreshingly different and attractive. The service is personal. The location ideal.

Devoid of the usual public rooms, The Mayfair is distinctly private. No large lobby thronged with people—no banquet or ballroom din. Each apartment has its own kitchen and dining room facilities. Just ten apartments to a floor—single rooms and suites up to six rooms.

With all this smartness and charm, Mayfair rentals are most reasonable and invite your inspection of remaining suites.

Stages Are Crowded but Not with Actors

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Pending the formation of a "stage for the actors" movement, the boards will, no doubt, continue to be trod by prize fighters, aviators, notable murderesses and others whose taste for the public eye overcomes the muse. More and more numerous are the debuts of persons whose chief qualifications are publicity and a "splendid speaking voice." As long as the stage has existed, it may be supposed, actresses have been exercising the style makers, and dressing it with a great degree of success. But here is a dressmaker who would turn actor. M. Paul Poiret, he who introduced to America in recent years with his famous beauty troupe of Parisian midinettes and mannikins, would become a stage star.

With Mme. Colette, after a tour in the provinces at Dijon and Antibes on the Riviera, M. Poiret has been playing a minor part in a dramatized version of her famous novel, "La Vagabonde." Rural audiences flocked to see the great M. Poiret, creator of the skirt shorter than that short skirt, and other boudoir novelties, and Mme. Colette's presentation of her intensely interesting character of the woman who would "life" was tempted by it, and was dreaded and recoiled from every realistic action.

Little Chance for Costuming.

M. Poiret's part is that of Brague, a music hall pantomime artist, and with for costuming scarcely in keeping with either the modish tenets of the house Poiret, or the ample physical proportions of the guiding spirit of the well known house of Couture. At one moment the somewhat pompous figure M. Poiret prances into view in a kind of leopard skin, swinging a woman's club, and at another indulges in a sentimental bit of consolation stuff, caressing the fragile and disarranged heroine while attired in some Chaplinesque pants, his features blackened for a bit of clowning.

M. Poiret's portrayal is not wholly without talent, but since his Parisian debut at the Theater de l'Avenue, the critics have not been lavish in their admiration. "As to M. Poiret," says Le Temps, "let us say at once that he displays the talents of a good amateur but insults Parisian audiences." The biting remarks have been made in the street, but the house is well filled, and the couturier actor seems to win nightly applause.

M. Poiret, having once conceived an ambition, is not the man to be deterred by adverse comment. He forged up from the ranks in the dressmaking business. Then he aspired to be a connoisseur, and though not wholly engaged by the most élite shooting order, he manages to supply his table with real game at times. M. Poiret then aspired to be an epicure, and ultimately obtained admittance to the ranks of the famous Club des Cent, to protect Paris gourmets. His career in this organization ended in a quarrel after he had been ejected from membership for what the members deemed to have been a gross breach of etiquette, but which M. Poiret attributed to personal jealousy. M. Poiret has left no stone unturned for reinstatement, but disheartened organized his own gourmet's club, which, according to its founder, exceeds anything in the realm of gourmetizing the Club des Cent has ever known.

If, by any chance, disaster should overtake the performance of "La Vagabonde," one can readily imagine a specially appointed theater in the Palais Poiret, where between fittings the patrons of that mode house could find mental relaxation in the productions of Racine, Corneille, and Moliere as interpreted by the redoubtable actor-couturier, M. Paul Poiret.

From Music Hall to Odeon.

Another innovation: Boucot is going to play Moliere! Boucot, the music hall comedian, who won his way to the hearts of the Paris populace by sitting encased in a suit of green underwear in imitation of Rodin's "Thinker," and trilling a ribald lay, punctuated with the vulgar chorus, "What Do You Think the Thinker Thinks? —Rien, Rien, Rien"; Boucot, who, impersonating Julius Cæsar in a somewhat tipsy invasion of modern Gaul, divided the country into three parts—Bordeaux, Burgundy and Champagne; Boucot, who in a silent pantomime to music, out-Charlie Chaplins Charlie Chaplin in interpreting the end of a perfect night—out in Paris; in short, Boucot, as everybody knows him in Paris, is going to step on to the sedate boards of the Odeon and repeat the lines of the French immortal in the Fourberies de Scapin.

It is Gemier's idea, not Boucot's, and will only be for three or four performances, but the public is greatly interested. M. Fernand Gemier, director of the Odeon, has not ceased to innovate since his visit to New York and his preoccupations with the International Little theater idea.

It is M. Gemier's idea that Boucot in Moliere will give the classics a jolt, will give a fresh and vitalizing touch to the stereotyped execution of the conservative Molierians. Paris is willing to see, and so is Boucot.

"I shall have to play it my own way," he says. "And it may be a different way from the accepted one of playing Moliere. However, they put on Moliere and the Comedie Francaise at times in the music halls—why not the music halls at the Odeon?"

Boucot's appearance is scheduled the end of February.

Strange Weddings

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

An Old Tradition.

I was teaching in a rural school in a Bohemian settlement and was invited to the wedding of the sister of one of my pupils.

As the family was quite prominent, the wedding was to be a very swell affair, according to the old country customs, and guests from every settlement for hundreds of miles were invited. A large stage was built, and a Bohemian band furnished the music for the dancers.

The dancing began while the bridal couple and attendants were at the church where the priest performed the ceremony. On their return the native custom was carried out, and it was one that impressed me as the quaintest I ever saw before or since and was as follows: One of the older women took off the bride's left shoe, then placed the bride in a chair on a table, the women forming in a circle around the table and chanting a song. Then one acted as auctioneer and auctioned off the shoe, each bidder placing the amount of his bid in a dish as a gift to the bride. The bridegroom was, of course, the highest bidder, and to him the shoe was given, and he had to replace it on the bride's foot. The whole affair was strange, and to me it was as quaint as strange, for it had a tradition which in the country of its origin meant a sacred rite. MRS. H. L. M.

In Wheel Chairs.

The strangest wedding I ever attended was held in the chapel of a school for cripples. Both the bride and groom were crippled. The bride sat in a white wheel chair. The chair was drawn by means of four long white ribbons held by four bridesmaids. The bride's dress was Grecian in style and also her hairdress, giving the appearance of a Greek princess drawn in her litter by attendants.

The groom also sat in a wheel chair pushed by the best man.

The ceremony was the most beautiful and the strangest I have ever seen because of its picturesqueness. E. K. E. S.

Married on a Dare.

He was a litle man, no longer young, dressed as he came from the fields, leather boots, a blue work shirt left open at the neck. She was middle aged and stout, dressed in a brown shirt, black velvet waist, black hat—in fact, as far from looking like a bride as can be imagined.

They walked into the lobby of our hotel and announced the fact that they wanted to be married. The county clerk's office was not far and the minister was called by phone. She decided to remain with us while her bridegroom went for the license.

Imagine our surprise when he returned for her as he had forgotten her name. We heard afterward that they had met only that afternoon and had been dared to get married.

After a short delay they were made man and wife. They left the next morning at three o'clock, as he didn't want to miss any time for fall plowing, as it had already cost him thirteen dollars to get "married."

Being one of the witnesses, I have since inquired as to their marital happiness, and though that strange wedding was sixteen years ago, the couple are living happily together. C. H.

Sad and Simple.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed was to me quite impressive and striking in its simplicity. It was held in the warden's office of the prison in which the groom was to serve a two year term. And after the wedding they kissed and said good-by, as if parting for a day. A. G.

All to Please the Lady.

There was a small hamlet a few miles north of Shreveport, La. The name of the place was Arkana, using the first three letters of Arkansas and the last letters of the state of Louisiana, because it was on the state line. There were only several houses and one store and the state line divided the store. The girl lived on the Louisiana side and the boy lived on the Arkansas side, and there was a warrant out in the state of Louisiana for the boy. When the boy went to the store he was sure not to step over the boundary line, as the deputy constable was right there for him. The girl was hard headed, being raised in the state of Louisiana. She was going to be married in that state or not at all. So they were married one Saturday afternoon, the bride standing in the state of Louisiana and the groom in the state of Arkansas, with the parson with one foot in Louisiana and one foot in Arkansas. And I have often thought of what a strange wedding, as the girl was more than willing to live in Arkansas, but she just had to be married in Louisiana. R. H. M.

An Indian Wedding.

I have never witnessed many weddings, but I believe I shall never again see one as strange as I did this summer. It was an Indian wedding, and took place in northern Wisconsin. We arrived just as the ceremony was about to start.

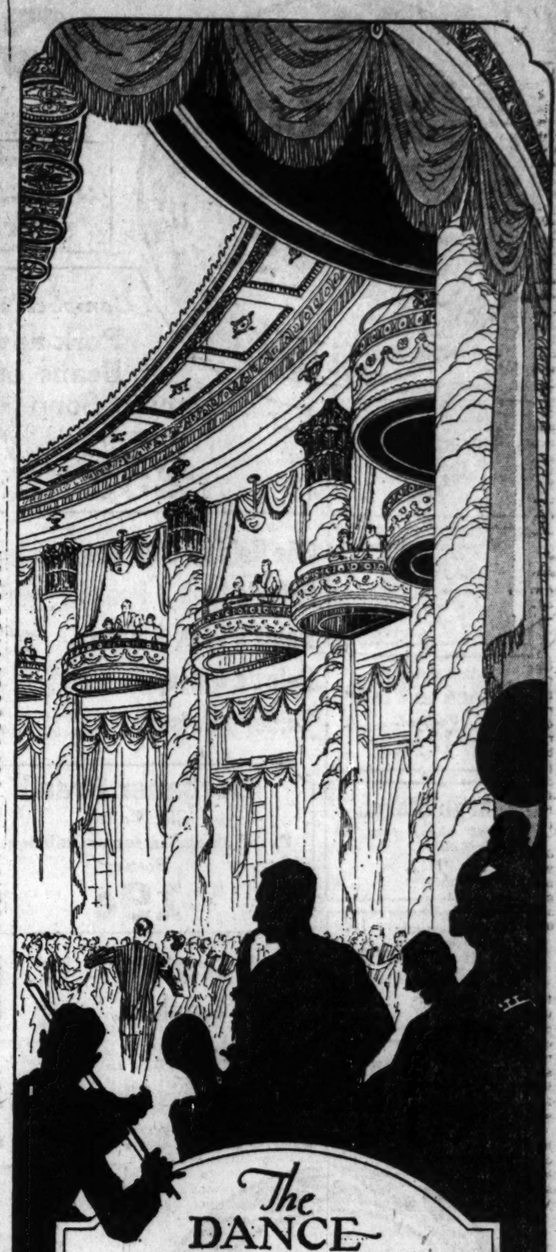
The Indian camp was a state reservation and the Indians were staging a pageant. They wore their beautiful beaded ornaments, and were decorated with feathers, war paint, and the usual Indian trinkets. Some of the men were not so bad looking, but the women were all fat and plain-faced.

The marriage ceremony was performed by the chief in the native tongue. After the ceremony, the interpreter explained that the groom must get some deer meat to bring to the bride's father before the contract was complete.

In about an hour the groom came back in his canoe with a small deer and presented it to the father. Then the bride and groom left in their canoe. L. S. C.

ALTARS OF DESIRE!

Somebody died—looks like! The lady with the shovel is Mae Murray, and the prostrate male is Andre de Beranger, and this scene is from "Altars of Desire," opening tomorrow at the Oriental theater.



The DANCE

Dancing is the greatest exercise in the world because it is a pleasurable form of invigorating exercise. Dancing is both an elixir and a tonic. Good dance music makes the brain tingle and every nerve center respond. You live longer, think better, feel finer, and look better when you dance often. Dance an hour or two every day or every other day and dance the physician and Father Time away. Dance in healthy, spacious places and acquire health, ease, aplomb and physical graces. The better you feel, the greater your earning capacity and social position. Dance right in the right places and advance your opportunities.

WANTED—MALE HELP.
Executives and Managers.

DIVISION SALES MANAGER.

You are primarily interested, and rightly so in your own business success. That your present or past business connections does not offer the possibilities that your definite ability and demands is certain once you consent not be reading this advertisement.

Do you I have an unusual proposition to offer that is so vitally important to your future success that we ask you to yourself to read and digest every word of this advertisement.

For 15 years I have watched the financial progress of this business and the remarkable advancement made by many men in this business.

Therefore, I write you from the standpoint of a man who from intimate contact knows exactly what its conditions are.

I know the business opportunity in this Company from three definite angles.

In the first place, I understand it from the Company's point of view. I know what the inside picture is and am vouch for the sincerity and fairness of the organization.

In the second place, I know what the men associated with us themselves think of it, which to you is far more important, and finally I know the opportunity from my own personal experience, which is best of all.

Our business is a highly specialized one that is constantly attracting young salesmen to our organization. We have no difficulty in securing them.

Our particular difficulty is to find the man executive who has the ability to handle and train these men after we get them into organization and get the most out of them. Who is not a "slave driver" but who has the quality of getting new men to work because they want to work. Enthusiastic example is the only whip needed.

He must be an inspiration to his men and must not be above going out with them into the field to get them started right.

This I want to say very earnestly to you, that we select with great care an opportunity that has seldom been offered in Chicago. His earnings the first year should exceed by far $12,000 and in the next few years he should be independently wealthy.

I have tried in this advertisement to picture the man who has had considerable experience in the training of new salesmen. He should be between 28 and 35 years of age and possess an abundant amount of energy.

If you feel that you are qualified to tackle this proposition, phone for an appointment.

VINCENNES 4100,
LOCAL 305.

ADVANCEMENT, LARGE EARNINGS, A REAL FUTURE.

A rapidly expanding organization, established in 1920, that has grown in ten months from a one man concern to a national organization employing 150 men with offices in Chicago, New York and San Francisco, has openings for men who are looking for permanent advancement, large earnings, and a real future.

Our remarkable growth has necessitated twenty-five promotions from the ranks during the past year.

Our line handles bonds, stocks, bonds, books, or insurance, but a service for which there will always be a real need in American business. This is proven by the fact that such national organizations as Packard, Chrysler, International Harvester, Armour, and other representative American institutions have recently adopted our service.

Let us show you sales records of men who after a short period of training earned $200 and upwards in commissions weekly. Then quick promotion for consistent producers.

If you have the dignity and force of personality to interview top executives and sell them and think you can qualify through past experience, Phone Mr. Hazard, Superior 0835. Out of town applicants address H B 104, Tribune, outlining past selling experience.

MEN.

HERE
IS A SPECIALTY
SALES WORK.

AIR-WAY SANITARY SYSTEM Sales are made without dealer competition, regardless of previous selling experience. We teach you in two days to become earners and owners of the good will of the clientele you develop.

Four years of development and expansion has proven and established a standard of earnings unequaled in Specialty Sales Endeavor. Over half our salesmen had no previous sales experience; many men have started and in 10 days earned more than in a former month's work. These men from various trades are today earning $6,000, $8,000, $10,000, $11,000, and $14,000 a year.

Not easy work, but paying work for workers. We promise no miracles, but do demand honest days, honest hours. Here you learn what to sell and how. You develop into an independent sales dealer without cost or investment.

Air-Way is ten years in advance and carries a Five Year guarantee of service.

Sales talent pays best, satisfies best, most easily cultivated, what value is an occupation that leaves you without a surplus? If your present success is not all that you desire and you believe in working, investigate.

REAL OPPORTUNITIES FOR REAL SALESMEN.

If you are not a real salesman in all the word implies, do not waste your time answering this advertisement.

We are a paint manufacturing organization, located in Cleveland, O., the home of the industry, and have been established since 1901. Our line consists of everything in everything in paints, varnishes, and enamels, intended for the upkeep or maintenance of all classes of structures, interior and exterior. In addition to this general line, our line is rounded out perfectly by certain paint specialties which are in big demand, and on which we have built our reputation.

We are not the largest organization of this kind in our home city, but we proudly boast that there is no organization who possesses a more loyal, better treated, and better remunerated sales force than ours. Average earnings of over $20,000 annually is the record of one man during a five year period. Six other salesmen have earned between $10,000 and $20,000 annually over a like period, and not yet our sales force comprises only thirty-five men. The average earning for all salesmen in our employ is over $6,000 annually.

We are very desirous of securing only the highest caliber men, between the ages of 30 and 45 years.

Our line is sold direct to the large industrial organizations, school boards, municipalities, railroads, etc.

Our line of samples is compact and possesses extremely good displaying qualities.

The references that we can give to any prospects regarding the quality of our goods could not be better.

An unbelievable earning is possible in consideration of the amount of sales made. We are also willing to do advancing a reasonable drawing account.

To those who apply we say this: Do not waste your time unless you have a clean, successful record, nor unless you can give us first class references as to who you are and what you have accomplished.

We desire representatives for Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Iowa.

Apply by letter, giving full information about yourself and the names of your references in your first letter. We will write your references. If their replies are satisfactory, you will be requested to meet the president in Chic

Do you believe you have the natural ability to succeed in any given line of work IF YOU HAD THE RIGHT KIND OF ASSISTANCE?

If you do believe you can succeed with that kind of help, then arrange to come to a lecture on the subject of

HOW TO TURN YOUR IDLE HOURS INTO REAL DOLLARS.

This lecture will be given by a self-made and self-educated man who fought for years to find the right kind of a deal and the proposition with honest and sincere assistance behind it. He will tell you the truth about his struggle for success in business and how he found the right kind of a proposition.

If you are a willing worker and anxious to succeed, then the greatest benefit you can do for yourself is to come to this meeting

NEXT FRIDAY EVENING,
FEB 11TH, 8 P. M.,
IN OUR LECTURE HALL,
THIRD FLOOR,
225 N. MICHIGAN-AV.

Attending this meeting may be the turning point in your career—so do your best to come to this meeting; we will do the rest. Your success is our success.

We will guarantee to show you the way to turn your spare time into $50 or more a week, and it will not interfere with your present position.

This is your opportunity of a lifetime to learn how an ordinary man—just like yourself—taught himself the true secret of success.

GENTLEMEN, STOP!!!
Will You Work One Hour During the Evening or During the Day?

If so, you should investigate this advertisement. This is one of the most wonderful opportunities ever offered in the columns of this newspaper. If you desire, employment can be made permanent, part time, if at present employed. Positions are genuine and are made possible because of overgrowth and expansion of our Chicago offices. Earnings will delight the gentleman who is desirous of increasing his present income.

NO RED TAPE—We require white gentlemen of refinement, 25 years of age. We prefer married men, but all honest applicants will be given utmost consideration.

Work may be done at home and will in no way interfere with your present occupation. No business experience required, as we will train you easily by gentlemen in all lines of work.

An answer to this ad will promptly convince you that the problem of an extra weekly pay check is solved. YOU WILL NOT BE ASKED TO SELL ANYTHING. This is a simple publicity work of a sociological nature and can be easily accomplished by any person without business experience. All payments made. We also have a few vacancies for gentlewomen and if wives or sisters have spare time and are willing to work, bring them with you. Call Tuesday evening, 8 o'clock sharp.

L. C. STEWART,
Room 1512, 624 S. Michigan.

Notice—This ad has been tremendously successful for dozens of happy applicants and our company. Now don't hesitate. Answer this ad and you will be given the same careful consideration that made scores of applicants wonderfully happy last week. This is not "just another ad," but a real opportunity for real people. Idlers and star gazers stay away. REMEMBER, TUESDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 8TH, 8 P. M., ONLY. None will be admitted after the above time.

Miscellaneous.

LADIES, GENTLEWOMEN, STOP!!

Will you work 1 hour during the evening or during the day?

If so, you should investigate this advertisement. This is one of the most wonderful opportunities ever offered in the columns of this newspaper. If you desire, employment can be made permanent, part time if at present employed. Positions are genuine and are made possible because of overgrowth and expansion of our Chicago offices. Earnings will delight the lady who is desirous of increasing her present income. NO RED TAPE. We require white ladies over 25 years of age. We prefer married ladies, but all honest applicants will be given utmost consideration. Work may be done at home and will in no way interfere with your present occupation. No business experience required and work can be done as easily by housewives as business women. An answer to this ad will promptly convince you that the problem of an extra weekly pay check is solved. You WILL NOT BE ASKED TO SELL ANYTHING. This is a simple publicity work of a sociological nature and can be easily accomplished by any person without business experience. All payments weekly. We also have a few vacancies for gentlemen, and if husbands or brothers have spare time and are willing to work bring them with you. Call Tuesday evening, 8 o'clock sharp.

J. C. STEWART,
Room 1512, 624 S. Michigan-av.
Notice: This ad has been tremendously successful for dozens of happy applicants and our company. Now don't hesitate. Answer this ad and you will be given the same careful consideration that made scores of applicants wonderfully happy last week. This is not "just another ad," but a real opportunity for real people. Idlers and time wasters stay away. REMEMBER, TUESDAY EVENING, FEB. 8, 8 P. M. ONLY. None will be admitted after the above time.

$30 A WEEK AND 4% COMMISSION.

I will pay a few women who are ambitious and honest and want to better themselves a salary of $30 and 4% commission to assist me in selling bungalow, residential and business lots on the N. W. Side; improvements in and paid for. This position does not require full time.

Experience not necessary.

MANAGER,
RM. 413, 77 W. WASHINGTON-ST.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN MAKING REAL MONEY?

I have an opening for three ladies over 25 years of age who can give us from 3 to 5 hours of their time daily.

Our work is pleasant and most respectable. You come in contact with the best of people only.

Your closest friend never need know how you are employed.

RENT ONLY BUYS AN APARTMENT.

On the co-operative plan you can secure one of our de luxe 6 rm. apts., 2 or 3 baths, by paying the regular monthly rental plus small carrying charge. Thus in a few years you can cash in your annual credits, above interest and maintenance cost, on your equity, and own apt.
This offer holds good only this month, and for a limited number of apts. to the right people. Credit and personal standing must be O. K.
As an example of our offering: A 6 rm. apt., 2 baths, glassed-in sleeping porch; equity $6,500; cash $500; entire monthly payments $165 (rental value). 1st or 3d apartment.
A 6 room corner apt., 3 baths, all outside rooms, 3d floor; equity $7,500; cash $1,000, payment monthly $182.
Location s. w. cor. 68th and Crandon, 1 block from Jackson Park and South Shore drive, 4 blocks from I. C. station.
For particulars call H. P. 2601, or Fairfax 5442. F. J. CAMPBELL, Office 6800 Crandon-av.

1400 LAKE SHORE DRIVE

"On the Sunny Corner of Schiller Street."

Large scale production and operation, and eliminating the wastes of renting, enable you to enjoy a home in Chicago's newest and largest 100% co-operative apartment building on the following basis:

	Monthly Ass'm'ts.	Cost of Equities.
4 rms.....	$56.88 up	$8,300 up
5 rms., 2 baths ...	114.46 up	6,700 up
6 rms., 2 baths ...	165.71 up	9,700 up
7-8 rms., 4-5 ba..	319.46	18,700

Also some 2 and 3 room apartments available at equally attractive prices.

I. Assessments are unconditionally guaranteed for three years.
II. The northwest corner of Schiller street is the finest site for a residential apartment in Chicago.
III. One of Chicago's most distinctive buildings. It dominates Lake Shore-dr.
IV. Available apartment hotel service. Will cost you nothing if you do not use it.
V. The corporation has $78,000 cash paid-in surplus.
VI. The builders pay the assessments on all apartments until they are sold.
VII. A committee of Tenant Owners passes on all applicants.
VIII. Liberal partial payment plan.
IX. Money held in escrow by Boulevard Bridge Bank until building is completed.

X. MAY 1ST OCCUPANCY.

This offer merits your consideration and examination.

CO-OPERATIVE APTS.

It costs us $18 per month to pay the taxes, janitor service, repairs, furnish the heat, hall lights, and water for a 4 rm. apt. We have a mtg. from a life insurance company of $3,796.33 and 5½% interest on this apt., which means $18.21 interest per month. This apt. is rented until May 1 for $100. We will sell it to you on the co-operative plan for $5,600. If you have not got the $5,600, but have good references and a determination to own your home, we will sell you this apt. or one like it, for May occupancy for a small deposit down and give you a long time to pay the balance.

The building is at 2820 Cambridge-av., 1 blk. east of Broadway, at Diversey-pkwy.; a location which is bound to increase in value. This bldg. is 2 years old, modern in every detail; large rooms, with spacious closets and with Murphy beds in the living rooms. Why buy an apt. for your landlord with your rent when you can buy it for yourself?

WHAT GOES WITH THE SALE?

Studebaker's relationship with a used car buyer does not end after the sale. The customer is guaranteed 5 days' driving trial under the terms of the Studebaker Used Car Pledge, and because we want this buyer as a permanent customer we make sure the car is honestly represented and that the PRICE IS RIGHT.

CHANDLER SEDAN.
This is the latest model and the buyer will obtain the advantage of a big saving. Every detail suggests a new car. Tires are unused; original finish is bright and shiny and the upholstery is very attractive. Extras and snubbers, bumper and bumperettes, spare tire, etc. A real buy at $985.

STUDEBAKER COACH.
This car is exceptional in every respect. Consider performance: It has been overhauled thoroughly and is GUARANTEED. Consider appearance: The upholstery is unworn and the outside has just been refinished. Consider the equipment. There's balloon tires, like new. Snubbers, step plates, heater, trunk, spotlight, etc. And consider the price: Only $685.

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE.
The excellence of the winter sides of this car gives the motorist open or closed car convenience. This automobile is beautiful; it was just refinished a peacock blue with white stripes, and the genuine leather upholstery is unused. Extras are 2 spare tires, spotlight, snubbers, etc. A rare buy at $445.

CLEVELAND SEDAN.
The good looks and fine mechanical condition of this Cleveland will please the most discriminating buyer. Refinished a Pottawattamie brown with red striping. Equipped with snubbers, spare tire, and other extras. Offered for clearance at $585.

HUDSON SEDAN.
A late model, repainted a pretty green; the upholstery is like new and the engine is smooth as silk. Cleveland will please the most discriminating buyer. Refinished a Pottawattamie brown with red striping. Equipped with snubbers, spare tire, and other extras. Offered for clearance at $585.

HUDSON SEDAN.
A late model, repainted a pretty green; the upholstery is like new and the engine is smooth as silk. Cleveland will please the most discriminating buyer. Refinished a Pottawattamie brown with red striping. Equipped with snubbers, spare tire, and other extras. Offered for clearance at $585.

MOON BROUGHAM.
We invite your inspection of this handsome Moon. Just refinished a colorful ossage green with yellow striping and black fenders; the former owner, the head of a chain store, spent a great deal of money to keep in the car's appearance; the result is the head lamps and the front of the radiator are nickeled and the genuine leather upholstery has not a worn spot; extras are snubbers, trunk, bumpers, spare tire, etc. The balloon tires have had little mileage. Will sell quickly at $645.

Bird-Sykes PAIGE Distributors

2215-2225 Michigan-av.

Your first consideration for the stability of your used car purchase should rest with the concern you deal with. When you buy from BIRD-SYKES you are buying from a powerful concern whose standing is unquestioned. You can buy of us on deferred payments without paying exorbitant rates. Accurate descriptions of some cars in our big stock follow:

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE SEDAN. To move this quality car at once we are offering it at an extremely low figure. It is the 8 cylinder model of a late series and we have spared neither expense nor time to put it in condition for immediate use. Practically noiseless and smooth in operation and guaranteed mechanically. Coach work, tires, etc., very good. Compared with this, usually asked for this model in similar condition you will find our price at least $250 lower. Price, $650.

1926 6-72 PAIGE 5 PASS. SEDAN. A car that is so smooth in operation one thinks only of steering. Possesses well proportioned body lines, 4 wide doors, and trimmings not generally found in cars of this price. Its appearance satisfies the eye as new. Mechanically it is guaranteed. Hydraulic 4 wheel brakes and all modern refinements. There is a big saving for you at our price.

STUDEBAKER BROUGHAM, SPECIAL 6 MODEL. This car has been well cared for at all times and will render the purchaser very satisfactory service. Just repainted in our own shops. Equipment includes heater, disc wheels, 2 bumpers, good tires, guaranteed mechanically. It is an exceptional value at $550.

PAIGE 7 PASS. SEDAN. We are offering in this car an opportunity to purchase a good family closed car for less money than we have ever asked for such transportation. It is a 6-66 model, well equipped throughout, nicely upholstered, and mechanically it is all that could be desired. There is much extra equipment, including heater, excellent tires, motometer, etc. Special, $400.

1927 BUICK SEDAN, 5 PASS. Turned in to us in such elegant condition, it would be a waste of money for us to touch it. Was in the hands of its owner for a short distance—just enough to properly work in the motor—and the body and fenders are without scratch or blemish. Fully equipped. Take advantage of the saving you can make at $1,075.

JEWETT 1924 BROUGHAM. An ideal car for any kind of driving. The body is large and roomy, seating 5 passengers comfortably. The balloon tires are in fine condition, and there is no work necessary on the motor or chassis. Finish and upholstery are like new. Much equipment. $600.

1924 BUICK TOURING CAR, 6 CYL. This is a light, economical car with smart lines. Mechanically it is in very fine condition, guaranteed by us, and ready to deliver many thousand miles of dependable service. Top and upholstery are very good. We are offering it at $475.

1926 JEWETT SEDAN, 6-40 MODEL. This is a roomy 5 passenger enclosed car with hydraulic 4 wheel brakes, disc wheels, Duco finish, and a duplicate of the famous 6-40 Jewett that made the record winter run from Detroit to Chicago. Appearance equivalent to new; guaranteed mechanically. A very marked saving can be made at $775.

1925 JEWETT COACH. This beautiful car is available at a low price. It is smartly finished in a rich blue color, well equipped with disc wheels, inner control spotlight, hydraulic 4 wheel brakes, and mechanical condition of this car is such that it will not require any servicing for a considerable period of time. $575.

Eddie Meyer

BOUGHT FOR CASH AT A FORCED SALE 150 CARS

Late Models—All Makes.

The largest Finance Company in Michigan asked me for a cash offer on their entire repossessions of 150 cars for the year 1926.

I made them a ridiculously low bid and they accepted it. I had no room in my main salesroom and was compelled to rent additional space, which I secured for only 10 days. These cars must be sold before that time.

I will take only a small profit of $25 to $35 per car. Remember that I now have in my stocks cars for which I paid me 40% more than I could sell you these cars for.

This is your opportunity—act now. Here are just a few of the many I offer:

Pierce-Arrow Sedan, 1927...Big discount.

WISCONSIN'S PRETTIEST PEACH—SHE WINS $1,000 IN THE TRIBUNE'S GREAT $20,000 SEARCH FOR 56 PEACHES!

OSHKOSH AND KENOSHA BOTH CLAIM MISS ALMA LINK, WISCONSIN'S PRETTIEST PEACH! Her home is in Oshkosh, but she has taught for two years in the Durkee school at Kenosha. She is awarded the $1,000 first prize for Wisconsin in this Search for Peaches, and also is a candidate for the additional grand prize of $10,000 which will go to the Peach of Peaches, the prettiest of all the six sectional first prize winners. The three judges, Mrs. Pauline Palmer, Miss Antoinette Donnelly, and Karl Buehr, describe Miss Link thus: "Tall and fair, with curly hair, she has a bearing of quiet dignity. There is a refinement in her face which sets her apart as some one just a little different." Pictures of the other eight prize-winning Peaches of Wisconsin appear on Page 3 of this section.

NEXT SUNDAY—IOWA'S PRETTIEST PEACH, AND THE OTHER PRIZE PEACHES OF IOWA!

DENNIS KING, from a portrait by an English artist, Miss F. Enid Stoddard, who, we are told, has painted the Prince of Wales and Mussolini within the last year. Mr. King has been in Chicago since Labor day of 1926 in the part of Villon in "The Vagabond King."

2,000 ROSES FOR "ABIE'S IRISH ROSE," one rose for each New York performance of the play that has broken theater records of all time. Anne Nichols, enriched author of what our Mr. Donaghey classifies as "that piece," is at the left in this presentation picture. And the Irish rose in front of the posies is Evelyn Nichols, leading lady and sister of Anne. The men are William De Lignemare, at the left, general manager of the show, and Richard Enright, former police commissioner of New York City. (Photograph from Wide World.)

THE HOPE DIAMOND is among the rare gems worn in this portrait by Mrs. Edward B. McLean, wife of the Washington publisher and a leader in society at the national capital. The jewel with the long history seems to be the large one that sparkles just above the end of the pendant. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)

WRITE A PRIZE WINNING LETTER ABOUT ★PRUNES ENTER THE $10,000 CONTEST

PRUNE FACTS TO HELP YOU WIN

FOOD VALUE: Climate and soil combine to make California Prunes a valuable, economical food for year-round use on your table.

1. Prunes are rich in fruit sugar—sugar in its most easily digested form.
2. Prunes are more than 80% carbohydrates—the part of any fruit that yields energy.
3. Pound for pound, prunes yield more energy than most foods—meats, cereals and vegetables.

HEALTH VALUE: California Prunes belong in the well-balanced meal.

4. Their minerals act as a tonic, for they check the "acidity" of other foods.
5. Doctors recommend them as a mild, effective fruit laxative.
6. Prunes contain health-giving vitamins.

Prunes Victory as welcome as sunshine at breakfast

"PRUNES," you may say, "are a standard dish in my family. I thought everyone knew how to serve them." Here is your chance to win the prune contest! Put your reasons for serving prunes into a letter.

Tell why you eat them: They yield generous energy. They are economical. The doctor may have prescribed them. Tell how you eat them: Describe the delicious prune dishes you prepare for luncheon and dinner, as well as for breakfast.

The facts that explain the good habit of eating prunes are the facts that will win the contest! There are 141 cash prizes—a chance for everybody. Write your letter today. And just for you, an enthusiastic user of California Prunes, here is a new recipe. It was prepared by a famous cook:

PRUNES VICTORY:

Wash a pound of medium-sized prunes. Place in casserole or earthen jar, cover with a quart of water and add a small piece of stick cinnamon, one cupful sugar and a clove. Place in the oven and simmer at very low temperature. Add half a teaspoonful vanilla. Cook, chill, strain and use the liquid for breakfast. Serve the prunes with cream for luncheon.

California Prunes may be used in many ways at many meals. You'll enjoy experimenting with them in all your cooking. They add a welcome touch of the unusual to every kind of dish—salads, desserts, pies, cakes. Give them to the children in place of heavy sweets or candies. Buy them and cook them three pounds at a time. Store them in glass jars, always ready for use.

Every California Prune is plump, and tender. All its richness and sweetness brought out by sunny California days. Selected. Graded as to size. Packed scientifically and shipped at once to your grocer.

How to enter Prune Contest

Everyone is eligible. Classes enable contestants to draw on their own fields of knowledge. Competition is cut down. Everyone has a better chance. Observe carefully the subject for your class.

RULES

1. No entry shall be more than 200 words in length. It may be, or include, recipes or may be a straight letter, just as you prefer.
2. Entries should be written on one side of paper. Either by hand or typewriter. Print your name and address in the upper right-hand corner of the page, together with the classification you are entering.
3. No entrant is required to purchase California Prunes to compete.
4. Entries will be judged by a suitable committee of five whose decision will be final.
5. Entries will be judged for informative value, originality, interest and news value.
6. In case of ties for any prize, the tying contestants will receive awards of equal and full amount.
7. All entries must be mailed by midnight of March 17, 1927. Entries bearing a postmark of later than that date will not be considered.
8. Winners will be announced in the regular advertising as soon as the judges can reach their decision—on or about May 5, 1927. At which time checks will be mailed to winners.
9. Mail your entry by midnight, March 17, 1927, to California Prune Producers, Contest Headquarters, 716 Mateon Building, San Francisco, California.

CALIFORNIA PRUNES

OF COURSE YOU SERVE THEM FOR BREAKFAST

Soak prunes for a few hours in cold water. Then let them simmer gently until tender and full-flavored. . . . Never boil.

4 out of 5 needlessly suffer

Neglect your teeth and gums, and you open wide the door to vicious Pyorrhea. That is the simple reason why four out of five after forty (and many younger) suffer its dread effects, paving the way to serious sickness, loss of health and beauty.

So dangerous and yet so unnecessary! With reasonable care, you need never fear the ravages of Pyorrhea. Make it a rule to see your dentist twice a year. And start using Forhan's for the Gums, today.

Forhan's for the Gums used in time, thwarts Pyorrhea or checks its course. It firms the gums and keeps them healthy. It protects teeth against acids which cause decay. It keeps them snowy white.

Forhan's, the formula of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S., contains Forhan's Pyorrhea Liquid, used by dentists everywhere.

Start the Forhan habit today and use it regularly morning and night. Teach your children this habit. It is pleasant tasting. It is health insurance. Safeguard youth and health—get a tube today! At all druggists, 35c and 60c.

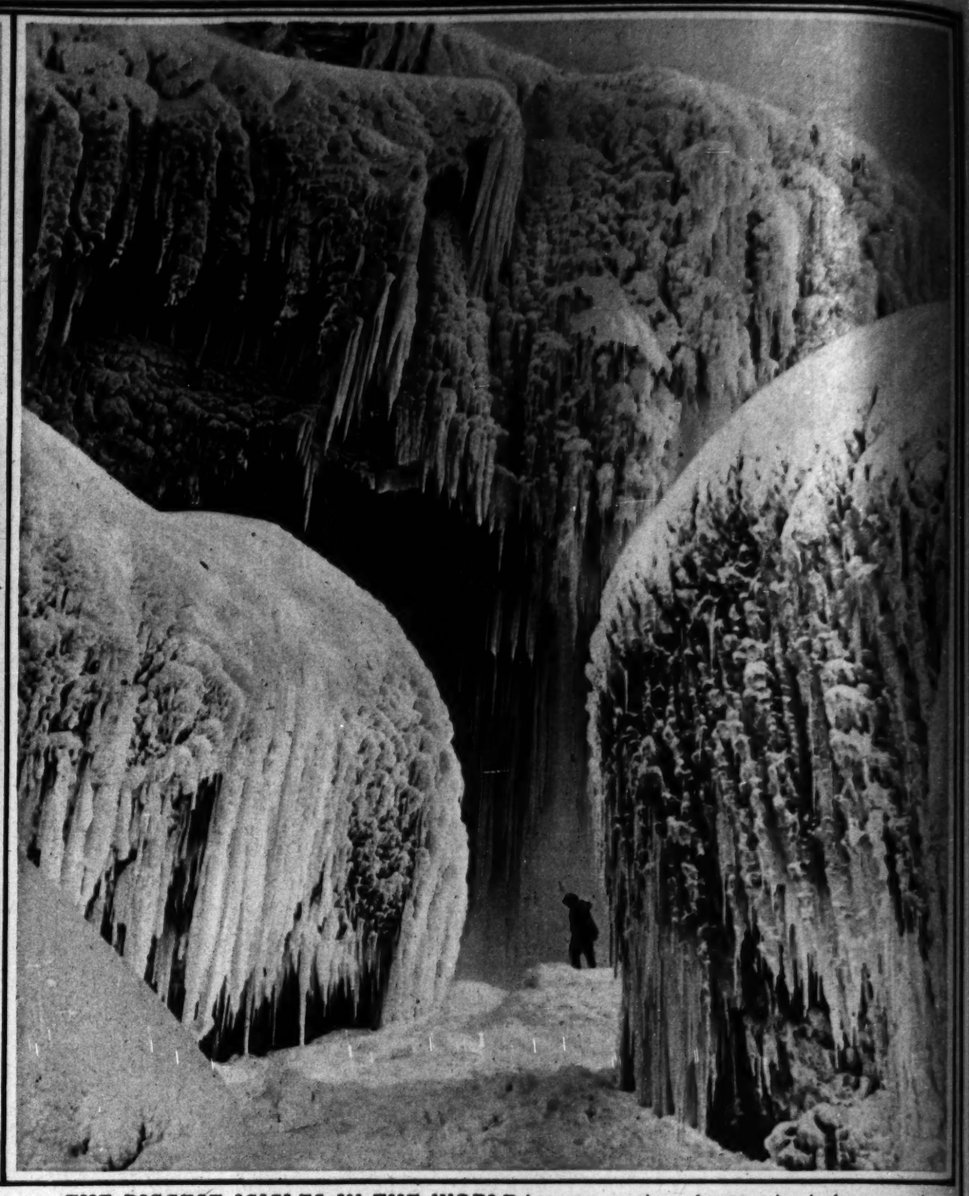
WINTER SETS UP A BEAUTY PARLOR IN WASHINGTON, rouging the cheeks of youthful skaters. The scene is the Lincoln Memorial pool, frozen to glassy perfection during successive cold waves. In the intermediate background to the east is Washington monument, and in the distance the capitol dome.
(Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)



THE BIGGEST ICICLES IN THE WORLD between arctic and antarctic circles are to be seen at Niagara Falls, they tell us, and this winter view of the Cave of the Winds is at least persuasive. Many of the great pendants weigh tons. Sunlight, playing upon these fairy fancies of winter, is shattered into rainbow flashes of radiance. (Photograph from Wide World.)

Now . . . your senses say

CLEAN

This modern dentifrice brings a new cleanness you can really taste and feel

THE sensation of tingling health, the fresh feel of gums and teeth—these tell you that your mouth is cleaner after using this modern dentifrice that washes, whitens, cleans.

Dual Cleansing Action

Modern mouth hygiene demands a dentifrice with a dual cleansing action. Colgate's formula is based on this principle. As you brush, Colgate's expands into a plentiful bubbling foam. First, this foam loosens imbedded food particles and polishes all tooth surfaces.

Then it thoroughly washes the entire mouth—teeth, gums, tongue — sweeping away all impurities. Thus the dual action of Colgate's brings unequaled cleanness; removes the causes of decay.

Your teeth will be cleaner after using this dentifrice that is designed to clean, rather than some drug-filled dentifrice which claims to cure, but fails to clean.

Colgate's Est. 1806

Free to the readers of this paper—a sample of the dentifrice most Americans use

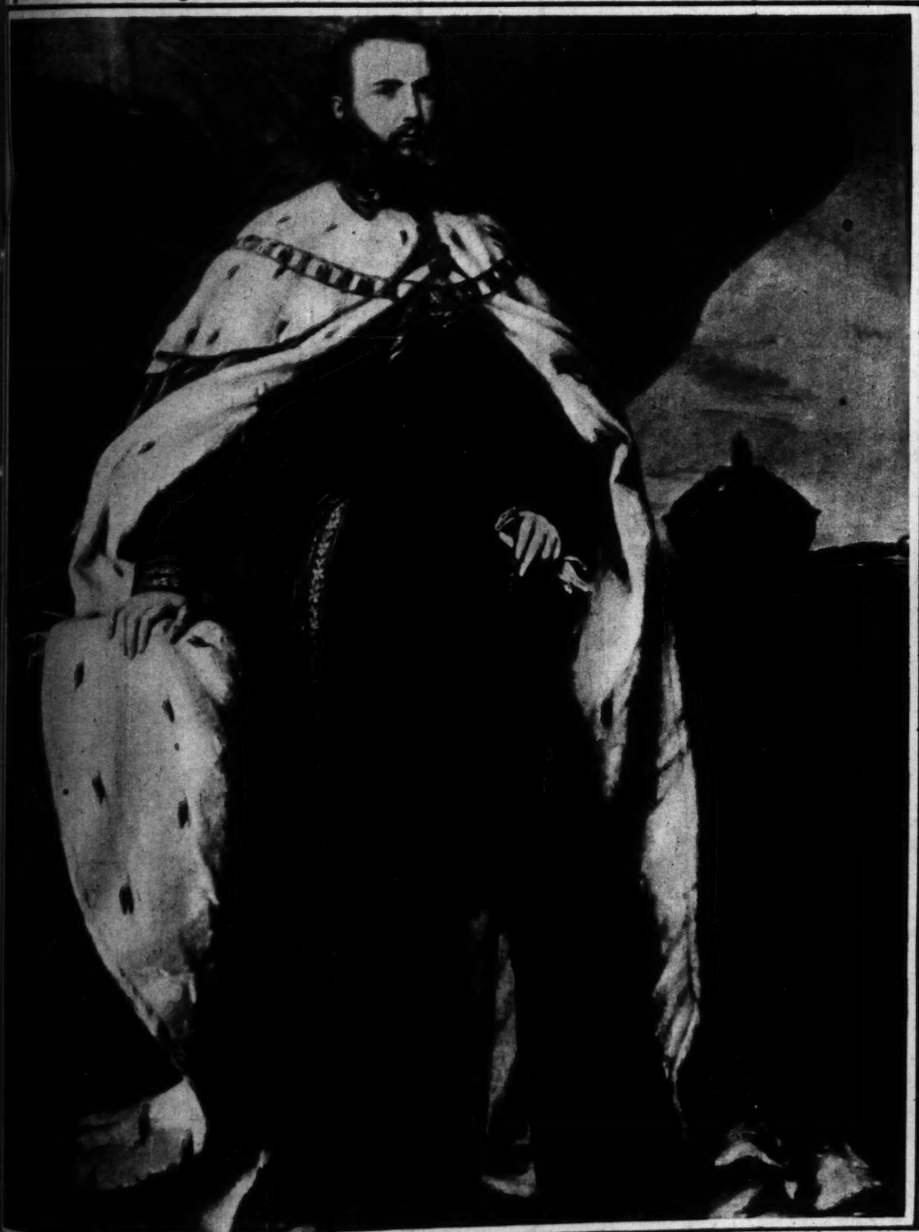
THE MAD EMPRESS PASSES—Back in the '60's Charlotte, who has just been laid to rest at 86 after three score years of insanity, was the fair sovereign pictured above. It was in 1866 that the young Empress of Mexico hurried to Europe in a vain quest for aid in keeping Maximilian upon the throne. While in Rome, appealing to the pope, she lost her sanity; and from then until the end time stood still for her. A score of Maximilian's legionnaires, all that are left of the regiment that fought for the royal adventurers in Mexico, followed Charlotte to the grave at Laeken, Belgium. (Photograph copyright by George F. Paul)



THE ILL-STARRED MAXIMILIAN, Emperor of Mexico, in royal robes. This archduke of Austria sat but six years upon the throne that European powers had set up for him in the western world during the American Civil war. In 1867, after protests from the United States had caused France to withdraw its support of the empire, Maximilian was overthrown by Mexican republicans and put to death. (Photograph copyright by George F. Paul)

TWO OCEANS IN THE SAME PICTURE! For the first time in history an aviator, flying 12,000 feet above the Panama canal, got the entire span of the isthmus on one negative, with bits of the Atlantic and Pacific besides. Notice how low the clouds appear here from a height of nearly two and a half miles. (Photograph from Wide World)

A SAINT APPEARED TO HIM IN A VISION, says the little Mexican lad at the center of this group. It was the Virgin of Guadalupe, patron of Mexico, he announced. Within a few hours a crowd of 10,000 had gathered on the spot in the town of Guadalupe, but the reported visitation was not repeated. (Photograph from Wide World)

ANOTHER AMERICAN OPERA nears its world premiere. Deems Taylor, the New York composer-critic who plies a corrective pencil here under the observation of Mrs. Taylor, is author of the score of the work, "The King's Henchman." The libretto is by Edna St. Vincent Millay. New York's Metropolitan opera will give it first performance February 17, if it adheres to the advance notice. (Photograph from International)

MOUTH of YOUTH

Where the six tiny Mouth Glands must be reached

The numbers show them—three on each side. They should produce the fluids that neutralize the acids of food decay. Pebeco restores these fluids to their youthful vigor.

FOR lovely smiles, white teeth and purest breath, care of six little glands in your mouth is most important.

As long as these mouth glands are active, the fluids they produce prevent decay.

But modern foods give too little chewing. Soon the mouth glands cease supplying their natural fluids. Then decay begins.

Especially to renew the vigor of the mouth glands as well as beautifully polish the teeth—Pebeco was prepared. As you brush your teeth with Pebeco you can taste its important salty ingredient, you can feel its soft crystals dissolve. How fresh and healthy your whole mouth feels!

KATHLEEN KEY is being a bit South African here. The throat decoration you observe is composed of seven strands of beads. Such a necklace, we are told, the feminine natives of darkest Africa wear on festive—and war—occasions.

LON CHANEY and ELEANOR BOARDMAN are seen here as they appear in "Tell It to the Marines." This is the first time since his salad days that Mr. Chaney has been "as is" before the camera. He's usually such a weird, terrible somebody, you know.

MEET THE JUNIORS—DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS and FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN! The fathers you have known for many years. Now, along come the byes, treading blithely in their daddies' footsteps. Thinkst the chips resemble the blocks?

CREIGHTON HALE, who is quite a favorite leading man, is to be seen as somebody funny. He is cast opposite Mabel Normand in the Hal Roach comedy, "Why Girls Walk Home." The innocent looking darling! Could HE, do you think, be a reason?

"WHILE I WAS IN THE NAVY a severe boil caused my whole neck to swell. I was miserable—for two years I had never been free from boils and pimples. I went to the Navy doctor and he said if I would take fresh Yeast and keep on taking it he was sure I would have no more trouble. I started eating Fleischmann's Yeast right away. My pimples dried up, and I have never had a boil since."
Eugene Blackmer, Jr., Denver, Colo.

"TIRED, LISTLESS, RUN DOWN—I realized that my system was slowly but surely being poisoned by auto-intoxication. I tried remedy after remedy—no relief. Until at last on a friend's advice I tried Fleischmann's Yeast. I took my three cakes daily and the results were surprising. Yeast built me up until now I feel entirely well."
Gladys L. Hall, Jacksonville, Fla.

(Above) "I HAVE JUST COMPLETED a trip around the world and had it not been for the supply of Fleischmann's Yeast in the ship's ice box I should undoubtedly have had a miserable time. For years I have suffered from very severe headaches caused by chronic indigestion. I tried every kind of remedy but was unable to get complete relief until I started taking Fleischmann's Yeast. Since taking Yeast I have had no headaches whatsoever."
Helen Knight, Pleasantville, N. Y.

Health you stop to look at Once victims of stubborn ills, they found the easy, simple way to vigorous health

"AUTO-INTOXICATION—my whole system was being poisoned"—"For years I suffered from indigestion"—"For two years I had never been free from boils and pimples" . . .

Tired out, discouraged—and then—how easy the way they found to banish their ills, to feel themselves again!

Fleischmann's Yeast is not a medicine—it is a fresh corrective food. The millions of tiny active yeast plants in each cake invigorate the whole system, aid digestion, clear the skin of boils and pimples.

Eaten regularly, Fleischmann's Yeast brings complete release from constipation. Unlike dangerous cathartics, yeast actually strengthens weak intestinal muscles. It checks intestinal putrefaction and prevents the absorption of poisons by the body.

Eat three cakes regularly every day, one before each meal: on crackers; in fruit juice, water or milk; or just plain, in small pieces.*

All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Buy two or three days' supply at a time and keep them in a cool dry place. Send for a free copy of the latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N-777, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

*For constipation physicians say it is best to drink Yeast in hot water (not scalding) before meals and before going to bed.
This famous food banishes constipation—aids digestion—clears the skin—tones up the entire system.

"SOME THREE YEARS AGO I assumed obligations of such a character as to put me, both physically and mentally, under a very serious and continued strain, that kind of work which makes it impossible to live according to sense. My entire organism went out of balance and I soon felt that I was dangerously close to a breakdown. A business friend of mine advised me to try eating Fleischmann's Yeast, and although I was rather skeptical about it, I followed his suggestion. Inside of a month, the signs of distressing exhaustion began to disappear and rapidly normalcy of functions was reestablished. Since then, I have continued to use Fleischmann's Yeast at the rate of 2 to 3 cakes a day."
Ugo V. d'Annunzio, New York City

MARGOT ASQUITH writes on

Woman's instinct to make herself Attractive

*Quips, praise and pungent wisdom on modern ways to care for the skin, by the famous Margot, now Countess of Oxford and Asquith

"AS LONG as human nature exists, men and women will want to make themselves physically attractive and even if there were no people in the world, but merely the beasts and birds, the same desire for personal adornment would be found among them.

"What small children call 'dressing up' is not so much a wish to impersonate someone else as a desire to attract attention and improve upon themselves.

"For self-improvement is part of the work-day of life; to love and be loved is its holiday. The intention to be at your best, to feel brilliant, responsive, and triumphant, is part of your equipment for that day. A new and beautiful dress will give you confidence in company, and you are more likely to succeed in pleasing others if you start by pleasing yourself.

This quaint Elizabethan barn on her country estate is used by Lady Oxford as a study

"The French talk of 'la beaute inutile.' It means that even beauty—poor in setting, devoid of charm and never extended—can lose its uses. But we have all-known women who have more than made up for their lack of features and for their general homeliness by the play of their expression, the grace of their carriage or the beauty of their complexion. A dingy complexion will spoil the prettiest face in the world for me, but, fortunately, most of us if we take enough trouble can improve our complexions out of all recognition.

Face like leather, Chest like a gong

"Those of you who have hunted, mountaineered, or been as much exposed to our inhospitable climate as I have, will know it is almost impossible to prevent your face from becoming like leather, or your chest like a gong, unless you take a great deal of trouble to preserve them.

"You do not want to apply creams and lotions that will make your skin soft and susceptible, but something that will make it fresh and impervious. Nor is it only the parts exposed to view that one can assist—such as the face, the neck, the shoulders, and the arms—but the whole of one's skin that should be improved and preserved.

"I have used Pond's Creams for years and years and even if I had been beautiful I could not have found more healthful or more cooling preparations. When I came in from hunting, I always rubbed the Cold Cream over my face, neck and hands.

"Queen Alexandra and the Grand Duchesse Serge were the two most beautiful women I ever knew. Far removed from ordinary mortals, they inspired the sort of homage which baffles curiosity and checks all questionings. When you are in the presence of loveliness as great as theirs, you do not speculate on what they may or may not have done during the times of their toilettes; but it is safe to say that a certain amount of care has contributed to their appearance.

The COUNTESS of OXFORD and ASQUITH

"Margot" Tennant, one of the six vivacious daughters of the late Sir Charles Tennant, is the wife of the distinguished statesman and former Prime Minister of Great Britain from 1908 to 1916. She is one of the most vivid and interesting figures of English society, famous for her daring wit and her intimate acquaintance with the personable of every land. She possesses a classic profile, has distinction of manner, dresses with taste and smartness, is a sprightly hostess. Her Autobiography had almost as much vogue in the United States as in England. Like all English women of rank, Lady Oxford is devoted to sports. In the picture to the left, she is playing the eighth hole on a golf course near North Berwick, Scotland.

"YOUNG PEOPLE often ask me about the beauties of my youth, and how they would compare with the present generation. It is, of course, difficult to say, because although we are all made the same to an eyelash, a variety of taste creates a hundred opinions, and what appeals to one person in a face will repel another. There are some people who admire little fair fluffy faces; a pink and white complexion and a look of virginal innocence. Others a snow white skin and fathomless eyes, dark hair, and a look of sadness and mystery. While ladies who write novels lean to red gold hair, long black lashes veiling violet eyes.

"But it is safe to say that none of these types would receive any admiration if they did not have fine complexions.

Can a Woman of Thirty Retain Sufficient Attraction to Upset a Man's Heart?

"Nothing in my life has changed so much as the estimate people place upon a woman's age. You were considered a failure if you did not marry before you were twenty-five when I came out. And to suggest that a woman of thirty could retain sufficient physical attraction to upset a man's heart or stir his senses would have been looked upon as a paradox.

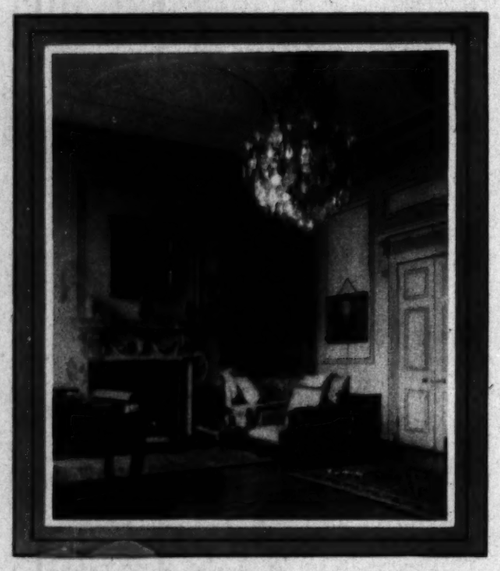
"I remember saying to my sister, engaged to be married at seventeen, 'It is no good saying other people do it! You are a fool to cut short all love affairs. I don't intend to marry till I'm thirty!!!' I said thirty as one might say a hundred.

"Now you see proficiency at golf, tennis, skating, riding, fishing and shooting in women past the age of forty; they have preserved not only their youth but their complexions. The individual should rely upon herself to guard against the dangers of the unavoidable exposure that accompanies all modern pursuits. For even if you like it—which I do not—you cannot rouge upon a rough skin.

"I have used Pond's Creams for my skin more years than I can remember; and though I have never been beautiful, and I am not young, I have not got a wrinkle in my forehead.

"My advice is, save your skin—with Pond's—and cheat the devil that lurks in soot, dust, wind—and birthdays!"

Margot Oxford



The Countess of Oxford and Asquith has a very dignified town house at No. 44 Bedford Square, London. This photograph shows a view of the drawing room with its high ceiling, its wonderful chandelier of crystal and ormolu, its classic mantel and a wealth of books, paintings and comfortable overstuffed chairs and sofas

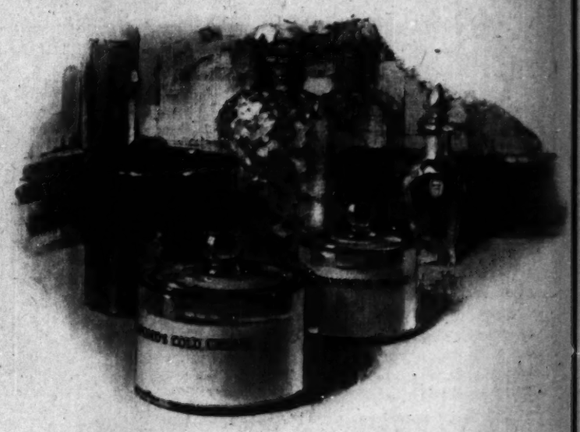
*The Countess of Oxford and Asquith has written with her own hand and in her own sparkling, inimitable style this article on a subject of universal interest to women.

USE Pond's Two Creams each day as follows for a complexion that everyone admires:

For the deep cleansing of your skin apply Pond's Cold Cream generously at night and during the day when your skin feels dusty, drawn or tired. In a few moments its fine oils bring up from the pores all dust and powder. Wipe off and repeat. Finish with a dash of cold water. If your skin is unusually dry, after the bedtime cleansing add a little more cream and leave it overnight, to make your skin supple again.

For a beautiful even finish use Pond's Vanishing Cream, applying it lightly after every daytime cleansing and especially before going out. It gives your skin a new freshness, holds your powder smoothly and is protection from the wind and sudden cold.

Buy your own jars of Pond's Creams which Lady Oxford uses every day. If you would like to try these Two Creams, mail the coupon below.



On the dressing table of Lady Oxford, unusual perfume bottles, a powder box of tortoise shell and two jade green glass jars filled with Pond's Cold and Vanishing Creams bear witness to her distinguished taste

FREE OFFER: Mail this coupon for free tubes of Pond's Two Creams and instructions for using them.

FIVE SCORE AND EIGHTEEN YEARS AGO next Saturday Abraham Lincoln came upon the American scene, wherefore the nation's millions will honor the Emancipator this week in reverent thought and ceremony. This painting, one of the outstanding Lincoln portraits, was done by William Morris Hunt, the great American artist. The canvas hung in the Metropolitan Museum of Art at New York from 1917 until its purchase in 1925 by former Governor John G. Winant of New Hampshire.

IN THE WHITE HOUSE an artist's pen preserved for posterity this intimate study of the Lincoln family while the nation was rent asunder by civil war. Left to right are Robert Todd, Abraham, Thomas ("Tad"), Mrs. Lincoln, and William. Robert Todd was born in 1843 and died in 1926; Tad was born in 1853 and died in 1871; William was born in 1850 and died in 1862. Lincoln had a fourth son, Edward Baker, who died in 1850 at the age of 4.

MAJ. GEN. FOREMAN RETIRES from command of the Thirty-third division and, retiring, is presented with Albin Polasek's bust of himself by his soldiers. With him here are Brig. Gen. Abel Davis and former Gov. Lowden, in the center, who unveiled the bust at the great birthday party given for the general by military and civic leaders.

We all like the easiest way—

IT'S human nature to prefer the easiest way of doing things . . . Practically every important invention that has marked the progress of the times has been aimed at simplifying some job or other. Take the typewriter, the sewing machine, or any one of a hundred others that you think of.

We are constantly studying out new ways to make things easier to do; partly because we want to speed up, get more accomplished; but also—and this must not be overlooked—because we like to pamper ourselves. About a great many things, to be really honest, we're all fundamentally lazy.

And particularly, we're lazy about some of the small important things of life.

Even in that simple matter of brushing the teeth—a daily duty we owe to our own well-being—many of us are negligent.

At night we're tired; in the morning we're in a hurry.

Realizing the truth of this, the makers of Listerine set out deliberately to formulate a dentifrice that would furnish the easiest, quickest way to clean teeth. In short, a tooth paste efficient even in the hands of lazy people—for in tooth brushing, at least, the word lazy applies to so many of us.

Listerine Tooth Paste is really very easy to use. It works fast. With just a minimum of brushing your teeth feel clean—and actually are clean.

You have the job done almost before you know it.

This is on account of the way Listerine Tooth Paste is made. It contains a specially prepared cleansing ingredient—entirely harmless to enamel*—plus the antiseptic essential oils that have made Listerine famous.

And how fine your mouth feels after this kind of a brushing. Then, besides, you know your teeth are really clean—and therefore safe from decay.—Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.

P. S. — Is your pocket book tired? Listerine Tooth Paste is only 25 cents for the large tube.*

"— even for lazy people"

*This specially prepared cleansing medium (according to tests based upon the scale of hardness scientists employ in studying mineral substances) is much softer than tooth enamel. Therefore, it cannot scratch or injure the enamel.

At the same time it is harder than the tartar which accumulates and starts tooth decay.

Smoking refreshment that never ends

WHY is it that the enjoyment of Camels never fails? That you can light them all day and far into the night with never a loss of smoothness, mildness and incomparable fragrance? It's simply a question of quality. Camels contain the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos grown. Camels are given an expert blending found in no other cigarette.

First thing in the morning. Late at night. Before or after breakfast, lunch or dinner. Light Camels as liberally as you choose, one after the other, as often as you desire the cheering comfort of a cigarette. You will get always the refreshing thrill of smoking pleasure.

Camel perfection has resulted in a demand that has never been known before or since. There has never been cigarette popularity that could compare with Camel's. Each year, millions of experienced smokers, who are willing to pay any price for quality, find in Camels every good thing they've ever wanted in a cigarette.

Here's a smoke invitation that's leading millions to an entirely new conception of cigarette contentment and satisfaction—

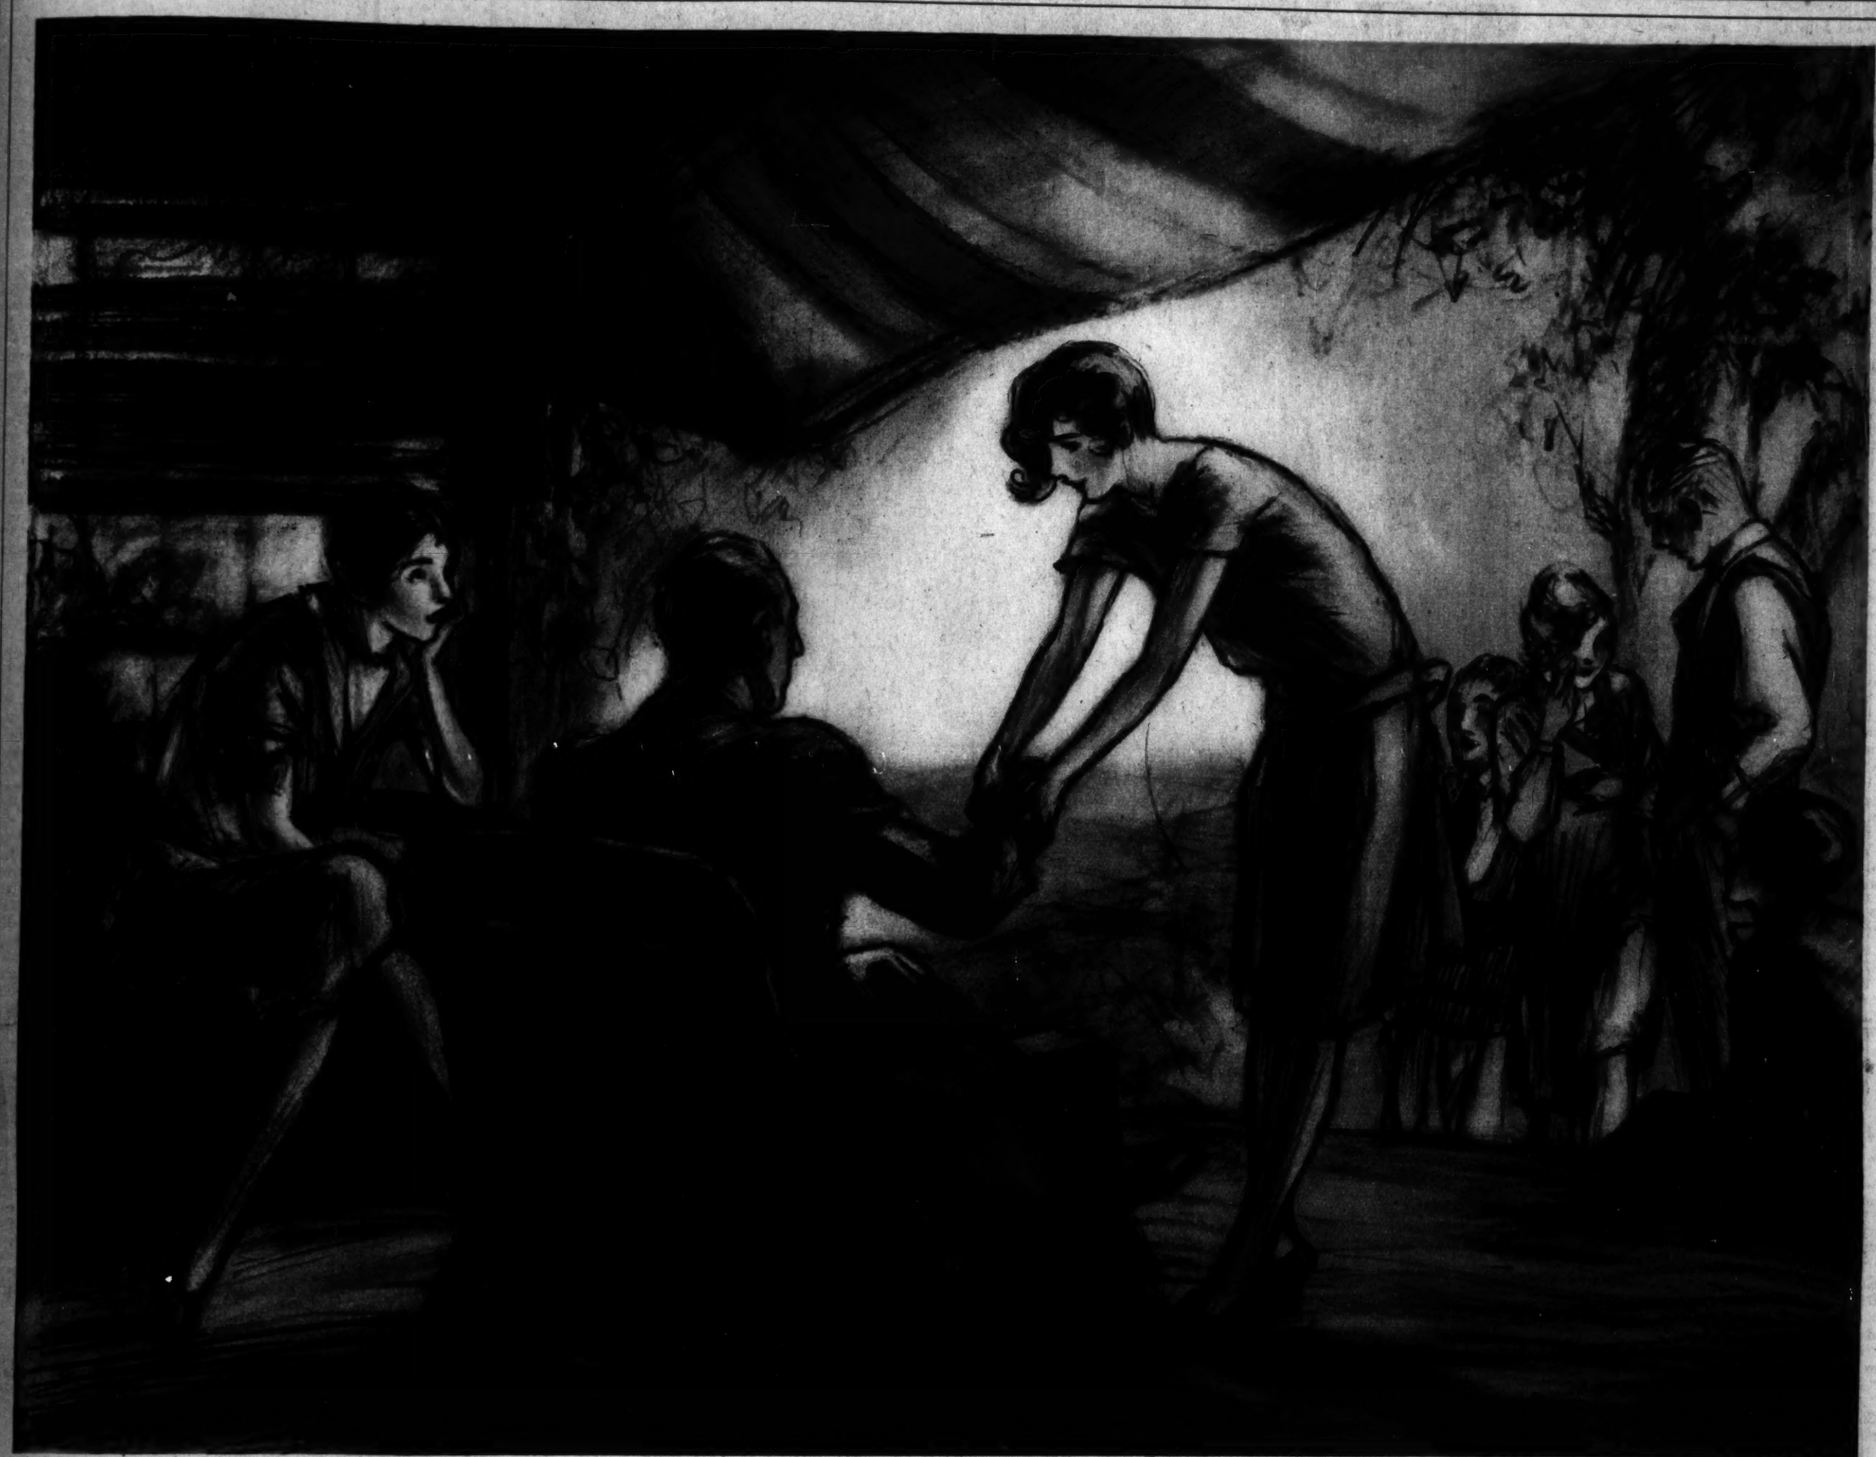
DEUCES WILD

by Mary Synon



"O, hello, Gene, old dear! Come on in with me!"

ILLUSTRATED BY LORENE BREDEWEG.

Marny Was the Only Self-Sacrificing, Hard-Working Member of a Large and Scrappy Family Until She Learned a Lesson from the Worm and Decided to Turn.

PEACE after strife, lull after storm, Sunday afternoon settled down heavily upon the turbulent Tracys. From the dining room, where she was putting away the flat silver, Marny could hear her father's deepened breathing as he slept above piles of half read newspapers, and the low murmur of voices from the porch, where Stella and Herbert were going through the final throes of another reconciliation. Silence of the radio gave testimony that Helen and Lew had taken advantage of their parents' preoccupation to go out, probably with Joe to a ball game. From force of habit Marny listened for the tinkle of Grace's bell, punctuating as always any moment of respite. No sound came, and, her task finished, she went back to the kitchen, where Maggie Kenny was hanging up the dish towels.

"You can leave everything else," Marny told her. "I'll get supper if any one wants it."

"There'll be some one to want it," Maggie gave mournful prophecy. "I've been in this house since the Michaelmas before your mother—may the Lord have mercy on her soul, she was a good woman!—died seven years ago, and there hasn't been a Sunday night that you haven't had to set the table for a crowd."

"Father doesn't like to forage."

"He isn't the only one."

"He's the only one I'd bother about."

"One of the rest of them might take a turn once in a while." She wiped her hands on her apron and slicked back a loose lock of hair. "It's none of my business," she took up her inevitable Sabbath chant, "but I hate to see you so set on, Marny. If some I won't mention would lift a hand to helping——"

"Maggie!"

"I'm naming no names. Well, if you're going to do it you'll find the cold roast in the ice box back of the tomatoes for the salad. The coffee's in the percolator and the chocolate cake's in the oven. I had to put it there from——"

"Where's the cheese?"

"Sure, Joe and Lew ate it last night when they came in from the movies."

"They'll get more."

"If you'll get them to go for it you're doing well. There's Grace's broth all ready to heat and her tray ready to put it on."

"I'll take it up to her."

"Can't Helen?"

"She's out."

"Again?"

"She's only a youngster, Maggie."

"Seventeen."

"That's pretty young." A sigh for the years that had run under the bridge since her own seventeen rose almost involuntarily as she looked out into the Maytime brightness over the back yards of the block.

"Old enough to go gallivanting. You're not going out at all yourself?"

"I—I don't know."

"Well, suit your fancy, but if you don't start going out soon you won't be getting many more chances. It's the cloth on the counter that's sold." She hung her apron over a peg on the door. "If my cousin Annie Harrigan calls for me will you tell her I've gone to my sister Norah's?" She went up the back stairs to make ready for her departure, and Marny turned to the front of the house as the telephone in the lower hall jangled noisily. She moved hurriedly to answer the call, but Stella, coming in from the porch, intercepted her.

"O, how do you do, Gene?" Marny heard her say. "Yes, she's somewhere in the house. I'll call her if you like, but why don't you come over? We'll all be glad to see you. O, come on! Yes, any time. Fine!"

"That was Gene Graves," she told Marny. "I knew that Herb wants to ask him about that Riverview property, and so I told him to come right over."

"Didn't he ask for me?"

"Why, of course, but I didn't see any sense in calling you when he was coming over." She picked up the receiver again, dialing a number. "That you, Clara?" she inquired. "What are you doing this afternoon? What time? Half past five? That's all right. Come right over here when you're through. I want to ask you about something." She turned back to Marny. "Clara's going to give me a list of the places in Italy she thinks Helen ought to see."

"Then you're really going?"

"Of course! Lew will be perfectly all right here. You won't have to worry about him either, for I've just told Herb that he might as well come over and stay here while Helen and I are away."

"What does father say about it?"

"O, Marny, don't be stuffy! You know I'll be able to manage him if you'll only let me alone. Now, don't gum the game; that's an angel."

"But he said the last time you fought with Herb that he was perfectly willing to have you and the children come home, but that he would not let Herb live in this house."

"I know he said it, but he said the same thing the time before, didn't he, and the time before that? I think it's perfectly hateful, anyhow, the way you and Grace always act when I make up with Herb."

"It isn't the making up with him, Stella, that bothers us. It's the certainty that you'll be sure to fight with him again. Besides——"

"Besides what?"

"Well, I think you'd have a much better chance of getting on with each other if you'd just go off by yourselves."

"I might know you'd say that. It's lucky for me that this is father's house, not yours."

"You know you're taking that wrong. I wasn't thinking about us, but about you."

"But how on earth can I keep house, and take care of two children, and teach school?"

"You wouldn't have to teach."

"How could I get along if I didn't?"

"Herb makes a pretty decent salary."

"You know as well as I do," Stella declared, two red spots glowing on her fair cheeks, and her eyes blue fire back of glinting eye-glasses, "that I'm saving money to take Helen abroad this summer, but if you——"

"If you can fix it up with father," Marny cut in, "I'm sure it's nothing to me." From upstairs floated down the faint tinkle of a bell.

"Fix what up with me?" her father's voice rose from the living room.

"Stella'll tell you," she countered as the command of Grace's call rose insistently.

SHE went upstairs with Stella's malevolent glance following her, and Grace's querulous voice lifting protest. "I could be ringing all day, and no one would come near me," her sister wailed. "That's what it is to be sick."

She looked aesthetically invalided rather than really ill as Marny entered the big, sunshine-bright room which had been her own before Grace's widowed return to the old homestead. Flowers made gay window sills and mantel, books and magazines were strewn over low tables close to the bed where Grace, exquisitely fragile, lovely in lavender lace, lifted reproachful gaze from her own beringed fingers to Marny's coming. "I'm so lonely," she complained. "No one has been near me for hours."

"I was busy."

"Where are the rest of them?"

"Joe's out."

"He would be. If he ever left the car around long enough for any one else to use I think I might manage to ride once in a while."

"I'll take you out any afternoon during the week. Sunday driving's awful, anyhow."

"Your driving makes me nervous. Where are Helen and Lew?"

"With Joe, I suppose."

"Did I hear Herb down there?"

"A Very Romantic Affair"

By Arnold Bennett. This famous author writes a whimsical short story of a fat lover who reduced for his lady.

"He came over for dinner."

"He'll stay for tea, of course, and just when I was thinking I'd try to get down. Marny, I don't see why you let them all impose so dreadfully on you. It's disgraceful."

"O, I don't mind poor old Herb."

"You don't? Well, I do. I simply can't bear the sight of that man. I never see him that I don't think what a terrible injustice it is that my Frank should have been taken and Herbert Lorman left!"

"Grace!"

"I can't help it. You know how sweet and kind Frank always was to me, and I'm sure that if he'd lived long enough he'd have made plenty of money so that I wouldn't have to be living on my father's charity."

"You know that no one thinks that."

"How could any one help it?" Her delicate face quivered, then as suddenly lighted. "Anyhow," she reasoned, "I've really more justice in being here than Stella has. Is that man coming back here?"

"Stella says so."

"I won't stand it." She began to sob. "I'll go away if he comes into this house again."

"Where?"

"I don't know. To a hospital. Anywhere. I can't endure it. It's absurd. He and Stella have been married for nearly twenty years, and here they are, quarreling and making up like two bad children, living here one year, taking an apartment the next, then fighting, and Stella and Lew and Helen coming back, then making up again, with Herb on the doorstep, and the whole thing all over. It's ridiculous. It's horrible. I can't see why father lets it go on."

"What can he do?"

"He can hold to what he says, and not let Stella wind him around her finger. He can refuse to let Herb come back. He can tell Stella that if she makes up with Herb she'll have to find another place."

"I suppose he knows that Stella wouldn't make up with Herb now if she had to do that."

"And why? Because she wants to go abroad. Here I am, not able to go out of the house from month to month, and she's planning to go to all the places I've ached to see. Biarritz, and Deauville, and the Lido—they're awfully fashionable in summer. Do you think that father would take me if I were able to go? The trip would certainly do him good, Marny."

"You know as well as I do," Marny said steadily, "that he can't afford to go this year. The expenses of this house are something terrific. He'd have to be a millionaire to stand them, and do anything else."

"I know how extravagant Joe and Lew are. They bring in crowds for meals without even asking if they can."

"Every one does that."

"You act sometimes as if our friends were a burden to you. I don't altogether blame you, of course, when you have to take your allowance out of what's left from the household account, but, really, Marny——"

"Is there anything I can get for you?"

"Why?"

"I'm going to lie down for a while."

"Will you call Dr. Marston and ask him to run in this afternoon?"

"You don't need him, Grace."

"I need him as much as Stella needs Herbert. Now be a dear, and get me some of Joe's cigarets."

"You shouldn't smoke."

"A widow must have some consolations."

"All right."

SHE shrugged resignation, and went downstairs again, calling Dr. Marston and foraging for cigarets, but was diverted from return by her father's call: "Why don't you want the house cleaned during the summer?"

"I hadn't thought about it."

"Then what did Stella mean?"

"When?"

"When you went upstairs she told me that you'd been talking about decorating, and said to fix it up with me. She said you want to wait till she comes home, but she thinks it will be less confusing to have it done while she's away."

"It doesn't need to be done at all. You know how high the bills are running, and——"

"I told her we'd do it in the summer."

"All right."

She took the cigarets upstairs, tossing them to Grace, and went to her own room, banging the door in wooden eloquence. Within sanctuary she flung herself across her bed.

"I'm sick of it," she muttered into the pillow, "just damned sick of it all!" She sobbed herself into a self-pity which dimmed her eyes, but, after a little, she relaxed, and slept fitfully for a couple of hours.

She awoke with a start, opened the door, and heard the sound of another voice added to Herbert's and Stella's. She hurried to dress, and her eyes shone as she brushed her close-cut hair. As she gazed into the mirror, of the big old-fashioned dresser she felt a glow of comfort in the thought that she was good to look upon.

"Yet," she added in her summary, "even if I am twenty-seven." She smiled as the third voice from the porch lifted its tone. "Coming, my dear," she said to it, and dove into the closet for a dress.

Not finding it, she whirled a robe around her, and crossed to Grace's room. "Did I leave my new dress here?" she asked her sister.

"Helen's wearing it," Grace said indifferently.

"My green dress? Why, I told her she wasn't even to try it on!"

"Well, she took it."

"It's the last straw," Marny cried. She sped back to her own room, dragging out another gown, and donning it with an indignation which brought banners of rose to her cheeks. She was singularly pretty and quite unconscious of her aspect as she ran down the stairs and out to where Gene Graves talked with her sister and brother-in-law.

He rose with a smile for her which transfigured his dark, rather heavy face, and pushed out a chair into which she sank with a relief in his presence which she did not try to analyze. Herbert, after a pretense of arising to mark her coming, went on with his stock recounting of the skyrocketing of real estate values in the city.

"You can't go wrong on Edison Gardens, Gene," he advised.

"I haven't." Gene gave Marny a slow wink which brought laughter to her eyes. "I sold what I had out there last week."

"Too soon. You should have waited till September."

"I got my price."

"You ought to buy Vennerdale now."

"I'm going to spend the profits for a change." His eyes flashed Marny a message whose significance she felt, but did not try to fathom. Her pulse quickened its beat, and she thrilled to the sensation of adventure which seemed to rise with his words.

"You ought to go abroad, Gene," Stella said with decision. "Helen and I will meet you in Paris."

"That would be nice, but I don't expect to go to—Paris." Again his look sought Marny, almost with direct question. She lowered her long lashes and fell into reverie as happy as it was inchoate. Through it Herbert's assertions and Stella's suggestions came to her vaguely, lapping waters against the ship of Gene's mental progress toward her. It was only when Dr. Marston's arrival caught their attention that she rose to alert consciousness.

"You would," Gene acknowledged, his eyes shouting emotions his lips dared not frame.

"Aren't the two of you ready yet?" Stella returned to question. "I wouldn't mind for myself, but Herb has to meet a man downtown at half-past seven."

"We're ready," Gene told her, helping Marny to carry platters to the dining room. He tried to find a place beside her as the crowd trooped in, but Stella, major domo of the seating, separated them, putting him beside Grace, who had, with Dr. Marston's help, managed to come downstairs. Marny shot him a smile of understanding, and he sent down the length of the table a look so ardent that she flushed hotly before it and spilled coffee on the Italian lace runner.

"Well, I'm a Chinaman!"

"Keep your mind on your work, Marny," Lew told her gravely.

"Keep still," she whispered.

"What price stillness?" he bantered, but she would not answer.

"Come for a ride," Gene was begging her. "We'll run out to the Lightship for supper."

"O, I can't," she said regretfully.

"Why not?" His face clouded.

"Stella's asked Clara Whelan to tea, and I'm sure that Grace'll ask Dr. Marston."

"Let Stella get it."

"You know she never does."

"Then let them go without."

"I wouldn't mind the rest of them, but father——"

"Why doesn't he ask Stella once in a while?"

"I don't know why he doesn't," she said honestly, "but I do know that I'm always elected. I'm housekeeper, you see."

"I see a good deal I've said nothing about," he began, but she moved nervously, and he shifted tone. "Come out after supper?"

She had just time for acquiescence before Joe came expertly up to the curb in the family car, filled now with boys and girls, among them Helen, vivid, noisy, and slightly overflowing the slim lines of Marny's green dress. "The Cubs won! The Cubs won!" she chanted, refusing to meet Marny's accusing eye. "Can't somebody hurry the eats? We're all going out to Betty's after we've had something. O, hello, Gene, old dear! Come on in with me. I've a new kink in the cakewalk to show you."

He laughed up at her youthful zest, and Marny felt a sudden chill about her as if the sun had slipped down. She made her way through the crowd into the house and back to the kitchen. Lew, following her, opened the ice box.

"I can get all I want this way," he said, embarrassment thickening his boyish voice. "Honestly, Marny, it's a shame the way they drag gangs in here on Sunday evening and let you do all the work. Can't I do something for you?"

"Run the car down to the delicatessen for some cheese," she bade him, her heart warming to his thought for her as she hurried expertly through the task of putting the food on the table. She was in the thick of her job when Gene came out.

"What do you think you're going to do?" she asked him, glowing in realisation that he had forsaken the younger crowd for her. "You look dreadfully out of place in the kitchen," she teased him.

"You don't; but I hate to think of you working for this mob."

"I'm not working very hard."

"You're always working hard," he told her steadily. "There isn't a time I come over when you aren't up to your eyes in something for the gang."

"O, Gene, I——"

"When you know that——"

"Know what?"

"That if——"

"O, Marny," Stella thrust her blonde head into the kitchen to say, "Dr. Marston will stay for tea. I hope you'll have something nice."

"O, damn Dr. Marston," Gene muttered.

Marny began to laugh unsteadily. "You were saying that if——"

"I was saying—Marny—look here, why can't we——"

"Aunt Marny," Helen's young voice floated down the back stairway, "Aunt Grace is going to get up for supper and wants you to help her dress."

"You help her, Helen."

"I can't."

"If you'll help her I'll forgive you for something you did today."

"All right." The response came grudgingly. Marny turned to Gene, growing sullen as he stood near the table. "Can't we what?" she asked him breathlessly, her eyes afire with daring.

"Can't we start a home of our own?" Challenge rather than pleading rang in his words.

"O, Gene, Gene, dear!"

He swung across to take her in his arms, kissing her with the passion of long denial. Under it, in the joy of love fulfilled, she blossomed into beauty as she lifted her radiant face to him. They had slipped the anchor of consciousness of all but each other when Lew thrust open the kitchen door.

"Well, I'm a Chinaman," he yelled, flung his package upon the sink, and rushed out.

They drew back and tumbled into laughter which brought Marny perilously close to tears. "O, wouldn't you know one of them would do it?" she sobbed.

In the rush of talk, her father's hospitable urgings, Herb's real estate optimisms, Stella's high handed commands, Clara Whelan's guide book accuracies, Helen's effervescent assertions, Joe's baseball prophecies to the youngsters, Grace's low murmured confidences to Dr. Marston's low murmured sympathy, Marny felt that she and Gene were being held apart by a rope of circumstance infinitely firmer than it looked. With determination to sever it, she rose quickly when the meal was done.

"Gene and I are going out," she told any one who wanted to listen. "You can leave everything just as it is until I come home."

No one made comment, but Stella moved toward Clara Whelan. "I'll walk home with you, Clara," she said, "and get that book on Florence." In the outward rush of the crowd Dr. Marston departed, and with panic Marny saw only her father and Grace left in the living room.

"I'll have to get her upstairs before we go," she told Gene, but Grace waved off her intention of haste. "I'd like to play pinochle with father," she said, bestowing upon him the tone which always presaged cajolery.

"We won't be late," Marny told her. "You can play till we come home."

"You aren't going out?" Her father scowled in protest. "I was thinking that the four of us could have a good game of bridge. I haven't played since the last time Gene was over. I owe him a beating."

"I'll come over some other night," Gene made overture, "but Marny and I planned to——"

"We'll just play a little while," Tracy overrode him. He brought out the card table with the eagerness of the bored for distraction and put it into place.

"But I don't want to play," Marny protested. "I haven't been out since church, and I'm dead for air."

"O, come on, come on! We'll just play for an hour, then you two can go."

"O, very well." She would not meet Gene's eye as she took a place grudgingly across from him. "Don't blame me if we lose," she told him.

"I think that's just what I'll do," he said so earnestly that she was startled into looking at him.

Under his flare of temper she lighted into flame of her own, and sulkily dealt the cards from the deck while her father and sister contemplated their hands in blissful heedlessness of the drama between them.

"Let's play deuces wild," Grace exclaimed. No one assented, and she pouted. "I love to play them," she told Gene.

"You would," he said with an undercurrent of significance in his voice which only Marny caught. "It's quite a trick," he went on evenly, "to be able to block the other fellow's high cards with your low ones."

"Isn't it?" Grace agreed.

"Misdeal," her father told Marny.

For an hour they played, Grace and her father avid for victory, Gene careful from force of habit, Marny reckless. The clock struck nine before she found a chance to withdraw.

"Come on," she bade Gene, but it was the purpose of indignation rather than the joy of anticipation which rang in her command.

"I'm not going up just yet," Grace said, as her father and Gene walked toward the porch. "I want to talk to father. I think that Stella would rather stay home this summer now that Herb's coming back, but she doesn't know how to fix it. That's why she went home with Clara. She'll try to get her to go abroad and take Helen."

"Did she tell you that?"

"She didn't say anything, but don't you suppose I can see it? I thought perhaps father would be glad to have Stella home, and so he'd send me with Helen if——"

"You're day-dreaming."

"Well, that's the way to start anything, isn't?"

"Perhaps." Her own dreams seemed perilously top-heavy as she turned away. What a mess it all was! One after the other, her father, Stella, Grace, they had all unconsciously cheated her out of the happiness of an evening which should have been glowing; just as somehow they had, without real intention, cheated her out of years of freedom, of fulfillment, of Gene.

"Ready?" Gene asked her as her father went back to Grace.

"I'm too tired to go, now," she told him, knowing that her weariness was of spirit, not of flesh. "Let's stay here."

He moved a chair close to hers and took her hand. Once more the utter peace which had come to her with his presence crept over her senses, and she drifted into an awed delight of the soft Maytime evening. Content to linger in the aura of the dream, she was startled by the swift harshness of Gene's voice. "What are you going to do about it, Marny?"

"About what?"

"About me. About them."

"O, I——"

"I've loved you since before your mother died," he went on solemnly. "You weren't any older than Helen the night I met you at Whelan's. Remember?"

"I couldn't forget."

"I've never seen any other girl since."

"But——"

"You've been the reason for everything I've done. I quit college and went to work because I wanted to make enough money to ask you to marry me when you'd be twenty-one."

"Why—why didn't you tell me then?"

"I couldn't bind you when I didn't have anything."

"But——"

"Then by the time I was earning enough to get a home your mother died. I saw how your father needed you, and so I waited. Then Grace married and Stella and the youngsters came home. I tried my best to pull you out then, but you wouldn't see it."

"You didn't ask me."

"I didn't dare. You looked as dedicated to your family those days as if you'd been a nun and they were your vocation."

"They were, I think."

"Well, isn't it about time to change it to me? I need you more than they do."

"O, Gene!" Her clasp on his hand tightened. "I don't know."

"Don't—know?"

"I thought I did when—when you kissed me. I thought that it was just love for you that made me so happy. If you'd asked me then I'd have said I'd go with you tomorrow."

"Well, why not tomorrow?"

"But I've had time since then to see that there's something else in me that made me glad, and so I can't be sure. You see," she went on painfully, "I've been running the house here for nearly seven years, and somehow they've all got into the habit of thinking that I'm part of the machinery. Nobody thinks of me as a human being but Maggie Kenny and you. They don't mean it, I'm sure, but they've brought things to the place where I thought this afternoon before you came that I'd do anything in the world to get away from it all."

"It's about time you saw it."

"O, Gene, dearest, don't you see that is why I can't go with you?"

"In the name of all that's holy, why not?"

"Because I love you too much."

"That's the best reason in the world for coming."

"But I've been used so long by the ones I've loved that I can't let myself use you. I thought I could. Really I did. Sometimes I would think that, if only you'd ask me, I'd rush right into your arms and never, never let you stir a step without me. O, for a long, long time, ever since I thought you must love me or you wouldn't stand these Sunday riots of ours, you've been my way out, my ace in the hole. That's why I can't go with you, Gene. I'd be—ashamed."

"Don't you love me?"

Her hand trembled within his hold. "I'll never be able to tell you how much. I've never even thought of any one else, and I think of you—all the time."

"Now, look here, Marny," he said slowly, evenly, but she saw the storm back of his eyes as he bent toward her, "you've got this all wrong. The only thing that's important in all this muddle is that you love me and that I love you. If you didn't love me you might have a qualm about taking me for a ladder out of the pit."

"No," she said, "it's because I love you so much that I can't let anything like that come into it."

"The trouble with you," he said angrily, "is that you let them play their game with your cards and their game has been deuces wild, just as Grace called it tonight. Two-spots to win over kings, and queens and aces! Well, their little cards aren't going to stop our high cards any longer. We're going to play the game our own way and with each other!"

"If——"

"That's all there's to it. Now are you going to marry me?"

IN the dim light from the living room windows he stared at her as if he were gazing down into the deep well of her troubled soul.

"Yes," she said, and felt the serenity of long-denied security as he turned her hand and set his lips reverently upon her throbbing palm.

"When?"

"I—I don't know," she gasped, as she heard her father's step in the hall.

"Now, listen to me, Marny. You've kept me waiting ten years while you've taken care of your family, and you're not going to keep me waiting another week. You're going to marry me this week or I'll go off to China alone."

"China?"

"Yes, China. When I was a youngster I used to stand by the bridges in the North Branch, watching the old lake boats going out in the spring. There was one of them, the Alice Cameron, whose captain came to know me. I used to yell to him, 'Where are you going?' and he'd always say, 'To China, sonny!' That was when I made up my mind that some day I'd go there. Then I met you, and I put you in the dream of it. Hongkong, Shanghai, the treaty ports—what a time we'll have, Marny! You're coming with me if you marry me before Saturday. If you don't——"

"But Gene, dear——"

"That's that."

"But if——" She paused as her father came to the doorway.

"Nice night," Tracy said judicially, surveying the street. "Is that man coming to cut the grass tomorrow, Marny?"

"Yes."

"Needs it. Tell him not to rake it or the lawn will burn. Has Gananoque good fishing in June, Gene?"

"Fine."

"Hello, here's Stella." His voice lifted in the pleasure his eldest daughter's presence always evoked for him, but Stella's response failed to reach its usual masterful blitheness. She started indoors, then stood at the doorway beyond Gene to say wearily, rather than bitterly, "I hate selfish people."

"O, I don't know," Gene contradicted. "They are the ones who get the work of the world done."

"But when they stick in the mud at home——"

"That's just what I've been telling Marny," he declared.

"Marny isn't selfish," Stella denied, "but it would take an earthquake or a cyclone to move her."

"Sometimes," he said, "the two come together. Then it gets another name."

Stella went in without inquiry, her father following. Gene rose to go. "Please stay," Marny entreated. "I need you to help me fight."

"No," he denied, although his eyes caressed her. "It's a fight you'll have to make alone with them. It's the only way you'll ever really find happiness, Marny, dear. You know I'd make it for you if it were the only way, but it isn't, and, if you love me enough, you'll make it. If you don't——"

"I'll telephone you."

"Not unless you're coming."

She watched his going with a pretense of gayety, but with real fear tugging at her nerves. How was she going to tell them? What would they do without her? Stella hadn't the temperament or Grace the strength to manage the household. Was it fair to leave them? After all, they were her people, her first duty. But were they? Nothing but the realization, as she watched Gene's back, that he would not return to her unless she went into hell for his happiness and her own steeled her to action.

Her knees trembled as she went into the

THE OTHER DAY

Off for Chinatown, but Not Very Fast

By Donald Ogden Stewart

IN Alexander Woollcott's well written and interesting "Life of Roger Wolfe Kahn" there occurs a sentence (or perhaps it is a chapter heading) which might well serve as a keynote for the present installment of this series, and if I could only remember what that sentence was I should certainly quote it here. But unfortunately my memory, like the Irishman who was asked if he could play the fiddle, is "all too short," and I must content myself with quoting the same idea in my own inadequate style by saying simply that "no trip to New York is complete without a visit to Chinatown."

And so one evening, as my wife and I were walking down Broadway on the second or third day of our wedding journey, those lines occurred to me and I repeated them.

I can well remember her response. It was, "What?"

I pointed to a large autobus which was standing beside the curb. Gay Chinese lanterns hung around the top like a lawn fête, and a hard working, perspiring fat man was shouting through a megaphone that they were "just leaving."

"They're just leaving," I said.

"For where?" she asked, in place of the conventional "Whither?"

"For Chinatown," I replied, "a whiff of the orient with its gay bazaars, its opium dens——"

She shook her head.

"I don't like opium," she said. "It makes me sick."

"You don't have to smoke it," I argued. "You can watch other people smoke it."

"Who?" she asked. "You?"

I smiled in a superior manner.

"I might try it," I said, "just for the experience."

My wife looked doubtful.

"Watching you get sick," she stated, "wouldn't be much more fun than getting sick myself."

"But just think, dear," I argued, "what it means to us—this opportunity to come in contact with another people—to view the manners and habits of an altogether different race."

"We can always go to 'Abie's Irish Rose,'" she countered.

Suddenly the fat man with the megaphone spied us.

"Hurry—hurry—hurry," he called.

"Come on," I urged. "It oughtn't to take long. They're just leaving——"

I took her by the arm and we pushed our way through the shuffling sidewalk crowds until we reached the curb. The fat man helped us into our seats. Panting, but triumphant, I sat down.

"Well, we made it," I said.

The gentleman beside me on the seat, who seemed to be asleep, opened one eye.

"Good," he said, and went back to sleep.

It was a little disconcerting. Behind us, on the rear seat, were two old ladies and a gentleman, and they, too, seemed to have their eyes closed. A man in front of us, with a bald head, was breathing regularly, with his chin sunk on his chest.

"Hurry—hurry—hurry," called the fat man through his megaphone. "We're just leaving."

We waited. I read the advertising signs and then I read them again.

"Well, we made it," said my wife, with a faint laugh.

"Sh!" I cautioned. "You'll wake everybody up."

My warning came too late. The bald man sat up slowly and looked around. Then he began to rub his eyes. Finally he observed us and frowned.

"When did you get on?" he asked.

"This evening," I replied.

He yawned.

"What is today?" he asked.

"Tuesday," I replied.

"Gosh, how time flies!" he remarked, and with that his eyes slowly closed once more and his regular breathing recommenced.

The gentleman opened one eye.

"Hurry—hurry—hurry," came the steady cry from outside.

"If I only had something to read!" said my wife after a while.

I poked aside a Chinese lantern and leaned out under the awning.

"Anything wrong, brother?" asked the fat man from the sidewalk.

"No," I replied, "I was just wondering when we were going to start."

"We're just leaving," he said.

"I know it," I continued, "and I was wondering if maybe I hadn't better cancel my room at the hotel for tonight."

He hesitated a minute and then replied.

"I wouldn't do that, brother," he said. "It's merely a question of getting one or two more passengers—and then we're off."

A CROWD of young boys and girls went swirling past. He grabbed hurriedly for his megaphone and called after them.

"Hurry—hurry—hurry," he yelled. "We're just leaving." I waited until he had finished. Then I spoke again.

"Well, I wonder," I said, "if I would have time to step out and buy something to read?"

He frowned. Then he pulled out a large watch attached to a leather fob from his pocket and looked at it.

"Could you be back by seven o'clock?" he asked.

"Tomorrow morning?" I inquired. "Certainly."

"No," he said. "Tonight."

I looked at my own watch.

"That's going to be kind of hard," I stated, "on account of its already being 9:15."

He gazed at his watch once more and then held it to his ear. Then he shook it.

"I guess it's stopped," he remarked, and with that he began hitting it against the curb. On the fourth try the watch suddenly burst open and scattered in all directions, leaving him squatting there and gazing at the stem, which he still held in his chubby fist.

"Isn't that always the way?" he remarked.

I climbed down to the sidewalk and helped him find the scattered fragments. He put the handful of wheels and springs carefully in the pocket of his trousers and they immediately dropped through a hole, down inside his trouser's leg, and on to the sidewalk.

"If it isn't one thing," he said, "it's another."

We gathered up what was left.

"That watch belongs to my old man," he remarked, "but it never kept very good time."

I dusted off my knees.

"My father had a watch too," I said, "and it used to lose three minutes every week."

"It's a small world," he remarked.

"Isn't it?" I replied. "For instance—here we are at the corner of Broadway and 42d street—and in two or three days we'll be away down in Chinatown."

"O, it won't take that long," he said. "We'll be starting any minute now."

"You don't, by any chance, want to bet on that, do you?" I asked.

"All we need," he replied, "is a couple more passengers. That's what's been holding us back," he added, "since day before yesterday."

I looked up at the six people on the seats.

"Have they had anything to eat?" I asked.

"O, sure," he replied. "They go out for their meals."

I was struck with a sudden idea.

"Wait a minute," I said. "I think I can do something."

"All right, brother," he said.

He picked up his megaphone and as I rushed across the street and into a drug store I was followed by the familiar cry of "Hurry—hurry—hurry—we're just leaving, folks."

"Where's the telephone?" I asked.

The clerk directed me, and I changed a dollar into nickels. Then I began.

The first person I tried was an old friend of mine named Reggie Field. I had known Reg since prep school days and I had always felt that if I were ever in trouble he would help me.

"Hello, Reg," I said. "This is Don Stewart."

"Who?" was the reply.

"Don Stewart," I repeated. "Don't you remember—we were at Exeter together?"

"I see," was the answer. "Well, I'm afraid that you have the wrong number."

"Doesn't Reginald Field live there?" I asked.

"A Mr. Field used to live here," was the response, in evenly measured tones, "but not for the last eight months. This is the Reverend Samuel Walters speaking."

"O," I replied. "Well, look—Dr. Walters—are you doing anything this evening?"

"Just what do you mean?" was the question.

"Well, it's like this," I began to explain. "Have you ever been to Chinatown?"

"No," was the answer. "I don't believe that I have. At least, not recently."

"Fine," I said. "And then we can count on you?"

"For what, may I ask?"

"For a seventh," I said. "We only need two more now. Can you suggest anybody? How about Mrs. Walters?"

"Mrs. Walters died eight years ago last March," was the answer.

"O, I'm sorry," I said.

"So am I," said Dr. Walters.

"Well, anyway——" I began.

I was interrupted by a tugging at my sleeve. It was my wife.

"Hurry up," she said. "He's got somebody. We're waiting for you."

I made haste to explain to Dr. Walters.

"I'm sorry to have bothered you," I said, "and perhaps some other time——"

"That would be very agreeable," he replied. "Was there anything else?"

"No, thank you," I said. "Good night."

"Good night," he replied, and hung up.

"The poor old fellow," I said. "He sounded very lonely."

"Please hurry," said my wife.

We ran out of the drug store and across the street, with the nickels jingling in my pocket. The fat man greeted us and helped us to our seats. The driver climbed down and began to crank the motor. At the first explosion in the exhaust the bald man in front of us and the gentleman beside me slowly opened their eyes.

"My God!" said the bald man.

The driver climbed aboard and shifted his gears. Then he let in his clutch, and with a jerk we started. This woke up the three elderly people on the rear seat, and in a few minutes we were well on our way.

house and in the living room faced her father, and Grace, and Stella.

"I'M going to be married," she told them, her back to the wall.

"Married?" Stella's shriek and Grace's trill rose in duet.

"For the love of Pete!" her father ejaculated. "Who on earth——"

"Not Gene?" Grace cried.

"Gene."

"Well, it's about time you two decided to do it," Stella thrust in.

"But what'll we do without you?" Grace moaned. "You know that I'm not strong enough to run this house, and Stella——"

"There's no reason why Stella should have to," her father declared. "Marny and Gene can come right here to live."

"If you take my advice," Stella began, "you won't——"

"I don't want any one's advice." She could feel the ring of old circumstance closing in upon her again. "I only want the chance the rest of you have had. Gene and I are going to live in our own house. If we fight, we're going to settle it there. If I get sick, I'll stay there. I'm not going to impose on any one else, and all that I'm asking of any of you is that you'll let me alone in the few days I'm going to be with you."

"Few days?" Her father caught at the tangible angle of her hysterical protest. "You don't mean that you're rushing off into this marriage?"

"Rushing? After ten years? No, I wouldn't call it that, but I'm going to marry Gene this week."

"Marny, you can't!" Grace flung at her. "You can't be married until Stella comes home from abroad."

"I'm not going abroad."

"Not going?" Tracy's interest in Marny's news went down before amazement in Stella's. "What's the matter? What's happened?"

"Well, I've told Herb that I——"

"Herb!" he snorted. "You promised Helen that——"

"Why can't Marny and Gene take her to Paris and leave her there while they——"

"We're not going to Paris."

"Do you really mean," Grace thrust at Stella, "that you're not going with Helen? Because, if you're not, father could send me, and you can keep house for him while——"

"You know perfectly well that I won't stay here unless Herb can come home, and father says he won't."

"Why can't you and Herb get an apartment for the summer, and Marny can wait till I come home before——"

"I told you," Marny said steadily, "that I am going to marry Gene this week. I don't care what else you do, but you aren't going to change that." Tightly, as if it were her spar for salvation, she clung to the resolve. "For years and years I've thought of all of you before I thought of myself. Now I'm through."

"You're selfish," Grace sobbed, "hideously self-ish." She sank into the nearest chair. "You know I'm not strong."

"It's Marny's unselfishness," Stella cut in, "that's been the trouble with her—and us. We've imposed on her, and cheated her, but we didn't mean it, Marny dear." Behind her gleaming eyeglasses sudden tears shone in her blue eyes. "We're just like the rest of the world, every man for himself. You haven't been. Maybe you'll have a better chance of happiness because of it. I hope so." She came over to put her arm around Marny. "I don't know how we're going to get on without you, but we'll manage somehow."

"O, Stella!" She clung to her gratefully.

"Well, if Stella feels that way about it," her father conceded, "I suppose we'll have to make the best of it. Not this week, though!"

"It's all very well for the rest of you," Grace wept, "but I'd like to know what I'll do in this house without Marny. Perhaps, though, if I could get stronger by a trip, and went with Helen——"

"There's no need of Helen going if her mother won't," Tracy trumpeted.

"I promised her, father."

"Then you'll have to take her."

"But if Grace——"

"Settle it between yourselves."

"We shall." There was grimness around Stella's mouth, but her eyes were soft as she led Marny from living room to hall. "I suppose," she said slowly, pausing at the foot of the stairway, "that you won't think I'm much of a counsel, Marny. Marriage hasn't been any level road for Herb and me. It's pretty much of a see-saw. I'm not sorry, though, that I married him. I'd marry him again tomorrow. That's why I'm glad for you that you're going to marry Gene. He loves you. He'll be good to you. You'll be happy, and you deserve it, Marny dear." She kissed her lightly, then started up the stairs. "Will you tell Maggie to have bacon for Lew's breakfast?" she called back.

"Marny," Grace queried from the other room, "will you telephone the drug store to send over the tonic Dr. Marston told us about?"

"All right," she told them both, but when she took up the receiver she dialed Gene's number. "I've done it," she half laughed, half sobbed into the mouthpiece.

"Good girl," his voice rang in relief. "Was it very hard?"

"It was so easy that——"

"That what?"

"That I don't see why I——"

"It's all in how you call the game," he laughed. "How about tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow? O, I can't!"

"At ten."

"Eleven."

"Dearest!"

"Dear!"

She hung up the receiver, glancing guiltily in to where her father and Grace lingered. They were playing pinochle, paying not the slightest heed to her. She ran up the stairs swiftly.

"Tomorrow," her heart sang wildly, but, as she looked back from the top of the stairs, she felt the surgings of remembrance of the childhood and youth which had been hers in this big old house, and knew that, no matter what the tomorrows might bring, no matter what the past had taken, she would be leaving some part of her love, of her soul, of herself, in pawn to the rest of the turbulent Tracys.

THE ROMANCE OF NIKKO CHEYNE — by Roland Pertwee

THE STORY RUNS THUS:

NIKKO CHEYNE, nephew and heir of Baron Cheyne of Querne, goes to Paris to study art. He soon discovers he is a failure with the brush. Princess Natalie, 16-year-old heir apparent to the throne of Sciriel, studies incognito at the school of Mlle. Suresme. Natalie is the only child of Prince Carelon, brother of King Raymond of Sciriel. During a lecture tour of the Louvre she encounters Nikko. With both it is love at first sight. Natalie gives Nikko her address and one of her names, Elizabeta. Nikko chucks art for the quest of love. He gains the roof of the school by a dangerous leap from an adjoining tree and pays court to Natalie there. He is arrested by a gendarme following a tryst and goes to the lockup as a burglar rather than implicate Natalie. Baron Vilasto, chamberlain to the household of Prince Carelon, gains Nikko's release, persuades the lovers they must part, and takes the princess back to Sciriel. Crushed, Nikko joins the Foreign Legion and exists seven years under its horrors. Meanwhile his uncle has died and Nikko succeeds to the title and the estate. Contemptuous of fortune, Nikko gives management of the estate to James K. Fladgate, American lawyer. Fladgate is father of Veronica, a former schoolmate of Natalie's, now married to Joris Howard, an Englishman.

INSTALLMENT V.

A Little World Tumbles.

SO began months when Nikko was continually en cellule for increasing periods. Discipline must be maintained, and he had no one but himself to blame for what was happening, but this did not help him to avoid trouble. The cells with their humiliations and discomfort offered relief against the deadly monotony which every day oppressed him more and more.

A yearning for a break—for something different to happen—was ever present in his mind. He became curious about that other world, the world he used to know and to which for seven years he had become a stranger. He longed for new faces—new voices—another kind of conflict. He wished he had not forbidden Fladgate to write. A letter would have been an event to him who had received no letter of any kind for seven years.

And before him were another three years of service—with the same things happening—the same faces, the same noisy, wine guzzling nights and time table days.

It was when his thoughts looked forward that the cafard—the madness of the Legion—transformed Nikko Cheyne into a different being—a crazy care-not-what breaker of rules and of men's heads.

But none cared. Sooner or later, the cafard took each man in its grip. It was a specter that rose and waned and rose again. It was inevitable—recurring like the desert marches—the wretched streets of Sidi-bel-Abbes, the eternal astiquage—the cheap Algerian wine—the hired women of the Kasbah—the regimental band—the bugle notes—the cursing of N. C. O.'s—rattling of tins—grunts of sleepers in the barrack room at night, and all the mass of details and parades that went to the making of the Foreign Legion.

On an afternoon in the early spring of nineteen twenty-one, Nikko Cheyne, with a group of his comrades, was loafing near the guard room, when a batch of recruits under the charge of a sergeant and two corporals shuffled through the barrack gates.

To Nikko there was something pathetic about the arrival of these scared, ignorant creatures. Dirty, ill-kept and tousled, with the fear of strange places in their eyes, their faces gray with the grime of travel—their civilian clothes crumpled and tattered—herded like cattle for the slaughter, these men of alien races, refugees from justice, scourings from cities and down-and-outers, presented objects for sympathy rather than targets for abuse.

The sergeant halted and brought them into line, looked them over and, laying his hands on the pit of his stomach, rocked to and fro like a man about to be overcome by nausea.

"O, filth and children of unwedded parents," he cried. "Is the Legion to be defiled with the bodies of such sacred pigs?" Then to one of the corporals, "Take away these lice."

The old ritual. Accompanied by jeers from the trained soldiers, the awkward squad was marched off to be scrubbed, uniformed and absorbed into the great machine. They were a miserable company, a poor lot, save for one neat little chap who stood smiling under the barrage of abuse, and who, despite the deplorable condition of his clothes, carried his head high and walked with a swagger. For want of better occupation, Nikko followed in the dust of the retreating squad and presently found himself alongside the little man in the lavabo, where, before assuming the uniform of the Legion, a recruit must scrub himself from head to foot.

"What's your name," he asked, "or rather what name do you call yourself?"

The little man smiled through a froth of soap.

"Mekla. It is my own name, monsieur."

"Then you were a fool to come here," said Nikko.

Mekla shrugged his shoulders.

"Maybe, monsieur. But is it not said that the Legion is the refuge of losers?"

He spoke in French, but with an odd un-Gallic inflection.

"Wash! Do not talk, pig!" shouted the N. C. O. in charge.

"He is washing," said Nikko, in that new coldly insolent tone that was the foundation of so many of his troubles.

The N. C. O. scowled.

"I did not speak to you, Travailleur—get out of this."

It would have been open insubordination to disobey.

"I'll wait for you outside," said Nikko. "The first few days are the worst—for there is no latitude for ignorance."

"Did you hear my orders, Travailleur?"

"Monsieur le Caporal has the finest voice in the Legion," said Nikko, who saluted and went out.

CHANCE decreed that Mekla was allotted the next bed to Nikko's, a circumstance for which he had good reason to be grateful. Nikko instructed him in the all-important businesses of folding his uniforms to the correct elbow to finger tip lengths and arranging his paquetage on the shelf above the bed. Also he gave him information of a value beyond price. A "bleu" is entirely dependent upon what he can pick up from the old soldiers, for without that he would inevitably transgress the iron rules of the Legion and bring down upon his head the vials of wrath.

Mekla was swift to learn and ready with his gratitude.

"I had not looked to find such kindness," said he. "Monsieur is indeed most generous."

In a barrack room such speeches are rare. What he said was overheard by one Frojard, a thickset, turgid minded Walloon to whom all forms of nicety were abhorrent.

"Father of snakes," he cried, "what daintiness is this that talks with the pretty accents of a——" the rest of the sentence is better left out. Then seizing Mekla by the collar and the seat of his pants, he hoisted him into the air. "A nosegay for some one! Who wants it?"

Without hesitation Nikko drove his fist home in Frojard's solar plexus. There was a whine of escaping breath and Frojard collapsed, dropping Mekla heavily to the floor.

The little man swiftly regained his feet and turned reproachfully to Nikko.

"Monsieur, I beg that you let me fight my own battles," and, leaning forward, he struck Frojard in the mouth with an open hand.

The big Walloon was so surprised that he made no effort to get up, but sat gaping goggle-eyed from Mekla to Nikko and back again.

"Name of a sow, what does the fool mean by that?" he demanded.

"That I shall be charmed to cross swords with you at any place or time you may be pleased to name."

From the room broke loose a great guffaw.

"Is that so funny?" demanded Mekla. "In my country a challenge is accepted before it is laughed at."

"Gee! Here's a spitfire," said a lanky American, "and durn me if he doesn't mean business."

TEMPTING MENUS FOR THE WEEK by Jane Eddington

February's Foods and Feasts

IN February we celebrate two patriotic birthdays which give us an opportunity to specialize in making all-American menus. Any time is a good time to learn what are our food specialties, and if we are not prepared now it is an excellent time to begin to get ready for the menus we may have one year from now. Between these two patriotic occasions comes St. Valentine's day, when we have an opportunity to cater to one of the oldest of institutions, and for that most mischievous of children—namely: Dan Cupid.

Seizing the opportunity that the patriotic occasions give us, we should study the gastronomic map of these United States, which has changed vastly in a century, although the old map as well as the new one is mighty interesting. We might specialize on epicurean Baltimore, since this is the month when oysters are the fattest and most dependable, and we might refer to Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes to find out about the supremacy oysters have had in Baltimore, which city has also been noted for its terrapin and canvasback duck. In fact, this town once held, more or less undisputed, its title as the gastronomic capital of America.

On the new map we find Texas onions, as well as turkeys, whereas Bermuda once furnished us with these sweetest lilies for our salad bowls and for boiling and buttering. Washington state now gives us marvels in apples, Oregon the most wonderfully large prunes, Oklahoma the sweetest pecans ever, and California and Florida furnish us with too many luxuries for our enumeration.

But as to February's specialties, we have to note that Dame Partlet begins to distinguish herself sometime in this month in preparation for the great Easter egg season. Shad, but not those famous ones of the Connecticut river, begin to present their extravagant selves in our markets, and the finest and most sweetly odored smelts come in late February, alas, to a not too appreciative people. Fresh Spanish mackerel in fine tone may soon lend romantic suggestion to our menus, and soft-shelled crabs invite our attention. And the "sweet" waters, as the French call fresh water of lakes and streams, offer some peculiarly national items for the pan. February is really a most special month, gastronomically.

There had been something very convincing in Mekla's tone.

Nikko Cheyne put a hand on his shoulder.

"We don't fight with swords in the Legion," said he. "For one thing we have none, and for another it isn't done."

"No," said Frojard, "but it will give me astounding joy to tear out your tripes."

And he rose, drawing back his sleeves significantly.

Nikko Cheyne spoke:

"Frojard, there isn't going to be a fight—but if there is, there will be two."

"Out of my way, Travailleur."

"You know me, Frojard."

Mekla pressed forward eagerly.

"I beseech you to allow me to spit this vermin after the custom of my people—doubtless I could make shift to do it with a bayonet."

There was another gust of laughter and some shouts of approval. Pluck and spirit rank high in the opinion of the Legion.

The American ranged up beside Nikko.

"Travailleur has said it," he announced. "This fight is off."

Then turning to Mekla, with a grin that spread from ear to ear, he demanded:

"Say, what little dovecote d'you hail from where they go flashing steel about this way?"

Nikko translated.

"I am from Sciriel," said Mekla.

Nikko Cheyne sat down on the bed with his eyes wide open.

NIKKO and Mekla sat together at a café table in Sidi-bel-Abbes with a Pinaud, a bottle of wine between them.

"Now," said Nikko, "talk. Tell me about your country—why you are here—everything. In asking this I am defying every principle of the Legion, but, O, Mekla, there are a million questions you may be able to answer! It's something beyond curiosity forces me to ask you."

"But I am willing enough to talk, monsieur, why not—but what interest——?"

Nikko waved the objection aside.

"Is it my personal history?"

"No."

"Then it is news of Sciriel you desire."

Nikko nodded.

"Yes, to know that all is well with it."

Mekla shook his head.

"All is not well or I would not be here."

Nikko moved uneasily.

"You came into the war," he said, "toward the end."

"We fought with the allies. Lost many men—men we could ill afford to lose—for our population is small, monsieur. As a result, much of our cultivated land reverted to the wild. That started discontent and grumbling. It was this way, monsieur. While the war lasted we had given protection and accommodation to the retreating armies of one of our greater neighbors. It is not for the host to complain of the manners of his guests, but these guests were too numerous for our household—they sapped its resources, and when supplies ran low and there was a food shortage they seized in bulk much that was needed for the maintenance of our civil population. Nor was this all. They spread seditious talk abroad of a kind that prospers well among persons whose bellies are empty.

"When the armistice was signed and our own troops returned, it was to a country frowing with discontent and unrest. There was almost a famine. Many of our guests, as I call them by courtesy, did not return to their own places, but stayed in Sciriel and would not be moved. Presently other and more dangerous strangers drifted in from the near east. Men whose mouths were full of talk of a great democracy, of the glories of a commune, of the triumphs of bolshevism.

"Monsieur, we Sciriens are a simple and a loyal race—but even the stoutest loyalty is shaken by hunger and insidious promises. Grumbling against the royal house and its rule, faintly whispered at the first, grew

Measuring Spoon

The housewife's measuring spoon and Calumet Baking Powder safeguard every baking recipe.

As the balanced ration is the key to proper feeding, so too, is balanced leavening the key to successful baking.

Every ingredient used in any recipe is raised to its full nutritional value by the magic-like leavening of Calumet.

Calumet is double acting. That means, it has two leavening units; one begins to work when the dough is mixed, the other waits for the heat of the oven; then both units work together.

AND AGAIN CRÊPES ARE TRUMPS

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—We might call it the George-ettian age instead of the Georgian. And so long has this material, georgette, been extending its sway over fashions that one can easily refer to the reign of Georgette CV.

It is really a phenomenon how this fabric, so lacking in any specular qualities, has been able to establish its empire. I remember that away back last March a friend of mine said to me, "Why don't you get a georgette dinner dress? They're going to wear them a great deal this year." Well, here it is the following winter and my friend, a business woman who makes several annual trips to Paris, hasn't changed her conversation any more than has Polly in her cage. She is still guiding the world of women to wear georgette.

As a matter of fact, the mid-season models have again demonstrated the popularity of the chiffonic material. What is more, the dynasty is unshaken by the clock. It is powerful morning, noon, and night. One comes under its dominion the first thing in the morning when one arises to don a jumper sports frock; one is conscious of the scepter in the afternoon when it is time to sally forth to the bridge game; one bends the knee to georgette again when it comes to the dance frock. As to the sleeping raiment carried out in georgette, we need not even touch upon that.

Of course, although georgette is the Napoleon of the House of Crêpe, it seems to have placed all its little brothers and sisters upon thrones. All of the silk crêpes are good.

Look over the reigning house and you will notice that it has acquired some new mannerisms. All of these center about an elaborate amount of handwork. As a matter of fact, these "simple" crêpes take as much out of you as a guest towel. Both compensate for a stingy little piece of material and a perfectly straight cut by a whole lot of needlework.

Yes, they are hand-tooled, the georgettes and other crêpes. Whether they occur in sports or evening models, they are diversified by hand-tucking, drawnwork, insets, and appliques. Of these, plaits are by far the most active member. With many of the famous Paris couturiers plaits have, in fact, entirely snuffed out any interest in tiers.

Some inkling of what is going on in the great world of plaits and tucks may be gained from the above group of simple afternoon frocks. Is it not significant that four out of five of these are of crêpes and that each of the quartet relies upon plaits for style fulfillment?

Let us start with the model at the left. Here is just the sort of smart little frock which the average woman needs to revive that flagging wardrobe. (For it's really true that, as a friend of mine expresses it, the clothes one buys in September commence to look so tired in February.)

This occurs in—O, yes, it is in georgette. But that isn't all, for it's in almond green. The tint is awfully significant, for a whole lot of green frocks, both daytime and evening models, are coming out just now. With Patou, for example, these "salad days" are most pronounced. This luminary of fashion slights even the popular blue for a range of verdancy, including almond, soft yellow green, and pale olive. In fact, chez Patou, the reigning House of Crêpe, is become the reigning greenhouse of crêpe.

This is really bad news for most of us. For any shade of green demands one of those old fashioned alabaster skins, and it is most successful when the alabaster skin is allied with Titian or golden yellow locks.

Whatever the color, the fashion interest of this frock is unassailable. Such interest is founded upon a telling combination of plaits and of drawnwork motifs. And, by the way, although the artist does not indicate it in the back view of this frock, those motifs occur all over the model.

The plaited sections are of self-color and self-material, and the section on the bodice provides an avenue for the one touch of color contrast—a bow of silver ribbon. Sometimes this kind of decoration is limited to a small area, one where it demonstrates that, however sparing may be your use of hemstitching, it is always telling. A good example of this is furnished by our standing model in the center of the page. Here is a model of café au lait georgette which limits its hand stitching to the narrow band placed inside the square neckline.

For the rest, this frock proves all that one may say of the importance of tucking—and more. Its sleeves and bodice are tucked horizontally to contrast with a double girdle of self-fabric tucked vertically. As to the narrow inset panels—two in front and two in back—these revert to the horizontal form.

In the model at the extreme right finely tucked bands of self-material are again reliable sources of style. Nothing could be more thoroughly in the spirit of the times than this crêpe de chine frock with its three inverted plaits down the front of the skirt, conspiring with the plaited bands of self-material. For, of course, they are given to mixing up two or three kinds of plaits in the same frock, as, for example, in one imported crêpe model where the skirt is divided between box plaits and sections given over to fine horizontal tucking.

Before passing from this model please heed the fact that its two lower bands of plaited material curve around to the back to meet two inverted plaits. Also, that collar and cuffs are of finely plaited self-material. Finally, that this model is developed originally in dull rust red georgette.

Blue is going on as constantly as ever. Second from the left we show a model of crêpe de chine in the familiar ciel tint. This, too, retains a suggestion of tucking, although it is confined to the yoke-like effect at the top of the bodice. The skirt of this model is draped, and fastened with a silver buckle. The most arresting feature, however, consists of cape-like draperies which have lost their way. For, instead of functioning at the back, these draperies ripple down the side fronts. The flower is of self-material.

[Copyright: 1927: By the Chicago Tribune.]

A combination of finely plaited section of self-material and an all-over design of drawnwork makes the charm of the georgette model in almond green shown at the extreme right.

Second, a ciel blue crepe de chine is distinguished by a draped skirt, a tucked yoke effect and two shoulder draperies.

In the center a cafe au lait georgette is eloquent of the use of plaits and of the final distinction that may be bestowed by a hemstitched band below the square neck line.

Three petal-shaped front panels edged with russet lace, a sash of self-material and a bolero effect are the outstanding features of a beige chiffon model sketched second from the extreme right.

Last, a rust-colored georgette allies inverted plaits with finely tucked bands of self-material.

Seven New Suggestions for Breakfast from

Ida Bailey Allen's New Book

"THE MODERN METHOD OF PREPARING DELIGHTFUL FOODS"

PROBABLY no meal is more of a problem to a woman than breakfast. With a limited variety of dishes to serve, breakfast may easily become monotonous. For this reason, the makers of Mazola have had Ida Bailey Allen include over 50 new ideas for a breakfast change in her new book—"The Modern Method of Preparing Delightful Foods"—seven of which are offered on this page.

These recipes have been prepared by a woman who has made cooking her life work—each recipe has back of it the assurance of perfect results, providing, of course, it is followed accurately, as given and with Mazola and the other products mentioned. In the panel, center of page, are a few brief remarks regarding Mazola which explains the desirability of using this pure vegetable oil.

NOTE: These recipes have been selected from Mrs. Allen's New Book of 112 pages containing over 275 unusual suggestions for preparing tempting dishes. This valuable book, bound in durable board covers, will be sent post paid for ten cents—a price which does not cover the cost of production even in large quantity lots. It is the desire, however, of the makers of Mazola that every housewife have a copy—hence the low price of 10 cents. Please use coupon below.

BAKED OMELET SOUFFLE

4 eggs — ½ tablespoon Argo or Kingsford's Cornstarch
3 tablespoons hot water — 1 tablespoon Mazola
½ teaspoon salt — ½ teaspoon pepper

Heat the Mazola in a quart-sized baking dish, rubbing the sides with the hot oil. Separate the eggs, beat the whites stiff and the yolks till creamy. Add the cornstarch, water and seasonings, fold in the whites, transfer to the heated baking dish and bake twelve to fifteen minutes in a hot oven, 375 degrees F.

CODFISH OMELET

2 cups hot mashed potato — 2 eggs, separated
1 cup shredded codfish, scalded and drained — Pepper to taste — 1 tablespoon Mazola

Combine the codfish and potato with the egg yolks beaten light. Fold in the egg whites and spread in a medium-sized frying pan in which the Mazola has been heated. Make the mixture quite thin, cook until well browned, fold over, slide onto a platter and garnish with parsley. This is particularly good served with Fried Tomatoes or Spanish Sauce.

CORNED BEEF HASH AU GRATIN

2 cups chopped corned beef — Milk to moisten
2 cups chopped cooked potatoes — Mazola — Coarse bread crumbs
1 small onion put through food chopper

Combine the corned beef, potatoes and onion, or use one cup of potato, a second of chopped beets, carrots or cabbage that may be left over. Pour in enough milk to bind the mixture together and season to taste with salt and pepper. Thoroughly oil muffin pans with Mazola and dust with coarse bread crumbs. Pack in the hash, cover with coarse crumbs moistened with Mazola and bake in a hot oven, 375 degrees F.

ISN'T it a pleasant thought to know that Mazola is as good to eat as the fully-ripened golden corn from which it comes? In other words, Mazola is an absolutely pure vegetable oil—preferred by modern housewives because foods fried in it are greaseless—because it is equal in richness to butter for shortening—because there is no finer oil for salad dressings regardless of price—and finally because it is economical and efficient—all three uses—frying, shortening and salad dressings from a single can.

CODFISH BALLS

3 cups hot mashed potato — 1 egg
1 teaspoon onion juice — Salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon minced parsley (optional) — Fine dry crumbs — Mazola
1 cup shredded codfish — White or Spanish sauce

Scald the codfish and drain thoroughly. Then beat into the potato with the seasonings and the egg yolk. Cool, form into balls, roll in fine dry crumbs, then in the egg white slightly beaten and diluted with one-third cup milk. Roll again in fine dry crumbs, place in a frying basket and fry in deep fat, using enough Mazola to half fill the kettle. It should be hot enough to brown a bit of bread in forty counts, 375 degrees F. Drain on crumpled paper and serve with the sauce.

BROWNED PAN FISH

Dress the fish and dust with salt and pepper. Roll in fine dry crumbs to which a little Argo or Kingsford's Cornstarch has been added—one tablespoon to a cup of crumbs. Pour enough Mazola in a medium-sized frying pan to barely cover the bottom and saute the fish in this, first on one side, then the other, taking care that they do not brown too rapidly. It should take about eight minutes for small fish like perch. Serve with a garnish of sliced lemon, water cress, or radish roses.

CREAMED DRIED BEEF

¼ pound dried beef — 2 tablespoons Argo or Kingsford's Cornstarch
2 tablespoons Mazola — Pepper and salt to taste
1 pint milk

Coarsely shred the dried beef. Scald it and place in a small frying pan with the Mazola. Cook two or three minutes until it looks dry. Add the cornstarch and gradually the milk. Stir until boiling, season, and serve on toast, on split tea biscuits or with mashed or baked potatoes

EGGS SCRAMBLED WITH CROUTONS

1 cup small cubes white bread — ¼ tablespoon Argo or Kingsford's Cornstarch
2 tablespoons Mazola
4 eggs — ¼ cup milk
¾ teaspoon salt — ⅛ teaspoon pepper

Fry the bread in the Mazola until slightly brown. Add the eggs beaten, and combine with the milk, cornstarch and seasonings, and "scramble" slowly, allowing the mixture to coagulate a little before scraping it from the bottom of the pan. The cornstarch will make a very velvety texture and the eggs will go further this way.

louder day by day. At last it was no longer safe for the old king to ride in the streets of Djevo, the capital."

Nikko's hand was pressed tightly over his mouth.

"In the autumn of last year the harvest failed—utterly. Monsieur, who does not know my country, will hardly realise the significance of that calamity. The nation lost its head—its ruler was powerless to control the situation. Our treasury, depleted by the cost of war, was unequal to the demands laid upon it. It is no simple matter for a country that for a generation has been entirely self-supporting to import from other nations the huge supplies that we suddenly needed. Besides, was there not a world shortage? Result, monsieur, chaos.

"And out of that chaos came what from time immemorial chaos has always produced — a man — one man — who rightly or wrongly captures the imagination of the people. Monsieur, no one knows whence came Foscani, the sleek one, the Smiler. One day he was unknown—the next day he was everything—and everywhere. Some say he is a Russian—others a Pole—it does not matter which. For my part I call him the creature of the moment. As if by magic he emerged—with a sudden force of five thousand hired mercenaries at his back—and as if by magic the whole country was in his grip."

Mekla stopped to gulp down the contents of his glass.

"Monsieur, has it ever been your lot to see Liberty at its work? I pray not. It is not a pretty sight. That Liberty may prosper, order, decency, and even life itself must be smashed and trampled down. We Sciriens are not used to dead women lying in the streets of Djevo. Perhaps we went mad because of that."

At the words "dead women" Nikko sat bolt upright, with trembling hands that shook the glasses on the table.

"I, myself, was present in the square when by Foscani's orders the king was hanged over the steps of the palace."

Struck Frojard in the mouth with an open hand.

NIKKO could stand no more.

"Princess Natalie," he cried, and again, "the Princess Natalie?"

Mekla looked at him strangely and shook his head.

"Not even the Smiler would dare to go to that length. Our Natalie is too well loved."

The sweat was glistening on Nikko's face. He took his head in his hands.

"Thank God for that!"

"Her father, Prince Carelon, who now should be king, was also spared—spared with some hundreds of noble gentlemen for work in the salt pits of Plevi." Suddenly Mekla rose to his feet. "Monsieur, I have been a royalist, devoted to the house of Montressor since infancy. Sciriel under any other rule is no longer my country. Wherefore—I have none—and——" he brushed his uniform with a swift comprehensive gesture.

For a long time neither spoke—then Nikko slowly lifted his head, and in his eyes burned a new and brilliant light.

"A republic," he muttered, "the royal house has fallen?"

Mekla nodded.

"To the ground, monsieur."

Nikko Cheyne smote the table a great blow with his first.

"I'm free," he cried. "Great God, I'm free!"

That evening, for the first time since he had joined the Legion, Nikko Cheyne's remoteness fell from him like a cloak. He was a man transformed—flung back to boyhood. He went a round of the cafés, standing drinks with a prodigality the like of which had never been known before. It was a mad night. A night of singing, of dancing, of fights. Seeing that this was no ordinary occasion, the civilian population kept discreetly behind locked doors.

Loudest among the singers was Nikko. He was everywhere—in and out of the crowded cafés, spreading the fire of his enthusiasm in twenty different points.

He had started the crazy pilgrimage with Mekla for company, but it was not long before others were recruited, and presently a great band of Legionnaires roaring old marching songs surged in his wake, sweeping all before them.

A night of nights! And a wonder it was there was wine enough in the town to moisten those song-hoarse, burning throats.

"If this is a cafard of the Travailleur's," they shouted, "by the saints it is of a pleasant kind."

The ingrained habit of obedience brought the revelers back to barracks at the summons of the bugle, but the guard at the gate tactfully avoided employing its usual vigilance as the men staggered through to their quarters. Even the most iron discipline is susceptible to elasticity. A collective spirit, no matter how harmonious its origin, is dangerous to meddle with. The word had been passed that a certain Legionnaire had opened at a certain café a deposit account of liquor for the benefit of thirsty N. C. O.'s. Wherefore the sentries on duty, in obedience to high command, kept their eyes discreetly lowered and were able to report, with truth, that they had "seen" nothing wrong.

Afterward this universal celebration came to be known as "the night when Sidi-bel-Abbes sang."

No one thought to ask the reason that inspired the Travailleur's sudden madness of hospitality. A man's motives, being the only things that remain private to him in the Legion, are held sacred. It sufficed that the frugality of their lives had for one evening been gloriously enlivened, and no one complained if in consequence next morning his tongue was starchy and his head throbbed.

Before the gaiety was at its height Nikko had scribbled some words on a telegraph form and given it with money to an old Arab, who, from time to time, rendered small services to Legionnaires and was to be trusted.

The message, addressed to James K. Fladgate, was brief and to the point.

"I must see you at once." It was signed "Nikko" and addressed to the Carlton hotel, London. "Please transmit."

The Arab promised to wire it first thing next morning, and Nikko, knowing the promise would be kept, abandoned himself to the madness of the night.

The fact that by the terms of his enlistment there were three more years before he could obtain his discharge did not deject Nikko. The reason which made him join the Legion no longer existed—therefore he would cut loose.

The Legion has a very effective system for preventing desertion. Not one man in a hundred succeeds in getting clear away. Those who fail in the attempt either fall victim to the Goums—desert Arabs employed by the French to round up and capture deserters dead or alive—or they go to a living death with the penal battalion at Biribi.

Nikko knew well enough what failure to escape would mean, but in his sudden new found joy there was no place for thoughts of failure.

Thus, although they knew it not, a hundred or more of his comrades in the Legion and a great number of N. C. O.'s were drinking success to the escape of Nikko Cheyne.

Nikko's conduct while waiting for the reply to his telegram was exemplary. That he contrived to make it so was the worst ordeal through which he had ever passed. Obsessed by thoughts of escape, it was intolerable to submit to the routine of daily duties. Knowing that of late he had become a marked man upon whom his superiors were ever ready to drop, he guarded his tongue and obeyed orders with an alacrity to which, since the war, he had been a stranger.

He did not dare to think too much of Bettany, but kept his mind solely focused upon the vital business of avoiding trouble. Terror, a sensation hitherto unknown to him, walked at his elbow that on the day when Flagate should arrive he would be confined to cells for the commission of some trivial offense.

Only once more he talked to Mekla about Sciriel, to ask if he knew aught of Baron Vilasto.

Mekla nodded.

"A very old man now, whose brain was turned to softness by the tragedy of the revolution."

"Mad?" Nikko queried.

Mekla shook his head.

"Not mad—say rather a child again. He lives in the house where the princess is a prisoner and is the sole member of her household allowed to move freely about the city."

"He was a great gentleman," said Nikko, with a tightness in his throat.

"Monsieur speaks truly. And now that great gentleman is a child who blinks and smiles foolishly at the sun."

"Mekla, how is the princess called these days?"

"By the name Montressor, monsieur."

"Montressor," Nikko repeated softly.

A bugle sounded.

Nikko was first to reach the barrack square and fall in beside the marker.

Just a week after he had sent his telegram, the room corporal fossed a letter to him. Nikko had schooled himself to conceal his feelings, but as the square of folded paper fluttered toward him his control snapped like a reed. Without a word of thanks he snatched it up and, clattering down the stairs, raced to the Cercle d'Enfer—the washing place—which at that hour of the day was deserted.

As he ran a freak of imagination sent his mind somersaulting back over a span of seven years and he was a boy again, racing with Bettany's first letter in search of solitude.

The letter was brief.

"I am waiting at the Hotel de Maroc. J. H."

The initials puzzled him. Illumination came. J. H. stood for Joris Howard, Fladgate's son-in-law. Veronica's husband. His old school friend.

Tingling with excitement, Nikko tore the note in small pieces and buried them. Then he returned to his quarters and changed hastily.

At the barrack gate the sergeant of the guard called on him to halt.

"Name of a dog—do you not read the orders?"

Nikko had buttoned his coat from left to right, instead of right to left in accordance with the order of the day.

"Get back to your quarters!"

It was vain to plead. Seething with rage, Nikko returned, rebuttoned his coat, and waited an hour before making a second attempt to pass out.

"If I'm stopped again," he muttered, "I'll go mad—I know I'll go mad."

But he was not stopped. The sergeant's attention had been diverted for the moment and Nikko slipped past the sentry unnoticed.

THE Hotel de Maroc was situated on the outskirts of the town. Before its doors was a large yellow car in which was seated a girl. It was Veronica.

Although he had only seen her once, and that seven years ago, Nikko instantly recognized her.

Shortening his step, he passed the car on the offside and without looking up said swiftly:

"Tell him to walk to that clump of trees by the broken wall."

Veronica started. Nikko passed on.

In the shade of the clump of trees, hidden by a tumbledown wall, he crouched and waited.

Footsteps approached—and a man's shadow spread across the sand at his feet. A voice said, "Cheyne."

"'Tisn't safe to talk here," said Nikko, rapidly. "We musn't be seen together."

"Skirt 'round the back of the hotel and hop in through the first window in the west wall."

"Right."

The footsteps retreated and died away. Nikko peered down the road. It was empty. Veronica was no longer in the car.

Nikko rose, returned by the way he had come, and dived up a narrow passage between the hotel and the next house.

There was no one in the garden, and with a sigh of satisfaction he vaulted the rail of a low verandah and swung his legs over the sill of an open window. Without looking to see who was in the room, he seized the shutters, drew them across the window, and snapped down the bar.

After the brilliant sunlight the room seemed unnaturally dark. Like ghosts two figures approached him and seized his hands, while a voice, in a soft, purring accent, crooned:

"If this isn't the loveliest meeting—I'd like to know what is."

It may have been the touch of a woman's hand—the sound of a woman's voice—the sudden unaccustomed experience of being once more with people of his own kind that robbed Nikko of the power of speech and put upon him a shyness and restraint he had never before known.

Veronica made him sit on the bed, and with swift intuition talked of this and that until an ease of their society began to steal through him.

"Father was back home," she announced, "and guessed after breaking so long a silence you wanted something to happen quick. He couldn't have made this place under three weeks, so he figured we'd better come right over."

"We were at Cannes," Joris cut in, "cruising 'round on Arbuthnot's yacht. The old man sent us a fifteen page cable saying I'd better shoot over and see you straight away."

"'Course he meant me to come, too," Veronica cut in. "So we ups and orders Teddy to set sail quick and lively."

Nikko stiffened.

"You came in the yacht?"

"Why, sure, and hired this little auto for the desert trip."

Nikko's hands were opening and shutting with excitement.

"Where is the yacht lying?"

"Oran," said Joris.

"Oran—bad spot for me," said Nikko, "but it can't be helped."

"You're not thinking of making a bolt for it?"

"I've gone beyond thinking."

Veronica clapped her hands.

"Didn't I say—didn't I? When we read that bit in the papers about the revolution in Sciriel—didn't I say?"

And suddenly Nikko realized that Sciriel was no longer a forbidden subject.

"You were right, Veronica."

"I'll say I was—and I'll say I wouldn't have thought much of you if I hadn't been."

"Wait a bit," said Joris. "'Tisn't as easy as it looks. Suppose you didn't pull it off, old friend—got yourself nabbed—and all that?"

Nikko laughed.

"I've a feeling no power on earth is going to stop me—now."

"And what's more," said Veronica, "no power on earth is going to stop us getting you aboard Teddy Arbuthnot's yacht."

Nikko looked into a pair of eyes that brimmed with fierce excitement.

"I half wish," he began, but Joris dropped a hand on his shoulder.

"No use, Cheyne, she would come. She isn't the kind of wife that gets left out."

Veronica smiled.

"It's been slow work," she said, "but I've got that great truth into his head at last. Give us the movement orders. What's the route—and when do we start?"

"Now," said Nikko, "for if I were to return to the Legion after this—I'd—I'd——"

"Fetch out that suitcase and a set of razors," said Veronica. "I'll go and see there's plenty of gas in the tank, while he guillotines that moustache and gets into Christian clothes."

THE big yellow car picked up a walking civilian outside the city of Sidi-bel-Abbes. After that it traveled at speed in the direction of Oran.

"It's unlikely that they'll notice my absence before morning," said Nikko, "but we won't linger and we won't stop on the road."

He pointed to a couple of white burnoused Arabs mounted on ponies who were riding against the skyline of a sandy ridge, and added:

"Goums! My dead body 'ud be worth twenty-five francs to those chaps."

Joris' foot went down on the accelerator.

Veronica's face was bright with excitement.

"Millionaires are cheap out here," she said. "I wouldn't have missed this little picnic for something."

"Millionaires?" Nikko echoed.

"As near as doesn't matter," then with an upward fling of the voice: "Good land! we never told him—he doesn't know. Father turned over your little pile to some effect. You can write your name against six figures when you've the fancy."

"That's true," Joris indorsed, over his shoulder. "The old man has done you proud, Cheyne. Lord knows how, but he did. Round about seven hundred and fifty thousand, I believe."

For a mile Nikko said nothing—while the realization of nearing freedom, of the wealth he would command and of the possibilities of the future, stirred and fomented in his brain.

"Faster," he said. "Won't it go faster?"

"We're running at fifty-eight—but I'll try and squeeze out another mile or two."

"You do," said Veronica, "for Nicholas Cheyne hasn't lived for seven years and feels it's about time he made a start."

There was no moon and night came on very dark. To be on the safe side Nikko curled himself up on the floorboards at Veronica's feet and was covered by a rug as they entered the silent streets of Oran. At the head of the main thoroughfare they were stopped by a patrol.

"From which direction have you come?" boomed out of the darkness.

Joris Howard replied in fluent French, to hide an ominous click from the back of the car.

"Did you see aught of a deserter from the Foreign Legion near the town of Sidi-bel-Abbes?"

"No, unless that would be a fellow in baggy breeches hauled at a rope end by a couple of mounted Arabs."

A grim laugh followed this ready improvisation.

"That will be him, sure enough, monsieur. The goums have him. Well, good-night."

"Nothing else I can tell you?" Joris inquired.

"Nothing. Good night, again."

Joris drove on. Over his shoulder he demanded:

"Veronica, you little mutt! What were you doing with that pistol?"

"I guess if necessity arose I was preparing to use it," she answered sweetly.

Nikko Cheyne under his covering of rugs kissed the point of a dusty shoe and counted himself privileged to do so.

When next the car stopped it was beside the quay.

"There's the yacht, Cheyne, at anchor."

Nikko peered through the darkness at the riding lights and nodded.

"Think you could swim out to her? There are sure to be gendarmes or officials on the jetty where the dinghy is moored."

"Of course I could."

"Then suppose you hide somewhere among all this gear and stuff. We'll return the car to the garage and then get back to the yacht. No good arriving there before us. The watch would be certain to spot you and kick up a shine. Soon as we get aboard I'll flash a lantern. There's a rope ladder on the port side. Understood?"

To Nikko, waiting at the edge of freedom for the signal to start, that half hour was an eternity. He curled down among a littter of rigging and fishermen's gear and strained unblinking eyes through the heavy darkness. The oily water below clucked decisively. Wavelets tap—tap—tapped against the stones of the pier like a mighty heart beating. From the native quarter of the town came the persistent throbbing of a drum and wail of a pipe that seemed to be blown by lips of despair. Then came another and more terrifying sound, the rasping footfalls of a patrol coming nearer and nearer, like the approach of fate itself. Voices spoke close to where he lay hidden. A match flared—a cigaret was lit—and the patrol passed on and out of hearing.

It seemed more like a day than half an hour before a new sound, the splash of oars, came to his ears, a woman's voice, sweet and full, rippled across the water. The words she sang were made beautiful by darkness, by distance, and by their significance—

"One more river—one more river to Jordan,
One more river—there's one more river to cross."

Filtering through the spars and rigging of sleeping ships, the old marching song sounded exquisite and rare. It died away like a breeze that stirs grass, and presently a light flashed. One—two—three.

Nikko Cheyne entered the water as silently as a rat, and ten minutes later stood dripping upon the white deck of a floating piece of England.

Her Hair Fairly SPARKLES Now!

The woman who knows what to do after waving her hair doesn't fear the effect of hot irons. Nor of frequent washings. A few drops of Danderine—on comb or towel—and the hair is soft and lustrous, and behaves beautifully.

A bit of Danderine rubbed lightly into the scalp, is the one sure way to dissolve every particle of dandruff. But a few drops more make a dressing that is simply marvelous. A sheen that rivals brilliantine, and no grease! Any permanent wave or water wave lasts much longer and looks much nicer when Danderine is used instead of water to "set" the wave.

Ask Your Druggist

Get a bottle of Danderine and start its benefits today. Every drugstore in America has it, for only 35c. For the finest dressing you could find, and the best aid to hair health yet discovered just try—

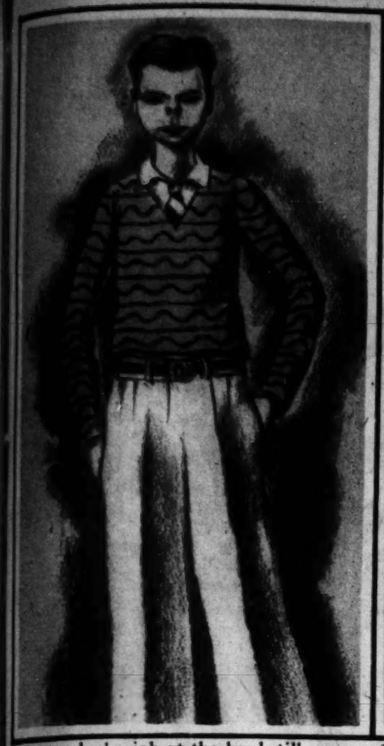
Our Little Theater Group

By W. E. HILL

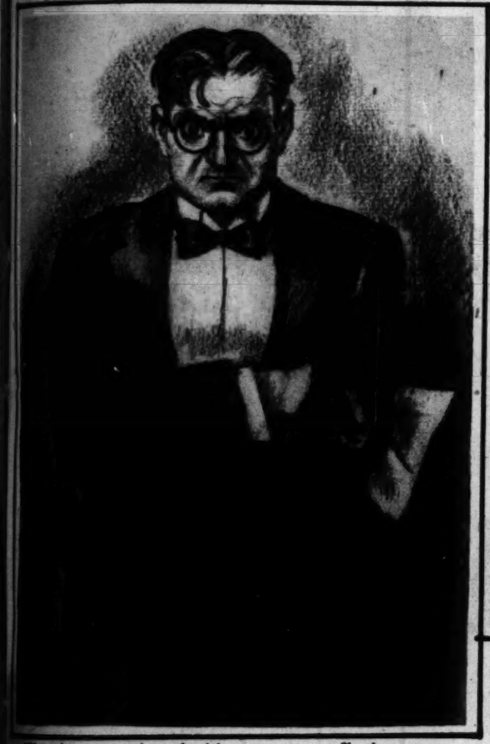


Morton had a job at the bank till some enterprising member of our Little Theater saw him and said, "As I live, Willie Baxter to the life!" So Morton was given the part of Willie in "Seventeen," and the bank will know him no more. Morton is going to New York to get a job on Broadway.

Poor Laura! Gone completely are her lines. She has skipped five whole pages of script and has thrown the others hopelessly out. The only cue she can think of is her big line in "Judge Lynch"—"I can hear them hounds, listen!" But that's no use to a Milne play.

Laurence is cast this week for the nit wit in "John Ferguson." He specializes in idiot boys, dolts, monsters, and yokels who need glandular treatment.

Just two Little Theater actors being awfully English in the Milne play. We'll wager that one is calling the other, "Poisonous old thing!"

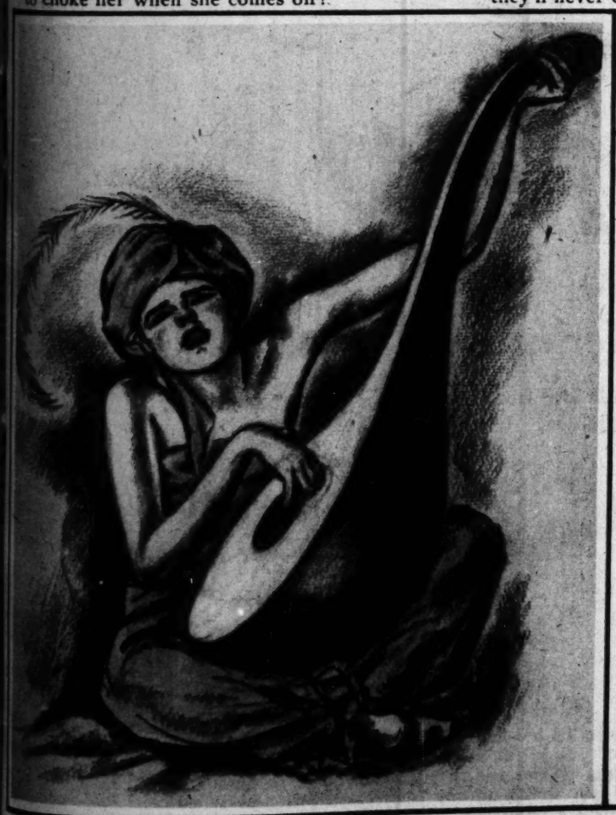


The ingenue is afraid to come off the stage. Stage fright has rendered her speechless and there seems to be nothing to do but jump into the orchestra pit. Rather that than an exit via the wings, where an irate author stands ready to choke her when she comes off!

Mrs. Lillian Loring, the lovely leading lady of our Little Theater movement, is doing Sadie Thompson in "Rain," and doing it a little more passionately than Miss Eagels did. "Because," says Mrs. Loring, "while I admire Miss Eagels' work, my conception of Sadie is on subtler lines." Mrs. Loring's in-laws have said for years that Lillian was cold-blooded and a poor housekeeper. But they'll never call her cold-blooded again!

"Lan' sakes, Marse Tom, why yo' come knockin' at de do' like dat! I'se skeered, I is!" The very low comedy colored maid, beloved of Little Theater audiences, speaks with a New England twang.

Well, well! Here's our old friend Emperor Jones, dodging the tom-toms again, this time in a Little Theater movement. The actor who does the part is achieving something of a histrionic feat, because, you see, he is one of those natural blondes with white eyebrows and china blue eyes. (The original plan was to get the colored janitor for Emperor Jones, but he objected to the costuming of the role and it fell through.)



Arthur sits at the right of the stage and lends a certain amount of pseudo-oriental atmosphere to the Dunsany playlet. He is pretending to strum the baluba, while travelers from far off Jee-Jee and Johoha pass by on their way to the city of Drool. One half the audience thinks Arthur is a girl and "kinda cute." The other half thinks he ought to be sent home to his parents and spanked.

Meet Perry, the character boy. Perry does the doddering old men, palsied misers with Bright's and Riggs' disease, and sour old bachelors who turn sweet in the last act. You should hear the quaver in Perry's voice and see his hands shake!

"'Twas moonshine that got yer ole pappy, Luke, but it hain't a-gwine ter get yew!" So says Jennie May, the North Carolina belle of the po' white trash circles, to her boy friend, Luke the moonshiner. The thunder is thundering, the lightning is flashing, and the revenue officers and mountaineers are scuttling hither and yon in the North Carolina hills drammer.

HAPPY HOLLOW

IF I CAN JUST DODGE THOSE SHARKS AND MAKE THAT ISLAND I'LL HAVE A CHANCE-

UNEXPLORED ISLAND OF THE FUTURE

OF COURSE YOU REALIZE, ANNIE, THAT YOU ARE IN NO WAY QUALIFIED TO REMAIN AT HAPPY HOLLOW SEMINARY- THAT MUST BE EVIDENT TO YOU BY NOW- SO I HAVE ARRANGED FOR YOU TO BE SENT HOME TOMORROW-

I WROTE MR. WARBUCKS BUT SO FAR HE HAS NOT BEEN COURTEOUS ENOUGH EVEN TO ANSWER- BUT IT WOULD MAKE NO DIFFERENCE- WE MUST MAINTAIN OUR HIGH STANDARDS HERE- SO YOU WILL KINDLY PACK UP AT ONCE-

LEAPIN' LIZARDS! CANNED!!!

DIDJA HEAR THAT, SANDY? SHE'S GIVEN ME TH' GATE- COURSE "DADDY" DIDN'T ANSWER HER LETTER- HE'S ON HIS WAY TO CHINA- BUT THAT'S NONE O' HER BUSINESS-

BOO! HOO!! HOO!!! NOTHIN' BUT TROUBLE SINCE I CAME TO THIS OLD PLACE- EVER'THING'S GONE BLOOIE- BOO-HOO- HOO!!!

'TISN'T THAT I CARE SO MUCH 'BOUT LEAVIN'- IT'S JUST KNOWIN' I'VE FAILED- THAT'S WHAT HURTS- HERE I WAS GOIN' TO MAKE GOOD AN' SHOW 'EM ALL BUT I'VE FALLEN DOWN-

WELL- IF I'M OUT O' HERE NOW I GUESS I DON'T HAVE TO MIND HER ANY MORE- THERE- AN' YOU'LL NEVER BE TIED UP AGAIN, SANDY- HEAR THAT? NEVER!

AN' "DADDY" HAD SO MANY PLANS FOR ME AN' WAS SO PROUD I WAS GOIN' TO A SWELL SCHOOL- BUT HERE I GET KICKED OUT AN' SENT HOME-

COURSE HE'S AWAY NOW AN' WON'T KNOW IT FOR A LONG TIME BUT IT'LL JUST BREAK HIS POOR OLD HEART WHEN HE DOES FIND OUT-

DARNED, STUCK-UP OLD OWL- JUST CAUSE I WASN'T ALWAYS RICH WHAT RIGHT'S SHE GOT TO JUMP ALL OVER ME?

LOOK AT 'EM ALL OUT THERE SKATIN'- THEY'VE ALL GOT FOLKS AN' THEY'VE ALWAYS HAD THINGS SOFT- THEY'RE "LITTLE LADIES"- I'M JUST "THAT HOODLUM"- BUT THEY ARE NICE KIDS AND THEY'VE BEEN NICE TO ME-

BUT I'M NOT LIKE THEY ARE- THEY KNOW IT AN' I KNOW IT NOW- THEY'VE BEEN RAISED CAREFUL- I JUST GREW UP AN' IT SHOWS, SANDY- WE'RE DIFFERENT BUT I WOULDN'T TRADE PLACES WITH 'EM-

I'M GLAD WE ARE DIFFERENT, SANDY- YUH NEVER NOTICE FOLKS THAT ARE JUST LIKE OTHER FOLKS- IT'S TH' ONES THAT ARE DIFFERENT AN' GLAD OF IT THAT REALLY GET TO BE SOMEBODY SOME TIME-

I GUESS THAT RINKEY-DINK BUNCH WILL FALL FOR THAT !!

OH BOY- WHAT A GREAT CHANCE!

WATCH ME SOCK HIM!

WOW!

I'LL KNOCK HIM FROM UNDER HIS HAT !!

NOPE - I'LL TELL YA WOT WE'LL DO — BZZZ-ZZ BZZ-ZZZ-Z-ZZ- GET ME?

YUP!

DID YOU SEE THE SAME THING WE SAW, GENTLE READER? IT LOOKS AS IF THAT NEW KID WHO MOVED INTO THE NEIGHBORHOOD IS TWINS — AND THEY BOTH LOOK EXACTLY ALIKE. NO WONDER THE RINKEYDINKS ARE NEARLY COO-COO TRYING TO CATCH HIM. PERRY AND HIS GANG DON'T KNOW THEY ARE TRYING TO CATCH TWINS. THEY'LL FIND IT OUT SOME TIME NO DOUBT, BUT MEANWHILE WE HOPE NOBODY SPILLS THE BEANS.

SOCK

THERE HE GOES AROUND TH' CORNER!

HURRY UP OR WE'LL LOSE HIM!

OUCH!

HOLY SOCKS! HOW DID HE GET IN BACK OF US?

CAN Y'BEAT IT??

THERE HE GOES! I TELL YA THAT KID IS SPOOKY TH' WAY HE CAN DISAPPEAR AN' SHOW UP SOME OTHER PLACE!

I DON'T B'LIEVE IN SPOOKS! WE WON'T CHASE HIM, BUT I'LL SHOW YA A WAY TO CATCH THAT KID!! JES' COME WITH ME!

Y'GOT TO ADMIT THAT KID IS A MAGICIAN !!

I KNEW HE'D PASS HERE AFTER AWHILE! NOW WE'LL SHOVE TH' SNOW ON HIM! I'LL SHOW YA IF HE'S A MAGICIAN !!

SH-H-NOT SO LOUD PERRY!

NOW - ALL TOGETHER - PUSH !!

GOOD NIGHT! DID'JA SEE WHERE HIS HEAD AN' LEGS WAS! I TELL YA HE'S A MAGICIAN —

GOSH - HE STRETCHED HISSELF OUT OVER TEN FEET !!

THE WANDERING BOYS, TEXAS SLIM AND SPIKE, GET IN GOOD FOR THE NIGHT

NO, BUDDIE— I AINT GOT NO HOME OR FOLKS OR ANYTHING.

GOLLY-AND YOU DON'T HAVE TO TAKE A BATH OR NOTHIN'

AFTER HAVING VOLUNTEERED TO TAKE HIS SWEETHEARTS BROTHER SPIKE AWAY TO A BOARDING SCHOOL— AND THE BOARDING SCHOOL FACULTY TELLING HIM TO TAKE THE LAD BACK AS THEY HAD ENOUGH TROUBLE. TEXAS SLIM HAS ABOUT DECIDED TO CLAIM EXEMPTION FROM FUTURE FAVORS TO SPIKE.

BY GOLLY I'M GLAD WE'RE BACK IN THE CITY AGAIN WHERE YOUR UNCLE BEDFORD CAN GET GRAYHEADED OVER YOU, SPIKE

WELL, EVERYTHING LOOKS PERFECTLY NATURAL- THERE'S OUR OLD FRIEND DIRTY DALTON.

HELLO THERE, DIRTY!

HEY, DIRTY

SAY- WHO'RE YOU CALLIN' DIRTY?

I GOT A NOTION TO RUN YOU IN.

WELL HE SURE DID LOOK LIKE DIRTY.

HECK- THERE AINT NOBODY AT HOME, SPIKE— AND THE DOOR'S LOCKED.

WELL. COMON I KNOW A WINDOW WHERE WE CAN GET IN.

SAY— WHAT'S COMIN' OFF HERE ANY WAY?

IT'S A GOOD THING WE GOT HERE WHEN WE DID BEFORE YOU CARRIED OFF THE HOUSE.

OUTSIDE OUTSIDE.

-AND WHEN I TRIED TO RUSH BACK INTO THE HOUSE THE BIG BURGLAR DRESSED LIKE A COWBOY, PASTED ME IN THE EYE.

YOU WAIT RIGHT HERE I KNOW THOSE BIRDS.

FER TH' LOVA MIKE, TEXAS, THERES THAT GUY POUNDING ON THE DOOR AGAIN - SHALL I CALL THE COPS?

WHAT— CALL THAT COP IN HERE? NOTHIN' DOIN' I'LL TEND TO HIM MYSELF.

SOP!

WELL HOW'D I KNOW UNCLE BEDFORD MOVED AWAY? HE NEVER WROTE ME ABOUT IT AND NOW WHERE DO YOU THINK WERE GOING TO STAY.

IT LOOKS LIKE THAT'S SOMETHING WE WONT HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT FOR QUITE A SPELL, SPIKE.
